Pumping iron for flag

Socorro ISD Instructional Special Ben Causey threw his weight around a little earlier this week at the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees. The former Army sergeant major flexed his muscles to lift 300 pounds of weights in a fund-raising venture to erect a 100-foot flagpole to fly a garrison-sized flag at the Socorro Student Activities Complex. The district already has raised more than $17,000 of the estimated $50,000 needed for the project that will display the nation's colors in a way to make it visible for miles around. Causey's weight-lifting effort was inspired by various per-pound pledges toward the effort.

High-steppin' Missionettes

The Socorro High Missionettes have been leaving tracks across the nation recently as they received a first-place in team kick and team prop during the Champion Dance Nationals in Orlando, Florida, as well as second and third in other categories. Jessica Rodriguez and Alex Campos, Missionette leaders, also were selected to attend the 110-member National All-Star Dance Team Convention April 3-6. They performed with the 110-member All-Star Dance Team.

Clint ISD migrant parent of the year helps out at Frank Macias Elementary

By Arleen Beard
Special to the Courier

HORIZON CITY — Every year, Region 19 and the El Paso County area school districts host a Migrant Parent Conference. This year's conference was held at UTEP on April 12.

One of the purposes of the conference is to recognize the efforts of the migrant parents for their valuable contributions to the school campuses which their children attend. Some of their contributions include several volunteer hours at the campus assisting the staff in a variety of ways.

Each school district elects an exemplary migrant parent to be recognized at the annual Migrant Parent Conference. This year's Exemplary Migrant Parent for the Clint Independent School District is Nohemi Chavira.

Ms. Chavira is a parent at Frank Macias Elementary School in Horizon City where three of her children attend. Principal Pam Howard said she is proud of the school district's choice and felt Ms. Chavira very much deserved the recognition.

When asked why she was so involved at her children's campus, Ms. Chavira responded: "It shows my children that education is very important. It also helps them get motivated to do well in school and to take it serious."

She added that she is proud of the Migrant Program and its goals. "It helps me out in various ways. It supplies my children with school supplies and also with school uniforms. Currently, I am studying for my GED and the Mi-

Other benefits of the Migrant Conference include several workshops that are informative to the migrant parents of the El Paso County area.

Horizon City hires lobbyist

By Arleen Beard
Special to the Courier

HORIZON CITY — Mayor Pat Randleel and the Horizon City Council are seeking federal monies to improve the town's industrial park due to the recent experience of significant growth. Toward that end, Council approved a contract with a lobbying firm last week.

During Executive Session at the regularly scheduled Town Council meeting on April 9, Council discussed the contract with Austin and Copelin Lobbying Services and approved the contract during the regular agenda.

This contract will become effective immediately. The terms and conditions of the agreement include a proposition to seek a Congressional earmark in the amount of $2,152,776 for Horizon City's industrial park improvements through the Agricultural appropriations bill for fiscal year 2003.

Austin & Copelin will develop a strategy for securing these funds, which includes identification of decision makers, preparation of letters to these decision makers, discussions with committee staff, monitoring committee hear-

No challengers, no contest Town of Anthony cancels election

By Don Woodyard

ANTHONY — Three Anthony Town Council members were, in effect, "elected" at its April 9 meeting.

Because Demetrio Cuellar, Orlando Garcia and Chanan Singh had no opposition in the May 4 race the election has been canceled.

Citing a town ordinance based on the election code, Mayor Art Franco canceled the vote and declared the three elected through a "Certificate of Unopposed Candidates."

The Town Council also approved the maximum monthly increase in access telephone line rates. The cost for residential customers rises slightly from 65 cents to 66 cents per line. The non-residential increase is from $1.48 to $1.50 per line. Point-to-point is up 3 cents to $2.29.

The rates, as spelled out in a letter from the state Public Utility Commission, are charged for each phone line and are based on changes in the Consumer Price Index (CPI). They are fees paid to certified telecommunications carriers, who, in turn, compensate the city.

Because of the fluctuations in the number of lines in the community, city attorney Richard Contreras said it was difficult to estimate the financial impact of the increase in rates to the city.

The Anthony Police Department offered a thumbnail sketch on its on-going battle against graffiti.

Police Chief Placido Nunez and Sgt. Lorenzo Lozoya told the council about the arrest of three men March 30 whom they described as "professionals" from Las Cruces and Albuquerque. The sergeant later showed the three bags of equipment they used. It included 30 cans of spray paint, a respirator mask plus flares used to give a scorched effect to their painting.

