New officer

Alex Sanchez is the new Code Enforcement Officer for the Town of Clint to help curb illegal dumping and environmental damage. He has 16 months of experience with the Clint Police Dept. as a volunteer officer and is now in a paid full-time position. His position is funded by a $50,000 grant through the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ) administered by the Rio Grande Council of Governments (RGCOG). Sanchez will perform his duties from a new four wheel drive F-150 pickup also purchased with the grant. Sanchez will patrol Clint and its extra territorial jurisdiction looking for violators. Mayor Dale Reinhardt said people need to stop dumping trash illegally in and around the Town of Clint and is optimistic about the new program.

Linebacker support

Gov. Rick Perry has released the $3.8 million pledged in February to the Texas Border Sheriff's Coalition to provide continuing support for Operation Linebacker, the coalition's effort to increase manpower and equipment to reduce border crime and violence. Since December 2005, nearly $10 million has been provided to support the operation. "The sheriffs are the front lines of the fight against border crime, and I am pleased the state can support their continued fight against criminals and terrorists who wish to exploit our border," Perry said. "It has long been demonstrated that our strategy to increase manpower and patrols decreases the ability of criminal groups to operate in the region. Operation Linebacker is working and making our communities safer." In June, Perry announced that Texas will dedicate an additional $20 million in available state funds to sustain Operation Rio Grande so that funding can continue to flow to local law enforcement agencies up to 100 miles from the border. Perry has also pledged to ask the legislature to authorize $100 million in the next session to sustain border security operations until the federal government fulfills its responsibility of securing the border.

SISD's newest campus, Sgt. Roberto Ituarte Elementary, opens its doors

By Irma Flores
Special to the Courier

EAST EL PASO COUNTY — On a busy block, full of construction crews and new homes, families welcomed a new addition to the neighborhood, Sgt. Roberto Ituarte Elementary School. On Thursday, July 20, the staff at Ituarte Elementary School opened its doors to nearly 800 students.

The Socorro Independent School District's newest school, located at 12860 Tierra Sonora, offers classes from Pre-K to 5th grade.

As staff made final preparations for the first day of school, parents made their way through the new school with their children and cameras in hand. After snapping a few photos and speaking with teachers, they gave their children last minute advice and tried to console themselves as they left.

TORNILLO — Seven students from Tornillo Junior High School recently participated in the El Paso Community College Health Careers and Occupations Program (HCOP).

The federally funded program helps students learn about various health care professions and, hopefully, continue their education in order to work as a health care professional.

The HCOP Summer Camp, which took place at the EPCC Rio Grande campus, ran from June 5 to July 21. In order to be accepted into the program, students needed to submit an essay, their school transcript, and a letter of recommendation from their teacher or principal.

During the seven-week program, students were involved in academics, career counseling and presentations by local health care professionals. Also, the students were paid a financial stipend of $600. The seven TJH students who applied and were accepted into the program were: Christina

Sheriff Samaniego says he'll do his job

EL PASO COUNTY — El Paso County Sheriff Leo Samaniego says he'll continue to do his job according to law just like he always has. His comments were made in response to a second unsuccessful attempt by some members of the El Paso County Commissioners Court on July 31 to pass a resolution that would limit the enforcement of immigration laws by the El Paso County Sheriff's Office.

"The action in county court was round two of what I've seen and heard before," Sheriff Samaniego said in a prepared statement. "I stated emphatically on June 23, 2006 that we don't enforce federal immigration law. I also stated on that date that our mission is to fairly and impartially enforce all laws including the Trafficking of Persons.

It takes an act of Congress for Clint to use property

By Laura Cade
Special to the Courier

EAST EL PASO COUNTY — Clint Independent School District will soon be able to utilize additional land which was once the Ag Farm for Clint High School, thanks to legislation (HR 860) passed by the U.S. House of Representatives on July 18, 2006.

Congressman Silvestre Reyes introduced the bill, which removes the U.S. State Department's legal interest in a parcel of land currently owned by Clint ISD, allowing the school district to use this property to help meet their growing educational needs. The State Department approved H.R. 860, and the House International Relations Committee reported it out of committee favorably.

In 1933, the U.S. government granted 20 acres of land to the District. As the U.S. received the land through a diplomatic treaty and due to its location on the U.S.-Mexico border, the U.S. State Department retained reversionary interest in — or power to reclaim — the land.

