Girl Scouts use Sept. 11 as day to emphasize patriotism and friendship

EAST MONTANA — "In Girl Scouts we help each other out," Kimberly, a 10-year-old Girl Scout said. "We can make a difference in our neighborhood."

Kimberly, like more than 50 other girls in Troop 788 at Red Sands Elementary, in the East Montana community, has seen how her efforts have the power to unite a community.

Last Wednesday Girl Scouts showed their patriotic spirit and organized a special Sept. 11 commemoration for their school and community. More than 1,000 students, teachers and individuals from the neighborhood participated in this memorial event which included saying the pledge, singing patriotic songs and culminated in a balloon launch.

"This tragedy has helped us become more aware of our country and the community," Angie Donohoe, Troop Leader said. "The girls wanted to do something, so they used troop funds, money they worked hard to raise themselves, to purchase balloons and the supplies to make friendship knots. We wanted to thank and bring the entire community together."

And they succeeded. The girls made more than 1,000 friendship knots. These tied pieces of ribbon

One perspective

Proper observance required

I saw the Horizon Police Department in ceremony on Sept. 11.

My throat thickened a little and I felt again the gut-wrenching shock of that moment a year ago.

Then I drove on down the street. There were needs to be met, jobs to be done.

I've heard discussions on several occasions about Sept. 11 becoming a national holiday, a day of remembrance and mourning, so that people will have time off from work to stop and reflect.

Personally, I think we had better straighten our shoulders and get on with it before this very real and heart-breaking event falls through the cracks in the all-too-thin veneer of America's corporate conscience.

Sept. 11 specials on furniture, anyone? That's what we've already done on Memorial Day and Veterans Day.

Do we spend these other national holidays reflecting on the sacrifice of those who gave up life and limb in defense of this nation?

Hardly. Those have become big days to fill up the sports stadium and the shopping malls.

We've already seen one local newspaper publish a special "anniversary edition," replete with Sept. 11 advertising. They didn't give those ads away free.

The ceremonies held by most police and firefighter organizations in this nation to honor their own were very appropriate. National ceremonies in New York, Washington and Pennsylvania were equally in good taste — necessary events to help those directly involved heal.

But around the nation many mass-attended memorials took place at sporting events where people had already gathered to be entertained. Most of them stopped talking during the moments of silence — then began screaming for their team to destroy their opponent.

I hope we are careful how we teach our kids about Sept. 11 — that we don't trivialize it with a patriotic smiley face.

The hard truth is that Sept. 11 was bloody, and terrifying, and horrible. If it "woke us up" to the need to teach our kids more about our national heritage, we should be doing that quietly and sincerely on a daily basis, not in one big event on the anniversary of an enemy's successful strike.

It's not exactly something that can be recreated in Crayon.

Anyone who believes that a terrorist attack isn't going to happen again is living in a dream world. Prior to Sept. 11, 2001, most of America's inhabitants lived in an artificial bubble of security, confident that because it hadn't happened here it wasn't going to.

Well, it had — remember Oklahoma City? — and it will again.

There are nations around the world who go through experiences like Sept. 11 on a relative scale with sickening regularity. The nation of Israel must daily acclimate to the knowledge that any number of their citizens, from child to trained military combatant, may die at the hands of a terrorist.

Once it happens that many times I expect you become a little more selective about which ones will become

For Sanity's Sake

Happy camper

Dear Honey,
I'm not the person I led you to believe you married 13 years ago.

Roughing it — not washing my hair, swatting mosquitoes and wearing the same clothes for more than a week — is not, well ... my idea of fun.

It's taken me so long to admit this, and I feel as if I owe you one big apology.

Don't get me wrong. I've always believed that you would transform me into your long-dreamed-of outdoors girl. That someday I'd roll over in our tent and feel at ease with the rocks poking my ribs and enjoy the serene sounds of nature — or was that the sound of the people in the next campsite banging pots and pans to scare away the bear that happened to drop in and check out their food supply? Anyway, that outdoors girl you hoped for still isn't here. I'm afraid she may never be.

All these years I've not wanted to disappoint you. So when you propose camping trips where there's no running water, no bathrooms and only the freeze-dried food we can pack in, what did you expect me to do but smile and say, "Sure, Honey. Sounds like a blast."