When they were arrested, the men were spray painting railroad boxcars along Main Street. Facilitating in the apprehension, Lozoya later said was the fact that police caught the lookout asleep.

Bidding for possible future contracts with the town, Frank X. Spencer and Associates made a presentation, outlining its services to council members. The West Texas company highlighted its services as consulting civil engineers and surveyors.

Council also voted its support for the El Paso International Balloonfest which will be held May 25-27 at Wet & Wild.

ings, and coordination of personal visits with members of Congress.

Fees for their services will include a monthly retainers of $500.00 retroactive to March and extending until the Agriculture appropriations bill becomes law. The agreement will terminate Nov. 30, 2002. If the earmark goal is obtained, Horizon City will make a payment of $25,000 to Austin & Copelin.

In other business, Town Council approved the first reading of an ordinance calling for an election on drafting a new City Charter and electing a Charter Commission.

Town Council also approved a new contract for the Oz Glaze Senior Association to manage the Oz Glaze Senior Center.

Something is missing

There is something missing: Truth and reality.

There are plenty of pretty faces, though, even some intellectual-looking ones. They're all wearing the latest fashions, have great teeth and never seem to have a bad hair day.

They have bright-sounding things to say and know just how to squint into the camera at all the right times, giving even the most immature little girlish face a sort of knowing appearance as she discusses the daily body count in the Middle East as another young person voluntarily blows himself — or herself — into smithereens.

I'm talking about TV news. It's an American tragedy.

There is something inherently discomforting about an arrogant young female news anchor who interviews a man twice her age and a thousand times her experience about issues in which she has neither first-hand knowledge nor experience and then attempts to one-up him when he doesn't give the exact answer she wants.

Too many "news channel" interviews these days are based on the interviewer verbalizing his or her opinion with their "guest" on hand simply to confirm it.

The superficiality of it all is sort of scary. Little wonder the rest of the world considers us one-dimensional, materialistic, arrogant and aggressive. They watch our news people act that way every day on our news programs.

We're way past superficial but our TV news networks don't seem to know it.

The most honest moment I've seen in TV news in recent years was that sparkling fall day when 62-year-old Tom Brokaw, sans makeup, stared wordlessly at the empty place where the Twin Towers once stood.

The superficiality of TV news was scarcely bearable over the last 20 years or so when we couldn't see the evil Genie writhing in the bottle of world events.

But the Genie is out of the bottle, our world is poised on the brink of crisis, but our news channels are caught up in a frenzy of self-promotion with slogans like "fair and balanced" while they pump the public for e-mail opinions on issues in which the average person has little or no expertise.

I've been in the media business longer than I care to discuss and one thing I learned real early: There is no such thing as an unbiased observer. The eyes and ears of any human being are a living filter and whatever is taken in will be regurgitated with a certain amount of contamination from that filter.

With this knowledge in mind, it becomes incumbent upon every member and organization within the news media to put every effort into giving all sides of the unvarnished truth to the public, right? Wrong.

It has become the norm for news organizations to gather tons of information each day, skim off the stories that have the most blood, gore, shock and entertainment content, shove them through their PC (politically correct) spin mechanism, and splash them onto television with more than a few glitzy, glaring, misleading promos, presented by an artificial face that must compete with weather blips, headlines and stock market quotes that clutter the screen like a barrel of writhing snakes.

This morning I tried to watch the President make a speech. Only moments after he began, the channel began to paraphrase his words in print on the TV screen. This from a news channel which promises to "present the facts and let you think for yourself." Whatever happened to just letting me listen to the man?

There's a really hot little news girl who gets her own glitzy promo

Reyes Reports By U.S. Rep. Silvestre Reyes

General Accounting Office asked to audit the USDA and FSA

As Chair of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus (CHC), I lead 17 other members of Congress in issues that are important to Hispanics on a national level. Due to my role as the Chair, I am a conduit for Hispanic farmers across the country who are alleging discriminatory lending and civil rights practices by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) and one of its agencies, the Farm Services Agency (FSA). The USDA claims that no discrimination has taken place, but the stories that I hear from farmers in the Texas, New Mexico, California, Oregon, and Arizona lead me to a very different conclusion. It is for these reasons that I have called for the General Accounting Office (GAO) audit.

