Taking out trash

The community service trash pick-up program through which offenders pay their debt to society is working well for Justice of the Peace Pct. 6 Ruben Lujan, who takes the project personally. "We had 17 youths, two adults, myself and Mr. Beasley from the Horizon Lions Club working. We picked up 100 bags of trash in Horizon on May 25 in five hours," he said.

Ruben Lujan

On June 15, Lujan joined a troop of some 30 kids to do trash pickup in Fabens. "We have kids constantly doing trash pickup in Clint with the City of Clint," Lujan said. "(Socorro) Mayor Irma Sanchez and I have met to start a trash pickup program in the City of Socorro this month." Lujan instituted the program after his appointment to office of JP after the resignation of longtime Judge Frank Macias, with the intent that useful activity would mean more to youthful offenders than a more negative sentence involving only fines or incarceration.

Fidgeting is good?

Today's jobs often require sitting in front of a keyboard or a steering wheel. Because of this, people often do not get the daily exercise needed to lead a healthy lifestyle. According to many experts, you can add exercise to your daily routine by performing simple exercises — or even fidgeting. Any type of movement throughout the day, no matter how small, is going to help increase circulation and burn calories. Some of the activities you can partake in during the day include sitting down and standing up several times or raising your legs repeatedly to waist level. Even try moving your arms back and forth and up and down. People often have to consciously think about engaging in physical activity. Performing these few exercises during the course of the work day will help increase that activity.

Flag project and San Elizario's Placita to honor America's heroes, dead and alive

By Dan Cedillos
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO — This year Flag Day was June 14. On this day last year we saw a nation at peace. Today, we are a nation at war. The men and women we send into harm's way differ little from the Doughboys who fought in the trenches of France, or the GI's who stormed the beaches at Normandy, or the troops who fought with blood at Korea's Chosin Reservoir or at Vietnam's Ir Drang.

Indeed, we are no different than the millions of men and women who have answered the clarion call throughout American history.

Regrettably, this year we must remember 3,000 more names on the list of our honored dead. Not all were in the Armed Forces, but some were. Each, though, was on the frontlines of the terrorist assault on America.

If our flag could speak it would say:

"I am your flag. I was born in June 14, 1777. I am more than just cloth shaped into a design. I am the emblem of the greatest sovereign na-

I walk in silence with each of your honored dead to their final resting place; beneath the silent white crosses, row on row. I have flown through peace and war, strife and prosperity and amidst it all, I have been respected. My red stripes symbolize the blood spilled in the defense of this glorious nation. My white stripes signify the burning tears shed by Americans who have lost their sons and daughters. My blue field clustered together unify the states as one, for God and Country. 'Old Glory' is my nickname and proudly I wave on high. Honor me, respect me, and defend me with your lives and fortunes. Never let my enemies tear me down from my lofty position lest I never return. Vinton's new administration, council have hands on attitude

By Don Woodyard
Courier Staff Writer

VINTON — The new Village Council in Vinton is a "hands-on" group. This is not an abstract term regarding the new administration. It is:

- Hands on the village's computers.
- Hands on the village's garbage.

This approach became clear at the June 4 meeting of the council that addressed problems it has encountered in the transition to the administration of Mayor Tony Castro, Sr.

"On the 17th day of the new government transition, we are learning a lot of things," said Mayor pro-tem Jose Alarcón. "We are attempting to tune up the system as we move forward," he added. "We are starting to formulate a plan. We are redoing the way we do business."

He indicated he has found some "discrepancies" in the system. Program files on the trash and sanitation system, he said, had been deleted on May 24. "The plug was pulled," adding that databases would have to be rebuilt.

Much of the two-hour meeting focused on handling the village's trash pickup.

Alderman Yassu Grier explained problems encountered with hauling off the trash from the 165 village residents enrolled in the program. He said that, because village employees who normally handle the trash pickup are on sick leave, their duties had been taken over by council members who are driving the trucks and picking up the garbage twice a week.

In a special presentation he outlined and compared the present monthly cost to the village for hauling trash with the cost of an automated service provided once a week by El Paso Disposal. Cost of present service is $1,381. El Paso Disposal's would be $990 per month, for a savings of $391.

Laura Soldwish, district manager for El Paso Disposal, said the company would provide 96-gallon containers to residents. Using these wheeled containers, she said, would eliminate "mess and smell." Proposed pickup would be on Mondays.