But then last Christmas you handed me Euell Gibbons' book on roughing it in the wild. You looked so hopeful and giddy, as if you had just converted me to some fantastic religion, and I knew that I needed to admit I was an imposter.

As I entertained some of his suggestions, such as foraging for acorns, cattails and wild berries to cook over a campfire, I felt defeated. I have a hard enough time roasting marshmallows without burning them. Nor can I ever picture myself doing things you admire, like plucking a fish out of a stream or shooting a squirrel for our dinner.

I will never be your happy camper.
There.
It's out.

Some guys think of camping as a simple vacation. Just throw a tent in the back of the car and go, they say. I guess I always tend to complicate things because I like to bring sleeping bags, flashlights, real food, cookware, my first-aid kit, a book, and, of course, the kids need clothes.

Before I know it, the car is packed to the top and it takes three hours to unload and set up camp. Then there are meals to cook and dishes to wash, and all that dirt. When we get home it takes three days to unpack and do laundry. Perhaps I can't see the forest for the trees, but I fail to see the simplicity.

And, plus, I really like hot, running water.
I know what you're thinking — that I take my grooming a little too seriously. Yes. Bathing and brushing my teeth regularly are important to me, as is drinking water without the fear of contracting giardia. I also like eating food I don't have to forage for. I'm picky that way.

I never meant to disappoint you. But honesty is the best policy, right? So the next time you're geared up for a week of roughing it in the woods, what would you expect me to do but smile and say, "Have fun, Honey. I'll see you in a week."

Yours Truly...

Celebrating Hispanic Heritage Month

Every year an entire month is dedicated to remembering the sacrifices and saluting the achievements Hispanic Americans have made for our country. Hispanic Heritage Month is Sept. 15-Oct.15. It is a time for us to reflect on the sense of pride we share as Hispanics in our contributions, culture and accomplishments throughout history.

Hispanic Heritage Month, which Congress passed into law in 1988, provides a backdrop to recognize the many achievements Hispanics have made to our nation. In a country whose history is intertwined with Spain, Mexico and Latin America, and where diversity is what makes our nation great, Hispanics are an important group whose story tells of struggle, perseverance and triumph.

Many Americans, regardless of their ethnicity, have relatives who came to this country with little more than the clothes on their back. Like their fellow immigrants, Hispanics' pride and ambition has been woven into the fabric of America, from the days when cattle riders drove herds across the vast Southwest frontier, to today's world in which bilingual business leaders participate in the global marketplace.

Hispanics have figured prominently in every aspect of our country's history, including business, science, the armed forces, medicine, the performing arts, government, sports and entertainment. The Hispanic business community is the fastest growing sector of the small-business economy. There are nearly one million Hispanic veterans in the United States. There is no greater example of the love Hispanics have for America than the 38 Congressional Medals of Honor that have been awarded to Hispanic Americans. These achievements and sacrifices are an integral part of the rich mosaic that makes up America.

Today, Hispanics are the fastest growing population group in America, totaling almost 30 million across the nation. By the year 2010, Hispanics will be the largest and youngest minority group in the United States. We should be optimistic about the tremendous potential the future holds for us.

Hispanics historically have placed emphasis on the value and importance of solid education. It is part of our culture. In order to remain competitive, Hispanic parents realize that education is the key to success. That's why many parents make tremendous sacrifices to provide their children with the best education possible. We must continue to strive to teach our children so they will be prepared to lead our great nation in the next century.

As Americans, in order to move forward on the right path, we should look back and take stock of our rich and varied past. By knowing where we have come from, we will be better prepared for our common destiny. That is why I am proud to celebrate the influential role Hispanics have played and will continue to play in the growth of the United States of America. Adelante!

Acclimation does not equal apathy, however. I don't expect you can become too apathetic when the next bus you board may explode.

I'm afraid that America's outward emotionalism will lead to greater commercialism which will only cheapen the true heroism and the magnitude of the loss. I fear it will cloud the understanding that this kind of terror can and does and will happen all over the earth, all the time — that life comes with a price and the price is sometimes death.

Like the survivors of that horrific day in Oklahoma City, I've sometimes wondered why that event didn't evoke the same kind of national response when the horror came at the hand of one of our own. But maybe we as a nation can learn from their grace.

They remember every year, not with parades or celebrations of patriotism and national greatness, but with tears.

Then they straighten their shoulders and go on.