The GAO is the investigative arm of Congress and exists to support Congress in meeting its Constitutional responsibilities. In addition, the GAO helps improve the performance and accountability of the federal government for the American people. The GAO examines the use of public funds, evaluates federal programs and activities, and provides analyses, options, recommendations, and other assistance to help the Congress make effective oversight, policy, and funding decisions.

The GAO audit that I requested asks, among other things, how much time it takes the USDA and FSA to process loans for Hispanic farmers as compared with the non-Hispanic population. According to my constituents, the slow turn around time of loans by the USDA made it impossible for them to plant their crops until it was too late. The lateness in planting the crops led to the failure of the yield, and ultimately to the default on their loans. Some of these farmers were foreclosed on by the USDA. The preliminary findings of the GAO audit seem to indicate that in pockets across the county, there indeed is delay in processing loans. Some of these areas are where Hispanic farmers allege discriminatory action.

Some of the farmers in the El Paso/Las Cruces area have lost sizable farms. I heard a story of one family farm that owned a farm since the 1950's. The entire family worked the farm and produced alfalfa, sorghum, lettuce, onions, chiles, and pecans. The USDA foreclosed on this 625 acre farm with a loss to the family of over $2.5 million in equity. In addition, the family lost credibility in the community and has been unable to re-establish a farming operation. I also heard stories of farmers losing leased land, homes, and valuable farm equipment.

On numerous occasions, I contacted the Secretary of Agriculture asking that she stay foreclosure action on farmers who have pending civil rights lawsuits against the USDA until it is determined whether or not practices by the USDA were partially or wholly responsible for these farmers defaulting on their loans. Again, the USDA claims that no discrimination has taken place and therefore is proceeding with business as usual, including

Vaccinate your infants today

Would you be surprised to learn that there is one simple step you can take to keep your children healthy? It's not a magic drug. And it won't cost you thousands of dollars. It's a very simple task and one that we all should follow: get your child vaccinated and do it on schedule.

This week marks the ninth annual National Infant Immunization Week (NIIW). Across the nation, efforts are being made to immunize more precious infants. In Texas, you will see this campaign in full swing as little red boots scoot their way across the state to promote "Shots Across Texas."

Vaccinating your children may sound like an obvious step in raising a healthy child, but life is hectic and this step is too often forgotten or put-off for far too long. Vaccinations offer the single best protection for the health of our children and our future.

In today's society, immunization is no longer a luxury, it's a necessity. We all know the old adage, "you're only as strong as your weakest link." In this case, the weakest link is the unvaccinated child.

We often forget how fortunate we are to have access to vaccinations. I have first-hand appreciation of vaccinations. You see, I grew up in a public housing complex in South San Antonio. The people living there were poor, but they provided a hard-working, labor force for the city's factories and military bases. In those days, many of today's vaccinations did not exist. Far too many children suffered serious illnesses that today can be avoided by a simple vaccination.

As Chairman of the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee, I oversee funding for the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). This important administration approves, regulates and monitors all vaccines. I have diligently worked to increase funding for the FDA. I understand that too many families are without health insurance. This is unfortunate in itself. But as we work to increase healthcare coverage, let's remember that vaccinations are still one of the best and cheapest ways to protect our children's health. They could mean the difference between life and death — especially if adequate health care is not available.

I am proud of the many parents who have helped increase immunization coverage among children in the United States. Over 90 percent of infants today receive the most critical vaccines by age two. These efforts have translated into a 95 percent reduction in vaccine-preventable deaths. This is tremendous progress, but we must work to stop any child from remaining unvaccinated. There's just no excuse.

There is no reason for any parent to delay having their children vaccinated. If cost is a concern, there are a host of resources to help. Public Health Policy wisely picks up the tab for vaccinating anyone who can not afford to pay. Parents can get more information on vaccines, by asking a local physician or calling the National Immunization Hotline at 1-800 232-2522.

Remember, there is no better way for you to protect your children from disease than by immunizing them. Protect the littlest Texans by vaccinating your infants on schedule.

The new Texas government officially accepts colonization

History of Texas Public Lands - Part Twelve

TEXAS — History repeats itself, as the saying goes, and the young republic of Texas found that the empresario system of land grants was the most effective way to populate the new nation. Our historical series on Texas public lands continues.