The State Department's reversionary interest prohibits the district from selling the land which is outside Clint's boundaries in San Elizario, and due to local regulations, Clint ISD cannot develop land outside its geographic boundaries. Ridding the land of this reversionary interest requires an act of Congress, and Clint ISD approached Congressman Reyes to pass a bill on behalf of the district.

SISD names Hart as interim superintendent

EAST EL PASO COUNTY — The Socorro ISD Board Trustees has named Charles F. Hart, Jr. as interim superintendent while the district begins the process of replacing Dr. Robert J. Durón, who resigned after he was named superintendent of the San Antonio Independent School District.

Hart retired as superintendent for the Canutillo Independent School District earlier in January of this year. He will begin his duties as Interim superintendent for SISD this week.

The board also approved a compensation package for all employees during a special board meeting on July 25. The package adopts the state mandated scale for teachers, nurses, librarians, speech therapists, counselors and diagnosticians, which adds $2,500 to every step of the 2005-06 teacher salary scale. This raises the starting teacher salary in the Socorro District to $39,100.

The board also approved a six percent increase off the midpoint for information systems personnel and administrators and a seven percent increase off the midpoint for auxiliary and paraprofessional workers.

Going hungry

When writing about India's holy man Mahatma Gandhi, Albert Einstein's admiration of his subject was evident.

"Generations to come... will scarce believe that such a one as this, ever in flesh and blood walked upon this earth," Einstein wrote.

So when Gandhi quit eating, people paid attention.

Now according to Gandhi historians, this man engaged in numerous fastings, varying in length from one to more than 21 days.

Most Americans know what they know about Gandhi from the movie, of course, and the focus was heavily on his place in India's political history and his civilly disobedient philosophy.

But one thing I noticed about Gandhi going hungry is, even though he did go on hunger strike in protest in relation to political events from time to time, for the most part he fasted in an attempt to atone for some wrong thing done or for perceived character flaws in himself and others. Among his longest recorded fasts were one in 1924 when he went hungry for 20 days for the sake of "communal unity," and in 1932, he did about 21 days "for self purification and of his colleagues."

Now, there is this woman activist from Seadrift, Texas who runs a shrimp boat in her free time when she's not out protesting various causes.

Trust me, she's no Gandhi.

For 25 days or so prior to July 29, this 58-year-old woman has been coming daily to Lafayette Park outside the White House, protesting the war in Iraq. This woman says she hasn't eaten any food and has only had water to drink for these 25 days and has lost some 20 of her original 170 pounds.

She said as a result she couldn't walk around the block without fear of collapsing, but she still managed to get herself arrested on Saturday, along with some other companions, for blocking the entrance to the White House when England's Prime Minister Tony Blair came calling.

This woman has founded a group she calls "Code Pink," for whatever reason. They contend that the soldiers in Iraq are in mortal danger — duh! — and they should be brought home immediately. Never mind that they are voluntarily soldiers by trade and mortal danger is included in the job description.

Now, I don't necessarily agree with the war in Iraq. War, in my opinion, is among the stupidest of human behaviors. It never proves who is right, just who is dead. And I loathe the waste of one single human life.

But this woman is convinced that by going without eating she is somehow exerting pressure to get the national government to come around to her point of view.

This leaves me wondering — if the broken bodies of hundreds of slain soldiers don't change national policy, why on earth does she think her little hunger pangs and loss of a few pounds are going to do the trick?

I wonder why it is that we humans somehow figure we're so personally all-fired important that going without our supper is going to get us our way? Haven't the futile efforts of kids trying to get attention from their parents for thousands of years taught us anything?

It's kind of like that old childhood ruse of holding your breath. A hunger strike works about as well — it just takes you longer to pass out.

But this woman is a real believer. She says people in the U.S. get "freaked out" when people go on hunger strike because they think you're going to "keel over and die" after a day or two. Therefore, she said, it is an effective means of getting attention.

There's been another interesting illustration recently in the news of misplaced human pride manifesting itself in a hunger strike and this one is so ridiculous I can't help laughing about it.

Saddam Hussein is no Gandhi, either.

Somehow he figured that he was still so influential that people were going to worry if he started going hungry. Apparently he hasn't realized that without battalions of thugs to back him up, nobody really cares. Or maybe they do — I reckon there are more than a few people who wish the man had to go on a permanent hunger strike involuntarily.

As for the lady holding her breath — oops, I mean on hunger strike — in Lafayette Park in Washington, all I can say is, Ma'am, far be it from me to interfere with the exercise of your inalienable right to starve yourself. We've been given freedom in this country to choose if, when and mostly even what we're going to eat.