Clint Junior High School commemorates 9/11 heroes

CLINT — Lady Liberty made a live appearance in Clint last week. Students from Al Barcena's art classes have been studying patriotism and had a chance to show just what they have learned on Sept. 11, 2002.

The students helped create a banner that was displayed on the outside fence of the campus for all community members to see from Alameda Ave. that proudly displayed the words "Clint Jr. High and America Salute our Heroes."

Students also assisted in the creation of the platform and costume for a live Statue of Liberty. About 15 different students had the opportunity to stand on the platform during school hours Sept. 11 and portray the Statue of Liberty.

"It was a great experience to see the kids show their pride and patri-tism to the Clint community," said Barcena. "We had cars drive by honking their horns and waving with pride at our Statue of Liberty."

Eighth grade student Jodie Najera, who is pictured above as one of the 15 girls, said: "I had pride in myself because I got to be one of the Statue of Liberty girls and the freedom that the real Statue of Liberty represents makes me proud to be an American."

Longtime Horizon community booster, Karl Schairer, dies

EL PASO COUNTY — Karl G. Schairer Jr., Major retired, 83, of Horizon City, passed away on Friday, Sept. 13, 2002. He was a long time resident of El Paso and Horizon City and was a retired World War II and Korean War veteran.

His wife, Margaret O'Very Schairer, survives him. His daughter, Karla, and his parents Karl G. Schairer and Persis Martin Schairer preceded him in death.

Schairer was born in Detroit, Michigan on April 21, 1919. He attended the University of Michigan before enlisting in the United States Army. He served with the 67th AAA (Anti Aircraft Artillery) during World War II and in the North African Campaign against Rommel, as well as battles in Italy, France, and Germany. He served with the 865th AAA in Korea. He was awarded numerous commendations and battle participation awards for his meritorious service.

After retiring from the United States Army, he served as Business Manager for Providence Hospital.

Schairer also worked with the El Paso Chamber of Commerce. He was active in the community having served on the Board of Commissioners for the El Paso County Emergency Services District #1 and the Town of Horizon City Charter Commission.

Karl Schairer was a well-known and respected member of the community and his memory will be honored by all that knew him at a memorial Wednesday, Sept. 25, 2002 at 1:00 p.m. at the Church of the Incarnation in Horizon City. Interment will follow the memorial services at Ft. Bliss National Cemetery.

symbolize their Girl Scout beliefs to honor and serve the country and to unite and help people at all times. Not only did each student and teacher at Red Sands receive a friendship knot, they were also distributed to stores, churches and law enforcement throughout the community.

Richard Lopez, principal of this Texas Education Agency "Recognized" school said he is proud of the Girl Scout initiated effort that brought everyone together in the school's parking lot for the ceremony.

"I'll do anything for our kids," Lopez said. "Efforts like these connect our school and our community. It is important for kids to be involved."

The same sentiments were shared by many who participated in the memorial.

"Sept. 11 was a sad day for our country, but seeing these children come together with so much hope reminds us of how much love is in America," Rosa Martinez said.

As the Pledge of Allegiance was read followed by little voices singing the final bars to "God Bless America" there were few adults without a teary eye.

"Seeing the Girl Scouts and the rest of the children stand so proudly and solemnly was a sad reflection about the past, but at the same time it reminded our community about the hope of the future." Jacqueline Gonzales said.

And then, small hands opened, sending 1,000 balloons floating into the sky.

San Elizario ISD Remembers 9/11

SANELIZARIO — September 11, 2001 was a day in American history that will not soon be forgotten, the day terror held a nation captive under a blanket of tragedy and shock. It was the day the unthinkable happened, when two hijacked jets struck the World Trade Center towers, reducing them to nothing more than rubble and ash.

From that moment on Americans have worked hard to rebuild, not only the disastrous wreckage, but our psyches as well — one fragment at a time.

It was a day when we needed to, more than ever, be there for our children, especially our children in the San Elizario Independent School District, and we were.

And we are. District-wide, schools in San Elizario took part in special assemblies in remembrance of that terrible day in our country's history.

• Sambrano Elementary held a Patriot Day assembly on September 11, 2002 that included a presentation of colors from the San Elizario High School Color Guard, the Sambrano Choir's rendition of "God Bless America," a moment of silence and a special patriotic video produced by

Ms. Rebecca Calderon, the school's computer lab teacher.