To bring more immigrants to Texas, the old empresario system was adopted in 1841. Congress relinquished to the president its authority to make colonization contracts after the defeat of a bill which would have located 8,000 French colonists on the western frontier. In February 1841, a law was made allowing the president to contract with W.S. Peters and 19 associates to settle 600 colonists beyond the settled area of the northern frontier. All colonists were to come from outside the Republic (most were from Kentucky and Tennessee). Heads of families would be entitled to 640 acres, single men to 320 acres. Colonists obtained the land almost without cost; the contractor received 10 sections of land per 100 families settled, and was allowed to withhold up to half the land granted to colonists as payment for surveying the land, applying for titles, and other services. Colonists had only to build houses and cultivate at least 15 acres on their grants.

A second contract with Peters raised the number of colonists to 800, and a third contract in 1842 provided additional territory. A fourth contract, made in 1843, postponed the deadline for filling the contract by three years and extended the colony's boundaries once again. The colony eventually extended from Dallas, Collin and Grayson counties on the east to Wilbarger, Baylor, Throckmorton and Shackelford counties on the west. A major problem the Peters Colony faced was the entrance of large numbers of unauthorized settlers into the colony, since Texans with headright, bounty, donation and land scrip certificates also wanted to locate in this area. Surveyors sympathized with these people and often allowed them to register their claims. The resulting conflicts led the state of Texas to cancel the Peters Colony contracts in 1852 and grant the contractors land in the semi-arid Indian country of northwest Texas. The company brought about 650 families and granted 879,920 acres.

The 1841 act allowing the president to contract with Peters was amended in 1842 to permit him to contract with other empresarios as well. Charles Mercer, Henri Castro, Henry Fisher and Burchard Miller located colonists on the frontier or in unsettled areas as a defense against Indian and Mexican raiders. Charles Mercer received an empresario contract as a result of conflict between American and English stockholders, a separate contract for 100 families. This contract itself caused controversy: the grant was partly located in the Peters Colony; and Mercer was unpopular, with a reputation as an abolitionist and a speculator. In 1848, a judge ruled that the contract was invalid. The Texas legislature confirmed the colonists' claims to 691,840 acres of land, but Mercer was not able to gain any profits from the colony.

Henri Castro, a Frenchman born in Spain, secured a contract in February 1842 to settle 600 families or single men on 1.25 million acres of land west of San Antonio. Like Austin, Castro established a successful colony at little profit to himself, using more than $200,000 of his own money to aid the colonists in any way he could. Between 1843 and 1847, Castro chartered 27 ships to bring a total of 2,134 Alsatians from France, although Texas harbors were unsafe during the Mexican War. These German-speaking farmers and fruit growers agreed to give Castro half their land in payment for settling them, but when a commissioner arrived in 1850 to issue titles, the colonists refused to give Castro the land they had earlier promised. Castro's settlers were issued 299,846 acres of land, less than 10 percent of the amount the contract allowed him to settle.

In 1842, Henry Fisher and Burchard Miller obtained a contract to locate 600 families on three million acres of land between the Llano and Colorado Rivers; settlers were to come from Germany, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark. In 1844, the terms of the contract were altered to permit 6,000 families or single men to gain grants. In the same year, Fisher sold his interest in the colony to the Adelsverein. The Adelsverein, or Society for the Protection of German Immigrants to Texas, was composed of a group of German noblemen who hoped to send settlers to Texas because their homeland was overpopulated. The Fisher-Miller grant was situated far from the coast in Comanche territory. German families were to receive 320 acres of land in the grant and single men 160 acres. The Society eventually sent to Texas 7,380 immigrants who received 1,735,200 acres of land. Many of these people did not settle within the Fisher-Miller grant but instead located at Fredericksburg or New Braunfels, two settlements the Society established as way stations on land that it bought between the coast and the grant. However, a few Germans did make a peace agreement with the Comanches and settled upon the dry and rocky soil within the Fisher-Miller grant.

The cycle repeats

Because many Texans now began to fear that foreigners were being given the best land, Texas repealed its empresario act on Jan. 30, 1844. The Republic had conveyed about 4,494,806 acres of the public domain to settlers through the empresario system, the population had increased from 38,000 to about 130,000, and land prices had risen. Although tax revenue also increased as a result of the added population, Texas still had financial problems. Conflicts with the Indians were still prevalent in some areas.

One way the Republic financed the operation of its government was by authorizing agents to sell land scrip certificates giving the owner the right to secure unappropriated land in Texas. An act passed in 1841 allowed anyone holding bonds or promissory notes issued by the Republic to exchange them for land scrip at a rate of $2.00 per acre. Land scrip was issued to obtain loans in the United States and Europe. Between 1835 and 1841, 1,329,203 acres of land were sold, giving Texas some cash, supplies and stability for its securities in the United States.