Attorney Shane English, the village's new legal counsel, suggested caution because the cost of the proposed five-year contract would exceed $25,000. He pointed out that contracts over that amount require, by law, going out to bid.

Council tabled action on the proposal until it could get more information and if there were other trash disposal companies that would submit bids. English said that if no other companies are available, approval giving it to El Paso Disposal could be justified because it might otherwise pose a health and safety problem.

Alderman Yolanda Lucero made a motion to audit the village's books "for our own protection."

While saying he wasn't against an audit as such, Alarcón said he was concerned about the cost and how an audit would benefit residents at this time. He pointed out that "answers are coming out" to financial questions as he goes through the files.

"Can we afford not to have an audit?" asked one unidentified community resident concerned about finding discrepancies in the system. "We want specifics; we don't want approximations; we don't want ballpark figures," voiced other concerned residents in the audience.

English said an audit might be premature at this time because files are in such disarray.

Lucero later amended her motion to table action on an audit and bring it back later after

Horizon officially seats newly-elected aldermen

By Arleen Beard

HORIZON CITY — Four of Horizon City's elected officials were sworn into office on June 11, 2002, prior to the regularly scheduled City Council meeting. Newly elected Aldermen are Mary Beasley, Place 1 and Ronald Baerbock, Place 2. Ms. Beasley replaced Alderman Robert Morales who did not seek re-election and Baerbock replaces Art Borst who also did not seek re-election.

Re-elected aldermen are Walter Miller, Place 4 and Bethani Sellers, Place 6. The term for all four who were sworn in runs through May 2004.

In the regularly scheduled meeting, during open forum, Karl Schairer, a concerned community member, voiced his concern regarding the status of the Horizon Police Department. He said that the current police department is good, but it definitely needs to get better.

Schairer feels the police department needs a better capacity to serve our community such as more officers. He added that the City of Horizon needs to pay the officers more and train them better.

In other business, public hearings on budget ordinance 0096 for FY 2001-2002 and the proposed rezoning of property located on the Northeast corner of Golden Eagle Drive and Darrington were held. There was no public input, therefore the hearings were closed and the 2nd Readings were approved by Council.

During other business, Council considered and took action on approval of a capital lease for the telephone system and computers and network system for the Horizon City. This would upgrade the current systems now in place. Council approved Amherst as the vendor to update these systems.

One perspective

By Francis Shrum

Let's be fair about this

I've known animal lovers all my life. I'm not one of them, but I've generally found them to be a pretty good lot.

All except for these animal-rights activists who have shot off the scale on the far side of insanity and, worse yet, are willing to engage in dramatic, sometimes criminal, activity to force their views on the rest of the world.

One of the worst offenses we could commit as kids growing up in an agriculture production environment was to mistreat an animal. We knew that they were pretty much helpless without us and it was our most honor-bound responsibility to make sure that no creature in our care went without food and water, or was maliciously harmed.

We also knew that one day we would also probably eat at least a few of them and if we didn't, somebody else was going to.

Animal husbandry is a matter of plain old common sense mixed in with a huge dose of responsibility and a healthy shot of compassion for creatures smaller, weaker and dumber than you.

I don't find any of that in the animal rights movement.

As a matter of fact, all I see is a great deal of hypocrisy, stupidity, and plain old lack of common sense.

The sad part about it is that our society as a whole has drifted far, far away from the reality of how that meal we just ate made its way to our plate. We are raising kids who believe that milk is somehow magically manufactured at the supermarket and make no connection that the cheeseburger they are slurping down used to be a living, breathing animal.

Their sheer lack of understanding of how this eco-system works is augmented by a whole genre of entertainment that grants deep and meaningful personalities to animals who simply don't possess them.

Now, I know that animals do have limited understanding. Otherwise, why would the Most Valuable Dog in the World hang her head in shame after she's jumped the fence and gone on a forbidden excursion into the neighbor's trash bin?

I know that the sweet, loving ways of pets have encouraged, uplifted and, in some cases, even saved the lives of human beings.

But I also know that a chicken is as dumb as a post, doesn't remember its mother, and has no idea it is fixing to be the main course at supper time, even if you explained the situation only moments before you took its head off.

Simply put, God gave us different animals to fulfill various purposes and they instinctively do so.

Now, I'm not trying to insult the person who chooses to love a pet chicken, but the main problem with the animal rights movement is that they paint the whole issue of human/animal interaction with one great, big stupid brush without sorting out the realities of the circle of life on this planet.