I just feel bad about all the folks in the world who don't have that choice because they simply don't have anything to eat.

And going hungry isn't changing too many government policies for them either.

Canutillo ISD names new principal for Bill Childress Elementary School

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

CANUTILLO — Christine Althoff was recently named the new principal of Bill Childress Elementary School, in Canutillo Independent School District. Althoff brings to Canutillo ISD 27 years of experience in the education field.

"Being principal of Bill Childress Elementary School is a nice opportunity to be part of a growing, progressive school district. I have been fascinated with watching this community grow," Althoff said.

Before joining CISD, Althoff was principal of Lamar Elementary School, in the El Paso ISD, for the past two years. She worked with EPISD since 1985 in various roles including teacher, math-science mentor, reading program assistant, professional development facilitator, and assistant principal.

"I have had the privilege of working with many fine individuals throughout my educational career, and I am looking forward to learning more here," Althoff said. She added that her emphasis for the coming year would be team building among her staff and making reading the cornerstone for all students' education.

At Bill Childress Elementary School, Althoff will head a campus that serves about 700 students and has a staff of 85 employees.

"We are indeed fortunate to have an experienced and successful educator of Ms. Althoff's caliber join our team," said Dr. Pam Padilla, CISD superintendent.

districts in El Paso County and is taking many important steps to serve their students," said Reyes. "The passage of this legislation will help them gain the flexibility they need as they continue to move forward."

The district has been pursuing this matter for about the past five years. H.R. 860 when signed by U.S. President George Bush will remove the government's reversionary interest in the land, allowing the district to sell the land. The School Board of Clint ISD will then decide how to use the funds from the sale of the land.

Sheriff's Office. We accomplished this task by going above and beyond what is required in terms of training and policies.

"My resolution remains the same; we will not engage in selective enforcement and will work daily to protect everyone's rights. We will continue to enforce all laws impartially and vow to protect the constitution of the United States," Sheriff Samaniego said.

"There are some misguided and well-meaning individuals who believe that law enforcement is the problem rather than organized crime groups and gangs that prey on El Pasoans and undocumented immigrants alike. These crime groups threaten our security. I will continue my strategy of positive patrol presence to dismantle and disrupt these criminal enterprises' that prey on the less fortunate."

The resolution was brought to Court by Commissioner Miguel Teran and supported by Commissioner Larry Medina. It said that the "safety and security of all residents in El Paso County... has been jeopardized by a lack of clear policy guidance regarding the enforcement of federal civil immigration law by local law enforcement agencies."

It further stated that it was important to gain the trust of immigrant residents so that "all communities" feel safe in working with local enforcement agencies, and further, that for local law enforcement agents to act as immigration agents would place an undue burden on taxpayers. It attempted to mandate that county agents "shall not single out individuals for legal scrutiny based solely on their country of origin, religion, etc., and that the immigration status of any person assisted by the county — be they crime victim, witness or other — not be questioned by law enforcement.

Exploring our Texas National Parks

This July we have been celebrating National Parks and Recreation Month. Summer is the perfect time to gather the family together and visit Texas' numerous national parks and historic sites. My congressional district boasts several incredible National Park Service sites. Big Bend National Park, Amistad National Recreation Area, Fort Davis National Historic Site, and Guadalupe Mountains National Park are all exciting locations to explore with your family.

Big Bend National Park

Covering more than 1,250 square miles, Big Bend National Park is the largest protected area of Chihuahuan Desert in the United States. Big Bend is a favorite area of many archeologists who have discovered artifacts they believe to be 9,000 years old. There are historic buildings and scenic landscapes that give visitors a glimpse into pioneer days along the Rio Grande. Due to its remote location, Big Bend is one of the least-visited national parks in the contiguous United States. However, it is a favorite park for hiking and backpacking on numerous trails including the Chimneys Trail, the Marufo Vega trail, and the Outer Mountain Loop that takes visitors on a breathtaking tour through the Chisos Mountains. Camping in Big Bend National Park is a vacation your family will not soon forget.

Amistad National Recreation Area

Situated on the United States-Mexico Border near Del Rio, where the Pecos and Devils Rivers empty into the Rio Grande River, the Amistad National Recreation Area is the place to go in Texas to cool off during these hot summers. You can participate in numerous water sports and recreational activities year-round including swimming, boating, water-skiing and even scuba diving. Your family can also enjoy picnicking and camping as well as hunting and fishing. The Amistad Dam was completed in 1969 by the International Boundary and Water Commission. "Amistad" is Spanish for "friendship," which was a major factor in the successful completion of this joint project involving a nearly a decade of work, six presidents and two nations. Whether your passion is political history or the great outdoors, Amistad National Recreation Area is a wonderful place to visit.