By 1845, the Republic had evolved from a nation of large landholders into one of small farmers and merchants. When the Constitution of 1836 voided all Mexican land grants made after November 13, 1835, it also voided specific fraudulent and excessively large land grants made before that date. Spain and Mexico had granted large blocks of land to individuals, but the Republic of Texas granted small amounts of land in order to settle as many people as possible.

During its 10 years as a republic, Texas distributed approximately 41,570,733 acres of land. By contrast, Spain and Mexico together had issued land titles to about 26,280,000 acres.

Because it had no money, the government depended on land to finance its operations, so land records were a significant part of the government. The land commissioner, who was responsible for keeping the records and managing the distribution of the public domain, occupied an important position.

John Borden, the first land commissioner, was appointed by President Houston in June 1837. Only 24 at the time, Borden had been a surveyor in Austin's colony and, in 1836, had laid out the town of Houston with his brother Gail. The commissioner had been directed by Congress to gather all land records, which was not an easy task: Borden had neither money, supplies nor employees. In fact, it was three months before he even had an office; he had to store the records in the homes of his friends.

San Elizario ISD considers a change in grievance procedures

By Don Woodyard
Courier Staff Writer

SAN ELIZARIO — What is purported to be an improved grievance procedure was proposed to the board of trustees of the San Elizario Independent District at its April 10 meeting.

"The current process doesn't insure prompt resolution of complaints," Dr. Gary Brooks pointed out in a presentation to trustees. Brooks is a professor of educational leadership at UT El Paso and assistant vice president for alternate academic programs.

Brooks maintains that his procedure for the resolution of employees' complaints/grievances is only one-third as long as the district's present process which he characterizes as "antiquated" and could take up to 50 days.

"It works like a charm," he stated, referring to his plan that has been in place since 1996 in the Socorro school district. "The present procedure is cumbersome and burdensome to administrators," he said. In his role as a consultant and independent arbitrator, he added that his plan, with trained mediators, relieves administrators from having to deal with complaints so they can focus more on academic matters.

As an informational presentation only, no board action was taken.

In his progress report to the board, superintendent Mike Quatrini said "all campuses are showing gains in all academic areas." He summarized: "Overall, San Elizario ISD is working well to improve in all areas. Specific focus has been on academics, morale, procedures (financial and personnel issues) and failure rates."

In his construction report, construction manager Dan Gonzalez said work on the new administration building is on track and is 75 percent complete. Changes to the glass enclosure of the building's vestibule were approved by the board.

Margarita Grijalva was honored as Employee of the Month. Fuad Abujaawayed, a high school teacher, was recognized as Teacher of the Month.

In other action, the board:

- Approved Waldo Rodriguez as election judge for the May 4 election.
- In a related matter, at the request of trustee Armando Martinez, the administration will look into moving future elections from the middle school to Borrego Elementary. He was concerned about the traffic congestion around the middle school.
- Approved a contract with the County Elections Department to conduct the election.
- Approved the disposal of six vehicles no longer needed by the district.

Texas veterans' loan limit increases while residency requirement goes down

AUSTIN - Texas Land Commissioner David Dewhurst today announced the state will now lend an eligible Texas veteran up to $200,000 for a home loan, and the Texas residency requirement to participate in Texas Veterans Land Board (VLB) loan programs will soon be reduced to one year.

Dewhurst said the new home loan ceiling follows more than two and one-half years of experience with the previous ceiling of $150,000, which was more than triple the $45,000 limit in effect when he took office. Dewhurst said raising the loan ceiling to $200,000 was in response to requests from many Texas veterans for help in buying homes, and will only have a positive impact on the program.

"Our increase in loan limits gives veterans more choices on where they can live," Dewhurst said.

Dewhurst said all VLB loan programs are funded by the participating veterans.

Dewhurst also said he was pleased

Guerrero declares candidacy for Socorro ISD trustee

EAST EL PASO COUNTY — Residents of the Socorro ISD district will be going to the polls on May 4 to select two members to serve in "At-Large" positions on the Board of Trustees.

John Guerrero has declared his candidacy for one of the positions.

"First and foremost, I would like to state that I am in agreement with the direction the current school board has taken and with the leadership provided to the board and the residents of our district by the superintendent, Dr. Don P. Schulte," Guerrero said.