• San Elizario High School students created posters in remembrance of 9/11 with the theme Reaching Across Borders. The posters were prominently displayed in the school cafeteria. The National Honor Society handed out ribbons to all students, who were encouraged to wear red, white and blue on 9/11. A special poem was read on the morning announcements.

• Students at Borrego Elementary took part in an American Character contest and each grade level had a special activity to do.

- 1st grade - Coloring contest
- 2nd grade - A magazine/newspaper collage of "Why I am proud of my country"
- 3rd grade - Hand Print Wreath
- 4th grade - Essay: "My Responsibility to my country, what it means to me"
- 5th grade - A poem about your country

• San Elizario Middle School had a red, white and blue dress day, where students were able to bypass the dress code in order to show their patriotic pride. A moment of silence was observed from after the announcements for roughly two minutes and from 8 – 8:06 a.m., students took part in some reflective writing. At the end of the day, the best writing from students was read over the intercom before the final bell rung. The hallways and bulletin boards were decorated in red, white and blue and the students were treated to an "All-American" lunch of cheeseburgers, fries and, of course, apple pie. Classroom activities focused on 9/11 throughout the day.

• Loya Primary students heard patriotic songs in the morning and gathered around the flagpole outside to say the Pledge of Allegiance.

• Alarcón Elementary School held a poster contest portraying the events of 9/11. Region 19 sponsored the contest. Students collected teddy bears and donated half of them to the San Elizario Fire Department and half of them to the El Paso Police Department to be used for emergency situations. The name of the project is called "I can't Bear to See You Cry" and runs through the month of September. The teddy bear collections are a tribute to the heroes of 9/11.

• Students at ExceAcademy wrote essays on what 9/11 meant to them and what they learned from the whole event. The essays were displayed near the front office. Two palm trees were planted at the campus, symbolizing the World Trade Center towers. Finally, the San Elizario Fire Department set up a display in the main hall that honored the heroes and victims of 9/11.

A-Rod is a no-brainer for MVP despite Rangers' losing record

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

The Major League Baseball season will be coming to an end very soon and the season awards will be given out — but a bit of a controversy is brewing.

It's not as important as winning the World Series but it still has national significance and possible monetary significance.

The award is the Most Valuable Player. And the question is who should get it and why.

The "why" is whether the award should go to the best player of the year or to the best player on a winning team?

The controversy is in the American League where the overwhelming choice as the best player is the Texas Rangers' Alex Rodriguez. The problem is that the Rangers have a losing record.

Some voters for the award say that the MVP should only go to a player from a winning team regardless of how good any other guy is.

So who are the best players on winning teams in the American League? Let's see, the Yankees have Alfonso Soriano and Jason Giambi. The Oakland A's have Miguel Tejada, the Minnesota Twins have Torii Hunter and the California Angels have Garrett Anderson.

All are having good seasons but Rodriguez will finish the season with close to 60 home runs, 200 hits, 130 RBIs and will hit well over .300.

How do you vote for anybody else?

Personally, I like for the player who had the best season to win the award. Why should the best player be penalized just because his teammates don't hold up their end of the deal?

And why should a player on a winning team automatically get the nod just because he's surrounded with talented teammates?

I say A-Rod should win the award hands-down. If someone else feels they deserve it more because of their team's success, just be happy you're on a winning team — look at it this way, you could be stuck playing for the Texas Rangers.

Show me the money

There's no secret that the world of sports has gone totally corporate.

Everything connected to a professional franchise has a corporate tag on it. After all, with all that money connected to it, it's hard to say no.

I mean whether it's the Coca-Cola half-time show, or the Walmart locker room report, or the new Whataburger campus weight room.

Heck, if I could I'd wear my CitiCorp T-shirt to work everyday.

But just how far will a corporation go to get their name in the public eye? Evidently the sky's the limit.

Take the St. Petersburg Times for instance. This is a company that wants its name out there and nothing is going to get in the way — not even $33 million.

Yes, the St. Petersburg Times is paying $33 million to put its name on a hockey arena. And I bet you think you overpaid for that special buy you made last week.

Seems the St. Petersburg Times wanted to rename the home of the NHL's Tampa Bay Lightning, the Ice Palace, to the St. Pete Times Forum.