Fort Davis National Historic Site

At the Fort Davis National Historic Site nestled in the rugged Davis Mountains in West Texas you will find one of our nation's most remarkable examples of an Indian Wars frontier military post still in existence. Today your family can explore the twenty-four remaining roofed buildings including of five refurbished buildings that take you back to the 1880s. During the mid to late 19th Century Fort Davis was a strategic stronghold for the United States due to its location near the junction of several pivotal routes including the Trans-Pecos portion of the San Antonio-El Paso Road and the Chihuahua Trail. Fort Davis also holds great historical significance in the role African Americans played in the settlement of the Wild West and their service in the frontier military. Several all-black regiments including the 24th and 25th U.S. Infantry as well as the 9th and 10th U.S. Cavalry were stationed at the post following the Civil War. Fort Davis was abandoned in June of 1891 having "outlived its usefulness" according to the United States Army.

Guadalupe Mountains National Park

Located in far West Texas in Hudspeth County is Guadalupe Mountains National Park. This exciting destination features the "Top of Texas," otherwise known as the Guadalupe Peak. Towering 8,749 feet in elevation, this remarkable tourist attraction has the distinction of being the highest peak in Texas. For the foliage lovers, visiting McKittrick Canyon in the fall you will see the landscape ablaze in color showcasing the stark contrast of scenic canyon, dense forest land, the dry desert. With over 80 miles of trails, your family can enjoy days on the trail backpacking, camping, or riding horseback exploring the wonders of nature. Be sure to check out the ruins of an old stagecoach station near the Pine Springs Visitor Center and discover the rich history of this West Texas treasure at the Frijole Ranch History Museum.

Whether you are looking to climb the highest peak or escape the hot Texas sun by dipping into the cool waters of the Rio Grande River, the 23rd Congressional District has several great National Parks and Historical Sites to explore.

Reyes Reports By U.S. Rep. Silvestre Reyes

Families more important than politics

Late last week — around 2 a.m. Saturday morning, in fact — the House of Representatives finished its legislative work before breaking for the summer district work period. The House considered bills affecting working families in El Paso and across the nation, but unfortunately, the House Republican leadership did not always have the best interests of those families in mind when crafting this last-minute legislation.

The House considered a pension bill that missed an important opportunity to address the U.S. retirement security crisis, as well as a minimum wage bill so weighed down with tax provisions that the Senate has signaled they will not even consider it.

Pension bill

This bill was a disappointment, especially at a time when El Pasoans are deeply worried about how they are going to pay for their retirement. It failed to slow the severe underfunding of private pension plans, it failed to shore up the federal pension insurance agency — known as the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, and it failed to encourage companies to keep offering traditional pensions to their employees. The bill will also lead to pension benefit cuts — often very deep cuts — for specific groups of people, like older workers and commercial airline pilots.

Minimum Wage

The minimum wage has not increased since 1997 and is now at its lowest level in 50 years, when adjusted for inflation. Nearly 75 percent of minimum wage workers are adults over the age of 20, many of whom are responsible for over half of their family's income. There are also 760,000 single mothers who would benefit from a raise.

In June, Democrats successfully attached an amendment to the fiscal year 2007 Labor, Health and Human Services (LHHS) funding bill to increase the minimum wage from $5.15 to $7.25. However, House Republicans blocked the LHHS bill and instead brought HR 5970, the Estate Tax, Minimum Wage, and Extenders bill, to the floor Saturday night for a vote.

Democrats have forced votes on the floor of the House of Representatives eight times during the year, and have pressured Republican leaders to hold a fair up-or-down vote on a minimum wage bill; however, Saturday night's eleventh hour package was effectively a strategy for the majority to block minimum wage legislation while providing political cover for vulnerable Republican Members. By attaching provisions to reduce the estate tax permanently and extend expiring tax breaks, the majority created a bill destined to fail in the Senate. Senate tax-writers have already rejected, on a bipartisan basis, proposals combining the estate tax with a tax extenders package.

The needs of our working families are too important for politics and partisan squabbling. We need to work together to address these pressing needs, and ensure that, throughout one's professional career and during their retirement, they are able to earn a livable wage and live with dignity.

For his teacher, Oscar Maldonado, this is part of the learning experience.