"Under his and the board's leadership we have seen our school district excel in many areas," he added noting that Socorro has received "Recognized" status from the Texas Education Agency for the last three years; two elementary campuses are now rated "Exemplary," and all three of the district high schools, four middle schools and seven elementary schools are also "Recognized."

"My campaign motto is that a 'College Degree Begins in Kindergarten,'" Guerrero said. "The education of our children is without a doubt my biggest concern and goal. If elected, I will work for three groups: our children, their parents and our teachers.

"Every action that I take as a board member will reflect those goals...I will be a voice for all of our residents. I will not 'micro-manage' and most certainly will not have a personal agenda or goals that I feel should be met. I will do everything in my power to always represent (the district residents) with dignity, honesty, compassion and respect."

Guerrero said the district is progressing well in the construction of nine additional schools to meet current population growth, supported by the 1999 $120 million bond issue, and in improving district facilities including libraries, fine arts services, cafeterias, and parking lots. He said he will be a strong force to continue these improvements.

Also a strong supporter of teachers, Guerrero said he favors current district policy that makes SISD "a leader in pay and benefits for teachers not only at the entry level position but throughout the pay scale."

Incumbent wants to continue progress as Socorro ISD trustee

EAST EL PASO COUNTY — Barbara Perez Peña is a three-term veteran of the Socorro ISD board of trustees and is eager for the opportunity to serve the district once again.

"On May 4 (district voters) will have the opportunity to vote for the 'At-Large' trustee positions on the Socorro ISD Board," Peña said. "I am asking the residents of the Socorro ISD to re-elect me to a fourth term. I am very proud to serve as a board member due to the important academic gains that the district has made over the years.

"Although our district's growth rate remains a challenge, (the district) has managed to be fiscally responsible. The successes of the school district is largely due to hard working students, dedicated parents, committed teachers and administrators at all levels," she said.

Peña said it is very important for all district residents to take part in trustee elections because district activities affect everyone.

"The decisions that board members make should be based on facts and not personal agendas," she said. "For the past nine years, I have voted on several controversial issues and I always vote my conscience. Being a board member is not a popularity contest and it is a very important elected position."

Write stuff

Dear Editor:

As we approach that magical date of May 4 (election day) I wish to express my deep appreciation and gratitude for those who took time four years ago to go to the polls and vote for me for Position #4 on the El Paso County Water Authority (EPCWA).

I have tried to make certain that when those vital issues came up for a vote that I remembered to make doubly sure that the interest of the voter was uppermost in making my decision as how to vote. I shall be ever grateful for the trust you bestowed on me.

But time brings about a change and I have decided not to run for re-election as we will be soon leaving for Turkey on a permanent basis.

May I respectfully request that those of you who voted for me during the last election now please cast your vote for Bruce Truesdale Sr., one who has given freely of his time and service to Horizon City, in a number of positions, and will, if elected, be a valuable asset to the EPCWA.

I also wish to take this opportunity to express our deep thanks to the many friends we have made here and wish each of you God's richest blessings in the future. If your travels include the Black Sea area, then do give us a call and come see us.

that eligible veterans will be able to participate in VLB loan programs within a year of moving to Texas, as opposed to the previous two-year residency requirement. Dewhurst said the change will go into effect after a 60-day "rule-making" process.

He added that the VLB already had a one-year residency requirement for admission to the Texas State Veterans Homes, and lowering the residency requirement for VLB loan participation provides more consistency among the various programs.

"If a veteran has lived here a year, then he or she is a Texan as far as most state laws are concerned," Dewhurst said. "Once we were sure a shorter residency requirement wouldn't adversely affect our programs, I saw no reason to make a newcomer wait two years to participate in VLB home and land loan programs. The more participation we have from our veterans, the stronger these programs become."

Dewhurst said additional information on VLB loans for homes, land and home improvements, as well as Texas State Veterans Homes for veterans and their spouses who need long-term, skilled nursing home care, is available on the VLB Web site at www.glo.state.tx.us/vlb, or by calling (800) 252-VETS.

foreclosure actions. I contacted the White House many times and they have not become involved. The President should do everything in his power to stop adverse action against Hispanic farmers until the GAO audit is completed and the pending class action lawsuit is settled. During an almost identical case between black farmers and the USDA, it was the direct action of President Clinton that led to equitable resolution. In addition to the lawsuit by Hispanic farmers, there are other lawsuits in various stages being brought forth by women, Asian farmers, and American Indians.

Finally, later this spring, I will be participating in hearings that will bring light to the issues of discrimination and civil rights violations by the USDA against Hispanic farmers. I have asked the GAO to provide their preliminary findings to the House Agriculture Committee as part of the hearing agenda.