The impracticality of this viewpoint really came home to me recently while watching a film lamenting the reduction in the number of the grizzly bears. As the haunting music rose and fell in the background, we watched a grizzly wading placidly in a stream — where it promptly scooped up and devoured a trout swimming innocently nearby.

So why aren't the animal rights folks up in arms about the brutal murder of this fish? Who is looking out for its rights? Why are these people mourning the demise of the big, hairy predators with no thought to the welfare of the helpless, hapless prey?

The whole thing reeks of hypocrisy.

Animal rights activists staged a rally in Turkey earlier this month, at an event attended by pet dogs, cats, turtles, horses, donkeys, birds and rabbits — and about 1,500 people. These animal-rights demonstrators were attempting to educate the Turkish people that their thousands-year-old tradition of slaughtering animals is unacceptable.

City workers with brooms cleaned up behind the animals and provided buckets of water in the midday sun. "A flea-bitten dog has as much right to live as I do," one demonstrator's placard read.

The only problem with that is the dog can't care for itself, and I'll bet you dollars to doughnuts that the demonstrator wasn't going to haul a load of flea-bitten Turkish dogs home to his fashionable urban apartment.

Accomplished San Eli senior to attend NASC conference in Virginia

By Phillip Cortez
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO — Maritza Jimenez, who will be a senior at San Elizario High School in August, will represent District IX of the Texas Association of Student Councils at the 66th Annual National Association of Student Councils (NASC) National Conference, June 26-30 at Ocean Lakes High School in Virginia Beach, VA.

She is one of approximately 80 Texans and 1,800 student council leaders and student activity advisors attending the NASC, administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP). NASC offers leadership training at its conferences, focusing on turning student leaders into lifelong leaders.

"It's wonderful to see young people from across the country taking leadership roles in their schools as well as their communities," said Dr. Gerald Tirozzi, Executive Director, of the NASSP. "These individuals are well-trained through their NASC experiences and we have no doubt they will be the leaders of tomorrow."

Jimenez will be trained in basic and advanced leadership, communication skills, and dealing with diversity, and will participate in discussions on issues relevant to today's youth. She will hear youth and leadership experts such as Mark Scharenbroich, Harvey Alston, Kevin Wanzer, and Professor William Purkey.

"During the NASC conference, and in student activity programs across the nation, these already talented students learn to be better at motivating, organizing, training, and leading others," said Rocco Marano, Director of NASC. "Every NASC delegate can be looked upon as a role model."

Jimenez is the daughter of Pablo and Maria Jimenez of San Elizario. While at San Elizario High School, she has been Class of 2003 secretary and president and Student Council treasurer. She will serve as StuCo president for the second term when school resumes in August. She plays Alto Sax and has been vice-president of the Eagle Band. She is a member of National Honor Society and part of the school's University Interscholastic League Spelling and Vocabulary Team. She is also involved in a Communities in Schools program called Project Daisy, where she serves as a mentor to children during a summer camp. This year she is the student representative serving as Vice-President of District IX, which stretches from Anthony to Presidio.

Though district loses TEA Recognized status, Canutillo ISD optimistic about next year

By Don Woodyard
Courier Staff Writer

CANUTILLO — Trustees of the Canutillo ISD got a closer look at and updates on a key district program, TAAS scores, technology changes and the budget during its June 11 meeting.

And Superintendent Charles Hart saw green in a brief report on Bosque Road.

Dr. Pam Padilla, assistant superintendent for student performance, described funding and outlined programs and services for pregnant and parenting students to carry out the district goal that every student will graduate.

"If we don't do a good job now, it will be very costly later on," she said.

Through its Pregnancy Education and Parenting (PEP) program whose roots go back nearly 10 years, the district provides counseling, childcare, homebound education and transportation with the Eagle's Nest. In addition to helping the pregnant mother, the program also helps the fathers who often drop out of school.

Trustee Yvonne Sapien-Sanchez expressed concern that at-risk students may be more at risk if the district makes poor choices in administering the program.

"Our services are more than adequate," Padilla responded. "I am very comfortable about the high quality of the programs."

The program is funded for the 2002-03 school year.

In a later presentation, Padilla presented an overview of preliminary TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) scores, and also discussed the new TAKS (Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills) which goes into effect in the coming school year.

"The results (of TAAS) are encouraging," she said this week in a prepared statement, "although we experienced some shifts in some subject areas in some grade levels.