"I had one or two students who didn't want to participate in the beginning but everything worked out. They did keep asking me if they could leave every 30 minutes but they did great," said the first year teacher. "People asked me if this is what I wanted to do and it is."

For a new teacher at a new school, he's prepared for more challenges.

"I still need to figure out where some things are. I keep finding new areas of the school I hadn't seen before," Maldonado says. "But I'm impressed with the school."

The district's 36th school is equipped with the latest technology such as the interactive white boards and wireless laptops.

"Parents in this district are used to new schools and have a high expectation of administrators," said Carlos H. Amato, Ituarte Principal. Amato said the first day at this school was a bit overwhelming.

The two-story campus will share facilities with Spec. Raphael Hernando III Middle School which is expected to open in 2007. With a staff of 52, Ituarte is the first school in El Paso to be named after a Vietnam veteran. Sgt. Roberto Ituarte was an El Paso native who became a Marine and died December 1965. It was through efforts of his family, friends and veterans organizations that SISD's School Board named the school for him.

throughout the City. Prior to the system going live Redflex, the El Paso Police Department and the City of El Paso will conduct an extensive educational campaign.

■ Citizens in the Town of Clint are looking to revamp Hobo Park — to include a new name — for children 10 and under. The new park name will be Puddle Duck Park and will be furnished with new equipment aimed at young kids as funding can be raised. The area would also be fenced off. The project is being spearheaded by Sandra Reinhardt, wife of the Town's mayor Dale Reinhardt. Reinhardt estimates the project will cost at least $10,000, with the fencing alone running $3,000 to $3,500. Donations can be sent care of Sandra Reinhardt at P.O. Box 458, Clint, TX 79836. Checks or money orders should be made to Town of Clint with a notation in the memo line indicating the money is for the park project.

■ There is an age-old tale that when a woman is mad or angry while making a chile sauce — salsa de chile — the chili sauce will be very peppery hot and spicy. The El Paso Mission Trail Association will be hosting the Rio Grande Chili War Festival on Aug. 26, 2006. There will be several chile eating contests. In particular, it will also have the "Maddest Housewife" salsa de chile contest. Any one interested in participating in this contest can 859-4653 ask for Martha Trujillo.

■ Clint High School will hold a mandatory Band Camp from Aug. 7-11 from 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at Clint High School. For more information, call 926-8000.

■ Information about smoking ordinances in Texas communities is available in an online database developed by the University of Houston and funded by the Texas Department of State Health Services (DSHS). The release of a recent U.S. Surgeon General's report concluding that there is no risk-free level of exposure to secondhand smoke has spurred a continuing increase in questions about smoking ordinances across Texas. The report concludes that secondhand smoke causes lung cancer, heart disease, sudden infant death syndrome, low birth weight, asthma, bronchitis and other serious illnesses and is responsible for tens of thousands of deaths each year in the United States. The Texas database, available at <http://txshsord.coe.uh.edu/>, contains the text of ordinances and can be used to compare policies, provide summaries and compile customized reports.

■ Canutillo High School will hold volleyball tryouts Aug. 7 through Aug. 9, at the CHS main gym. Girls in grades 9-12 interested in playing volleyball need to come prepared for tryouts at all practice times. Tryouts are from 4-7 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 7-8; and 2-4 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 9. All participants must have an updated

Landis may have taken a wrong turn during the Tour de France

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

I must admit that I was like many other Americans who lost interest in this year's Tour de France once Lance Armstrong retired.

It's like when Tiger Woods isn't playing in a golf tournament. My interest level, like that of millions of other so-so golf fans, drops about 70 percent.

But I also must admit that my interest in the bicycle race has been enhanced a bit since word got out about the champion failing a drug test.

American Floyd Landis surprised everyone on the planet by winning this year's tour.

Let's put it this way: Had any of you ever heard of Floyd Landis before the Tour de France? Me either.

And wouldn't you know. Now that all of us finally had the chance to share in this guy's national victory — it appears he's gone out and done a Barry Bonds.

According to those guys in the white lab coats, Landis failed a drug test which revealed that he had an unusually high amount of testosterone in his system.

And though that might score high with the ladies, it's a no-no in bicycle racing.

Landis has said from the beginning that he was innocent. He's declared it over and over... and over again.

In fact, he's almost done a Rafael Palmeiro declaring his innocence. And we all know how that turned out.

There will be some further test results that will either substantiate the positive test, or exonerate him.