The paper will pay $2.1 million the first year with three percent increases over the next 12 years.

I don't know if the added exposure of having its name on the stadium's facade will help the newspaper but I'd sure hate to pay their advertising rates over the next 10 years.

Moss the mouth

Randy Moss had the audacity to say last week that if he were the team leader over the last four years that his Vikings would have won a Super Bowl by now.

This comes from the guy who admitted that he doesn't always go all out during the game and that he takes curtain plays "off" during a game.

That sure sounds like a leader to me. I sure want to be part of an organization that puts out their best only about half the time.

Randy Moss is a great receiver, he's just not one of the greatest thinkers of our time.

Randy, just open your hands and shut your mouth.

Clint ISD students receive backpacks and supplies Sept. 11

By Debra Dominguez
Special to the Courier

EAST MONTANA — AT&T Pioneers, a telecommunication help group, gave economically disadvantaged students in the Clint Independent School District 200 free backpacks at 8:30 a.m. on Sept. 11 at Montana Vista Elementary in East Montana.

The gesture, which occurred the morning of the first anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on America, is one effort to teach children we can fight evil by doing good and that character counts in our nation.

The six pillars of the "Character Counts" program — morals instilled in Clint ISD children — are respect, trustworthiness, caring, responsibility, fairness and good citizenship.

The AT&T Pioneers will donate the backpacks with school supplies to fourth graders in a "high need" area based on the district's Academic Excellence Indicator System Economically Disadvantaged numbers. The latest AEIS report indicates that 76.5 percent of third graders, 81.7 percent of the fourth graders, 83.5 percent of fifth graders and 74.9 percent of the sixth graders in the district passed the state mandated Texas As-essment of Academic Skills.

Many Clint ISD children live in rural areas that lack city services. Many have never visited a public library nor do they have reading materials at home.

The Clint Independent School District serves a student population of 94 percent Hispanic, 85.5 percent of which are economically disadvantaged, and 46.6 percent of which are limited English proficient (LEP). Of the LEP children, 39 percent are enrolled in Bilingual or English-as-a-Second Language programs according to the October 2001 Academic Excellence Indicator System.

"There could not be a better time for our students to be shown the best of human character and kindness," said Clint ISD Interim Superintendent Ken George. "These children can only benefit from what they are receiving to help them study at home and in the classroom, and even more so, by learning what they have about good, human character from the AT&T Pioneers."

The entire 4th grade will receive backpacks, approximately 140 students.

The remainder of the backpacks will be divided between the rest of Clint ISD's elementary campuses. They will be given to the campus counselors for distribution to "high need" students.

Canutillo ISD approves budget for 2002-2003

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

UPPER VALLEY — Canutillo Independent School District Board of Trustees approved a $35 million budget for the 2002-2003 school year during a special board meeting Aug. 27.

The new budget includes $31.5 million for maintenance and operation and $3.5 for debt service. It is approximately $1.2 million more than last year's total budget.

"The increase is necessary to fund the district's salary compensation plan for teachers and auxiliary personnel. The District also budgeted an additional $340,000 for health care and new faculty and staff positions to accommodate student population growth," said Tony Reza, CISD comptroller.

The Board's next move is to determine the property tax rate for the coming year. Plans are to hold a special board meeting to adopt the proposed property tax rate, at 6 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 12, at the Canutillo ISD Administration Building, 7965 Artcraft Road.

According to Reza, the administration will propose a 10 cent increase to $1.71 for every $100 of property value. If the proposed tax rate is approved by the Board, the district tax bill for the owner of an average value home of $55,879, minus a $15,000 Homestead Exemption, would be $699 a year, compared with $626 under the previous rate.

"The majority of the tax rate increase would be for maintenance and operation," said Reza. "The effective tax rate went up to $1.59, but the most a school district can go up to is $1.50, which is the state maximum. The District in a sense is losing nine cents. Furthermore, by setting the tax rate at $1.50, Canutillo ISD will be able to generate $920,000 in additional state funds, called Tier II state funding," Reza explained.

"Under the current state funding formula, the tax collection generated by a school district has a direct bearing on the amount of state funding it will receive for the next two years. As such, if a district doesn't adopt a $1.50 tax rate, the district risks leaving state monies on the table," Reza added.