"Overall we maintained the standard we set in the 2000-01 school year when the district was rated Recognized..." She went on to say that the district would not be Recognized this year because of less than 80 percent passing in eighth-grade social studies.

"(However) the district expects to have at least the same number of Recognized and Exemplary schools."

In reference to TAKS, she added, "This is a test that will be a source of pride for everyone—students, parents and educators. The expectations are higher (more difficult) and broader (more subject areas tested for graduation). We believe this test will help assure that we prepare students for higher-paying jobs and the demands of the future."

Technology director Martha Veale and technology coordinator Leroy Romero briefed board members on the increasing importance and role of technology in the education of the district's young people. The new district plan addresses new federal requirements spelled out in the "No Child Left Behind" legislation.

There are 1,600 computer workstations for the district's 4,600 students, she reported. "We are accessing education on a 24/7 basis. We are moving beyond the classroom, beyond the brick and mortar," she said in her slide presentation.

Comptroller Tony Reza gave board members preliminary revenue estimates for the district.

He reported that state revenue sources budgeted for 2002 were $19.9 million, approximately two-thirds of district's $30.2 million in total revenues. This reflects an increase of total revenues to $29.8 million in 2001.

Total revenues for 2003 are expected to rise and are pegged at $30.3 million. State funding estimated for 2003 drops to $19.3 million. Estimates of local funding revenues are expected to increase from $7.9 million in 2002 to $8.3 million in 2003.

A breakdown of estimated revenues for Fiscal Year 2003, "assumes" a tax rate of $1.406268.

"We are going to have a green Bosque Road," Hart reported to board members. Hart has been working for some time with the El Paso Public Service Board to get them to improve its appearance by planting grass on land. Hart thanked businessman Tedd Richardson for his help in persuading PSB officials to clean up and seed its land.

On Friday, June 14, the San Elizario Genealogy and Historical Society, along with the Vietnam Veterans of America Chapter 574 of El Paso displayed both the U.S. and the Texas flags in the San Elizario Placita. The Texas flag was the symbol to recall the first county seat of El Paso established in San Elizario in January of 1850.

We are asking for community donations and support to continue this major flag project for San Elizario Veterans Day on Nov. 11. As of today the project has collected enough to purchase the flags that are presently on display in the Placita, but it is hoped to put flags on Socorro Road from the San Elizario Cemetery to the Placita for Veterans Day.

It is estimated that 150 flags, size three by five feet, will be needed at a cost of $10 per flag.

■ CORRECTION: A story in last week's Courier about a new high school being built by Socorro ISD gave the incorrect price of land and construction costs to build the campus. The actual package price is $28,000,000.

■ Two graduates of Socorro High School recently made advancements in their military careers. Marine Corps Lance Cop. Felix Fierro, son of Juanita and Rolando Fierro of Clint, recently received the Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal for honest and faithful service, and an unblemished record, over a three-year period. He graduated from SHS in 1998. Navy Reserve Hospitalman Ricardo Rocha, son of Rosa Castro, recently graduated from Basic Hospital Corps School at Naval Hospital Corps School in Great Lakes, Illinois. He is a 2001 graduate of SHS.

■ A ribbon-cutting ceremony to initiate the newly-constructed Marfa Lights Viewing Center will be held by Texas Department of Transportation June 21 about eight miles east of Marfa on US 67/90. The Marfa High School Gifted and Talented students originally created the concept of a viewing site for tourism. The facility includes a viewing area and restroom facilities. Information: 915-790-4341.

■ A bill has been introduced in Washington, called the Bracero Justice Act, which will allow these former guest-workers to go to court to obtain wages they say were never returned to them. Braceros were guest-workers from Mexico who were invited to the U.S. to alleviate the labor shortage after World War II. Hundreds of thousands of braceros had 10 percent of their pay deducted and placed into a savings plan that was to be payable to them upon their return to Mexico, but many workers say that this money was never repaid to them. The bill will seek to remove "technical" legal obstacles to a class-action suit by these workers, including statute of limitations, sovereign immunity, foreign sovereign immunity, and objections to jurisdiction by federal courts. The bill is supported by Congressman Silvestre Reyes.

That old saying about nice guys may come true for Mickleson

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

Over the years a number of lovable losers have crossed our path.

The lovable Charlie Chaplin never got the girl though the little tramp always won our hearts.