The pending lawsuit between Hispanic farmers and the USDA is growing in strength and numbers and now has over 200 plaintiffs with another 300 ready to join. As was once said by Cesar Chavez, an advocate of farm workers, "When you have people together who believe in something very strongly — whether it's religion or politics or unions — things happen." I think things are beginning to happen. Hispanic farmers are losing their homes, their livelihood, their land, their history, and their dignity. I am hopeful that the GAO audit and the hearings this spring will lend valuable insight into this situation and may help to spur the President and the Administration to finally become engaged in this critically important issue.

Excuse me, you're standing on my Bill Walton

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

The Portland Trailblazers are well known for being one of the NBA's most talented teams, but unfortunately they're also known as one of the NBA's dumbest.

The Blazers always seem to lose their heads at the most inopportune times. Usually the main culprit is Rasheed Wallace but last Sunday against the Lakers there were two to blame.

Scottie Pippen went totally John McEnroe during the game and threw a basketball high into the stands after a ref's call he didn't agree with. Soon after, Pippen walked by the same zebra and said the magic word, earning him two technicals and an ejection.

But a new member of the Blazers turned nasty soon after Pippen was tossed from Sunday's game...the Blazers' fans.

In a move that would have made the infamous Philadelphia and New York fans proud, the usually excitable but polite Portland crowd, fed up with what they thought was lousy officiating, began tossing Bill Walton dolls on the court.

Yes, I did say Bill Walton dolls.

The replicas of the big redhead were passed out to fans before the game as a commemoration of his and the Blazers 1977 NBA championship.

But after the fans got incensed at the referees, dozens of the Walton dolls began raining down on the Blazers' court forcing the refs to call time out.

Things calmed down after the time out but I can't help but wonder what Bill Walton, who was working the game for NBC at the time, was feeling as he saw his mini-me's crashing to the floor?

Maybe he can look at it as taking one for the team. After all, the Blazers did get fired up enough to take a 128-120 double-overtime victory over the hated Lakers.

I wonder why they didn't hand out any Marv Albert dolls?

A tale of two teams

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times," is how Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities begins.

Who knew Dickens was writing about baseball?

O.K., so he was actually writing about the French revolution, but he might as well have been writing about baseball.

The "best" as of last weekend were the Cleveland Indians who had won 10 straight en route to an 11-1 start while the "worst" were the Detroit Tigers, who had lost 11 straight to start the season.

What a contrast.

The surprising Indians lost Roberto Alomar and Juan Gonzalez last year and instead of falling on their faces, they've turned into the best team in the majors early on. The Tigers, on the other hand, are so bad they lost their manager and general manager just six games into the season.

Maybe they should change their name to the Detroit Kittens, or the Detroit Felines.

I don't know how the rest of the season will go but at least for now the Indians are the surprise of the new season and the Tigers are the embarrassment.

Don't feel too bad, it's hockey playoff time and at least Detroit still has the Red Wings.

Masterful again

They say that golf is the ultimate mind game. That it can turn the most mature gentleman into a raving maniac and the most confident individual into a shell of himself.

Now we can go one better. Tiger Woods is the ultimate mind game.

Talk about psyching out his opponents. Tiger was tied going into the final round of the 2002 Masters golf tournament last Sunday and fired an unspectacular one-under par 71.

Problem is, like they do in almost every tournament now, his closest opponents dropped to the floor and assumed the fetal position for most of the afternoon.

I mean, no golfer stepped up to challenge Woods. Not Ernie Els, not Sergio Garcia, not Vijay Singh, not Phil Mickleson.

A famous philosopher once said that most battles are won before a single shot is fired and it's the same in the PGA right now. Tiger possesses all the shots, all the savvy and all the mental toughness to break all the PGA records.

He's already the greatest golfer the game has ever seen. Now it's just a question of whether he can keep from getting bored.

All the other golfers though are staying focused and interested...hey, they have to...they know there'll be one heck of a battle for second place every week.

Canutillo Middle School track team sprints away with championships

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

CANUTILLO — Canutillo Middle School Eighth Grade Boys Track Team claimed the District 2-4A Middle School Championship and the Lower Valley Conference Championship recently to complete an amazing undefeated track season.

The eighth grade boys team placed first in each of the seven track meets that it participated in this season. Third year Coach Robert Herrera said that the team had several talented individuals and that they practiced hard every day to improve their skills.