Thumb people are our future

By Don Flood

When it comes to using my thumbs, I'm all thumbs. I dial the phone with my index finger, I work the calculator with my index finger.

I have become, in short, a Man of a Certain Age. Recent studies show that our society is facing a "digital divide."

Those under the age of 25 operate gadgets with their thumbs.

Those over 25, a milestone I passed just recently about two decades ago, use their fingers.

Yes, my friends, using your index finger dates you. You can get your facelifts, your tummy-tucks, your Botox treatments, but if you still operate your cellphone with your index finger, people will know.

This divide began millions of years ago, when tree-dwelling apes first began using hand-held calculators.

Soon after, they began developing opposable thumbs, which they also found useful for tasks such as: blowing up and tying party balloons — those apes were real swingers (Hah! Hah!) — picking up paperclips and, of course, closing zip-lock bags.

Later, some apes began using the index finger for rotary phones and from this line evolved the modern man of today, with his huge brain and highly developed interest in the "Anna Nicole Show."

This species, called homo sapiens (which means "ape who uses index finger for everything, including cleaning his ear"), comprises the bulk of my readers, though I like to think that mammals of all kinds may find these writings helpful and enlightening.

For the most part, these readers have been index-finger users, and this column, albeit unconsciously, has been written to appeal to their sensibilities.

But I realize that that the Young Thumb People are our future, and I will do my best to write for them as well.

Elsewhere on the science front, our busy scientists have released yet more studies, including one that answers one of the Questions of the Ages: who enjoys eating more, men or women?

(What would we do without these dedicated men and women?)

Hold on to your seats, folks: Men do!

According to the New York Observer, "The researchers also found evidence that men derive greater pleasure from feeling full after a meal than women do."

Stop the presses!

If a woman feels full after a meal, she thinks: I ate too much. I am fat. I am a cow. Now I will have to starve myself for the next 18 years.

These are not thoughts that lead to a restful digestion. A man who is full thinks: Thanksgiving.

Yes, Thanksgiving, when a man stuffs himself and then gets to watch football on TV — in others words, heaven on earth.

Which brings me to a happy thought. I am not as thumb-challenged as I thought.

Despite my advanced age, I have learned to operate the TV remote control using my thumb — it's amazing what you can accomplish when you set your mind to it — so perhaps there's still hope I can join the "with-it" Thumb Crowd.

But I wish I hadn't mentioned Thanksgiving, now I'm getting hungry.

Social Security: Q & A By Ray Vigil

Q: Why do I keep hearing different ages for Social Security retirement? I always thought the retirement age was 65, but a friend told me he will have to be age 66 for full retirement benefits. Please clear this up for me.

A: Because of longer life expectancies, Congress changed the Social Security law to gradually increase the full retirement age. In 2003, for example, people must be 65 years and 2 months old to receive full retirement benefits, and the age will continue rising until it reaches age 67 for people born in 1960 and later.

Q: I received my Social Security Statement in the mail, and it showed an estimate of my Social Security retirement benefit. Once I retire, will my benefit amount stay the same forever?

A: Once you begin receiving Social Security, your benefits will increase automatically in January, if the cost-of-living has increased. Also, if you work after retirement, your earnings also could increase your benefit entitlement.

Q: I disagree with the decision I received in the mail after my disability hearing. What is the next level to appeal my claim?

A: If you disagree with your hearing decision, you may ask for a review by the Social Security's Appeals Council. The Appeals Council looks at all requests for review, but it may deny a request if it believes the hearing decision was correct.

Q: Where can I get a list of disabling impairments for Social Security disability?

A: Disability Evaluation Under Social Security, SSA Publication No. 64-039, contains the medical criteria that Social Security uses to determine disability. It is intended primarily for physicians and other health professionals. This 205-page book can be obtained free of charge by visiting our website.

Q: I have multiple sclerosis. I applied for Social Security disability benefits about five years ago and was denied benefits because I was able to work.

My condition has deteriorated. Can I reapply for disability benefits?

A: Yes, you may reapply for benefits. Sometimes a person's condition changes after being denied benefits and the change may mean the person now qualifies for benefits.

For more information visit your local Security office, see <http://www.ssa.gov>, or call us at 1-800-772-1213. If you have any questions that you would like to have answered, please mail them to the Social Security Office, 1111 Gateway West, Attn: Ray Vigil, El Paso, Texas 79935.