Growing up I could always understand what poor Charlie Brown was going through because I was going through my awkward years at the same time, but I never stopped rooting for him.

Even poor Al Bundy was very likable though he was resigned to the fact that he would sell ladies shoes for the rest of his life.

Now, when you think of a face to go along with the term "lovable loser," the mug of PGA golfer Phil Mickleson has to come to mind.

Mickleson, who has made a career of finishing near the top of almost every major golf championship he enters, did it again last week at the U.S. Open.

He finished second.

Tiger Woods, who of course won the event, has eight majors in his pocket. Mickleson has now played in 40 major tourneys without a single win.

In fact, Mickleson, who has no problem winning tournaments Tiger doesn't play in, has finished in the top three in seven major championships. Boy, talk about close but no cigar.

Mickleson would certainly be the most recognized man on the planet if he competed in horseshoes instead of golf.

It never fails, the golfing crowds are rooting louder and louder for Mickleson, who says all the right things every times he loses, but he always finds a way to put a crucial drive in the trees or three-put the 17th hole to lose the lead.

You get the distinct impression that if Tiger Woods had become an airline pilot, Mickleson would be the best golfer in the world today. But instead, Woods is playing golf and Mickleson continues to play the part of lovable loser.

Don't feel bad Phil, even Charlie Brown finally got to meet that little red-haired girl...didn't he?

Liar, liar

What the heck is going on with the memories of people applying for athletic jobs around the country? I mean if someone asks me if I have a degree from a certain college, I think I'd know the answer.

Seems some people have developed a kind of selective memory when it comes to matters of gaining employment.

What I'm talking about is the sudden influx of liars around the country who are doing their best George O'Leary imitations. You remember O'Leary, the guy who was coach of Notre Dame football for almost three days.

He was fired after school officials found that O'Leary had lied on his resume about his credentials.

Well, the Pied Piper of misinformation has paved the way for others to fall in his footsteps.

Allegheny College head football coach Blair Hrovat was forced to resign last week after stating that he received a Bachelor's degree when the truth is, he never had.

Last month, U.S. Olympic Committee president Sandra Baldwin resigned for lying about her academic credentials.

Would-be Dartmouth athletic director Charles Harris stepped down earlier this week, one day before he was to have been introduced as the school's top sports guy after admitting he submitted a resume with false academic information.

I don't know what these people thought they'd accomplish by lying on their applications. Oh, wait, I do know — public humiliation, ridicule and unemployment.

New York, New York

All the talk last week in pro baseball centered around the meeting of the Yankees' Roger Clemens and the Mets' Mike Piazza.

But this time the talk wasn't about whether or not Clemens would hit Piazza again, it was whether Mets pitcher Shawn Estes would hit Clemens, who would have to bat in this game.

Well, the answer was yes, and then no, and then yes again.

I'll explain. First, yes — Estes threw the first pitch at Clemens...right at him, no doubt about it.

Then no — Estes threw the ball behind Clemens and missed him entirely.

And then yes again — Estes finally hit Clemens...a Clemens pitch, that is, over the left field fence for a homerun in an 8-0 Mets romp.

And by the way, Piazza hit a homerun off of Clemens in the game as well.

Even though Clemens didn't feel the sting of a ball striking him in the head, the sight of both homeruns leaving the ballpark were just as painful.

Hot weather can affect your pet adversely

By Sam Mazzotta

On a recent trip to the veterinarian, I met a young man in the waiting room whose year-old collie rested on his lap.

"What's wrong?" I asked him.

"I took Lenny out for a walk yesterday. He whined all through the walk, and when we got back he started limping. He still limps a little, so I brought him in."

"Sounds like he burned his paws," I commented. The day before had been very hot and sunny.

The young man didn't believe such a thing could happen, but the vet confirmed what I had told him. The pads on the bottom of Lenny's paws were mildly burned and very sore.

Hot weather can affect your pets just as much as it affects you. If you're thirsty more often, if the sun seems burning hot, and if you wouldn't dare walk across the pavement barefoot, assume that your pet feels the same way.

Keep fresh, cold water within your dog or cat's reach at all times. You can even put ice cubes in the dish. If your pet spends the day outside, check his water dish periodically to make sure it stays full.

Bring pets indoors during the hottest part of the day. Let them out or take them for walks in the morning and evening.