Leading the team were performances by Ben Hernandez, who set a school record in the discus with a throw of 127 feet; Martin Ocon set a school record in the 800 meter run with a time of 2:16:06; and the 4x100 meter relay squad members — Jaime Moreno, David Centeno, Sammy Castañeda, Loren Ontiveros — set a school record with a time of 46:59.

No child left behind: Let kids chew gum in school

By Don Flood

In what may be the greatest educational breakthrough since term papers became available online, scientists in England are studying the effects of gum chewing on student achievement.

Now when I was in school, shortly after the Fall of Rome, gum chewing was The Big No-No.

Chewing gum could get you sent down to the Assistant Principal's Office, which was pretty much what Death Row is nowadays, only there was no chance for appeal.

Back then, assistant principals were generally hired on the basis of their expertise in various methods of torture, and parents were disappointed if they didn't receive full value for their tax dollars.

But this new study may bring gum chewing to the forefront of our nation's educational reform!

The test — no doubt conducted by industrious gum-chewing scientists — included 75 subjects divided into three groups.

One group chewed gum, one group didn't and one group chewed but without using gum! (Interesting concept!)

Following rigorous testing, the scientists discovered that the gum-chewing group had "fresh, kissable" breath, and they booked a room at a local motel.

Just kidding! After all, these are Men of Science!

They discovered, and I heard this on TV straight from the head guy, Dr. Andrew Scholey of the University of Northumbria in England, that chewing gum made certain "areas of the brain light up" — sort of like Rudolph's nose.

Anyway, the gum-chewers' well-lit brains helped them remember things — such as not to get involved with crackpot scientific studies.

But now I wonder, with deep regret, how much more could I have accomplished if only I had been allowed to chew gum in school.

I might have aced the SAT. I might have become a famous scientist and conducted gum-chewing research of my own.

I might have made important scientific discoveries such as the color of the universe!

Today's scientists could use some help.

A couple months ago scientists — who most likely were not gum-chewers — announced that the universe was a "pale green" or maybe even a "pale turquoise."

It wasn't the color I would have chosen for my universe, you understand, but I could live with it.

I even started picking out ties that I thought would go well with the cosmos.

(You never know when company — in the form of space aliens — might drop by.)

Now, two months later, scientists have announced that the universe isn't turquoise after all.

It's beige. That's right, beige. As in the color of that smelly old sofa your Aunt Agnes owns.

As in, UGLY.

Of course, that's the color this month. Who knows what they'll say next month:

"Today NASA scientists have conclusively proved that the universe is actually a 'vomit green.' For that reason, all planned space probes have been put on hold until scientists decide whether it's really worth exploring something that yucky."

But maybe we can figure out a way to change the color of the universe to something a little more "with it" and up to date.

I'll have a stick of gum and think about it.

Social Security: Q & A By Ray Vigil

Working 'under the table' can hurt you and your family

Would you like to take home a paycheck with no deductions? If you're working "under the table," as some people call it, you get a bigger paycheck if your employer doesn't deduct Social Security taxes. Sound good? Before you answer, think about what this means for your future.

First, it's illegal for your employer not to report your earnings to the Internal Revenue Service, and it's illegal for you and your employer not to pay Social Security taxes on your earnings.

Second, while you're not paying Social Security taxes, you're also not earning the work credits that will make you eligible for Social Security benefits in the future. So what, you ask? You're a long way from retirement.

However, Social Security is much more than retirement insurance. There also are disability and survivor benefits. Disability can happen to anyone — at any age — anytime. When you're paying into Social Security, you have a cushion of protection that could provide monthly payments for you and your family if you are unable to work. Few people have long-term private disability insurance. Every worker who pays Social Security taxes has Social Security disability insurance. If you aren't paying your Social Security taxes, then you won't have that disability insurance if you need it.

With Social Security survivor's benefits, you also have the comfort of knowing your dependents will have financial help when you die. Social Security survivor's benefits paid monthly to the dependents of a worker with an average income could have the same value as a $400,000 life insurance policy.

Now, about retirement: my advice to workers of any age is that it's never too early to start planning for retirement. Social Security never was intended to be your sole source of retirement income. While you'll need to supplement your retirement income with investments and savings, paying Social Security taxes is the first step in preparing for your retirement.

Although you may think you need the money more now, you will need it even more if you become disabled or when you retire. And your family will need it even more if you die. That's the reason you need to think twice before you decide to work "under the table."