To protect your pet's paws, walk him only during cooler periods over shaded sidewalks or grass. Keep an eye out for sharp objects that could also injure his paws. If a cooler walk area can't be found, purchase a set of booties designed to protect him from heat and extreme cold, and put those on before the walk.

Keep your pets well-hydrated and safe from the dangers of summer heat, and you'll all be much happier!

Fly me to the moons

By Don Flood

I've been suffering from a bad case of moon envy. Don't get me wrong, I like our moon. As moons go, it seems to be top drawer, if a little arid and lifeless.

But it's just one moon, and one moon won't cut it in the 21st century — not for a galaxy-class planet like Earth.

While I was growing up, things seemed OK in the moon department.

We had one moon, Mars had two — but way smaller, so I didn't feel too bad — Jupiter had 12 and Saturn had nine.

But things have gotten out of hand.

According to a recent story, scientists have discovered a total of 39 moons revolving around Jupiter!

And they expect to find more! Maybe as many as 100 moons!

Look, I don't mean to be petty about this. I could deal with Jupiter having 12 moons. After all, it's a big planet.

But no way do they deserve 100 moons, not while we're supposed to make do with just one.

Are we just going to sit back and let this happen?

What I propose is simple and would give NASA a clear and well-defined mission: Instead of going to Mars, we should head straight to Jupiter, round up some of their excess moons and bring them back to Earth.

This would provide many benefits:

- Boost our children's self-esteem. How do you think they feel when they find out they're growing up on a moon-challenged planet?

Fortunately, our science education is such that many kids don't know we have one moon — much less what other planets have — but most of us, sadly, eventually learn about our planet's shortcomings when it comes to natural satellites.

• Add some variety to our tidal flows. The tide comes in, the tide goes out. It's all very ordinary and predictable. Additional moons would add spice to our tides and our tide tables.

• Changing the tides might also have the benefit of causing unforeseen, perhaps even dangerous new weather patterns. This would make watching The Weather Channel far more rewarding.

• Increase the chances of solar eclipses.

Because we lack a full complement of moons, many of us go through life without seeing a full solar eclipse.

I'm not recommending we acquire so many moons that solar eclipses become a daily or even weekly event — after all, having too many moons would be a little showy for a small planet — but there's no excuse for the paltry number of solar eclipses we have now.

• As noted earlier, our moon is rather dry and dull. For all the poems and songs it has inspired, the moon remains — let's be honest — a big, cold, lifeless rock.

But what if suddenly our moon had a little competition? Might it not try a little harder? Develop some personality? Add some life to its dreary landscape?

It's worth a try.

I mean, it's not like we're going to find Jar-Jar Binks on Mars, much less any intelligent life.

Social Security: Q & A By Ray Vigil

Q. Recently there has been a lot of talk about Social Security benefits and Government Pensions. I understand that my social security benefits will be offset by the amount of my government pension. Is this true?

A. There is a provision in the Social Security Act known as the Government Offset Provision (GPO). This provision states that if an individual is eligible to receive social security spouse's benefits and a pension from a federal or state government entity, two-thirds of their government pension will be offset against their social security benefits. GPO will not apply until employment is terminated and the individual files for the government pension. For example, an individual works for the school district for 30 years. Upon retirement, she would be eligible to receive a pension from the Texas Retirement System (TRS) of $1500 a month. In the meantime her husband is also eligible to receive $1600 from Social Security. As a spouse she would be entitled to $800 a month, half of his social security benefits at full retirement age. Because two-thirds of her government pension is equivalent to $1000, her social security benefits will be offset in its entirety. She would still be eligible for both Hospital and Medical Insurance under the Medicare program at age 65. Of course she would have to pay a premium of $54 for the Part B. This offset applies to both life and survivors benefits. There will be times when an individual might not be eligible to receive social security benefits while the spouse is still alive but because survivors benefits are paid at a higher rate, you will find situations in which a surviving spouse could receive benefits after the two-thirds adjustment. There is one exemption to Government Pension Offset. If on the last day of employment an individual is in a position that was covered under Social Security and covered by the pension plan, GPO will not apply. In addition, the pension paying system must consider this joint employment time in the computation of the benefit.

In this situation, Social Security will be verifying that the position or the individual is actually covered under Social Security and the pension plan. Social Security will also verify that the employment time will be considered in the computation of the benefit. This does not mean that the earnings actually have to be included in the computation of the benefit. Individuals who have retired from the school districts and later want to return to a position now covered under both social security and by pension plan cannot be exempted from GPO.