But I've got a question or three. If he tested for an unusually high level of testosterone after the 17th stage of the race, why didn't he test for an unusually high level during any other stage of the race?

I hate to say it, and I hope I'm wrong, but it all sounds very suspicious to me.

If it turns out that Landis did knowingly take an illegal substance to help his cycling, it will be a very sad and embarrassing day for America.

Once again the rest of the world will have a chance to poke fun at the "win at any cost Americans."

And I'm afraid they would be right. America is, by leaps and bounds, the greatest country in the world, but there is this growing mentality brewing around here that it's alright to cheat if it guarantees you success and the chances of getting caught are minimal.

What happened to this country's work ethic? What happened to doing the right thing at any cost? What happened to integrity, discipline and responsibility?

And there's another thing I'd like to ask Barry Bonds, Mark McGwire, Sammy Sosa, Ken Caminiti, Ben Johnson, Tonya Harding, Lyle Alzado, Jason Giambi and even Ken Lay, Martha Stewart, and the hundreds of others around the country who have tried to succeed in life by cheating...

What happened to honor?

Ready for some football

It may be hard to believe but the start of the 2006 football season is upon us.

The Miners opened practice this week, the NFL opened training camp last week and the high schoolers get going in a few days.

And all that means a lot of things to men all around this great country.

It means tailgate parties and sports talk shows and John Madden and cheerleaders and marching bands and the wave and bratwurst and beer and Hank Williams Jr. and frozen tundra and Terry Bradshaw and foam fingers and terrible towels and the Lambeau leap and coin flips and flea flickers and the west coast offense and two-minute warnings and double overtimes and the BCS and the top 25 and winning and losing.

Oh, and for some out there who are so inclined, even a wager or two can be placed.

Whatever your preference, the start of football is here and it is without a doubt the best time of the year.

Yeah, I know what you're saying, "It's still the middle of summer, you dummy!"

I know, I know, but just the sight of these guys in their jerseys reminds me that we're only a month away from the start of regular season games.

And, of course, around here that means UTEP football, the Dallas Cowboys (except for you misguided Houston Texans fans) and the high school team in your neighborhood.

Let's face it, basketball is just a memory and baseball won't get interesting again until the playoffs in October.

So for now, it's all yours, football.

Got a second? Listen to an ad

By Don Flood

A broadcasting company is considering the possibility of one-second radio spots.

Oh, I'm sorry, that was way too much information at one time.

One!
Second!
Radio!
Spots!

For one-second spots your copy needs to be pretty punchy.

Not that it's all bad. In fact, it gives me an idea for how I might be persuaded to allow my column to be used as a marketing platform.

(Editor's note: Translation — He's yours for anything over five bucks.)

But before we discuss "one-second" column spots, let's look at product placement.

Because I am a professional columnist — who is right now enjoying a hot, steaming cup of Folger's coffee, sweetened the natural way with Splenda, the low-calorie sweetener made from real sugar — I have the ability to skillfully weave a product placement into my column without the reader noticing.

In fact, I just did. That's right! Read that last paragraph again carefully and you'll notice ads for both Folger's and Splenda.

I wouldn't be surprised — such is the power of my suggestion — if you made a mental note to buy huge batches of both products the next time you went shopping. Those ads are worth at least $50,000 a piece.

(Editor's note: I'll say one thing for Folger's, it must give you a pretty good buzz.)

And it doesn't have to be coffee. I can be using anything. In that paragraph above I could just as easily have been drinking Budweiser, applying hemorrhoid cream or changing the oil in my car.

A clever writer can seamlessly slip in any product announcement, especially if he's feeling refreshed after a bracing shower with Irish Spring soap.

But let's say you're just starting out and you don't have the money for big time product placement.

In that case, I can offer the short spots, similar to the one-second ad buys. Because they don't take as much time or skill to work into a (Big Mac!) column, I don't (Diet Coke!) charge as much.

But I still think (french fries!) they can be pretty effective.

If you're beginning to feel the beginning of a Big Mac Attack coming on, you'll have to agree.

And this is just the beginning. A Japanese company has been experimenting with something called "Smellovision."

During a movie, the seats are rigged to emit smells that match the action onscreen. A love scene, according to the news report, would be accompanied by floral scents. (Or booze and cigarettes, whatever.)

During a fight scene, I imagine, the seats would produce the overpowering smell of body odor (unless of course the actors have been shown using Irish Spring and Right Guard for Men).

And just imagine the hilarity that will ensue when this new smell technology is used to enhance those countless scenes relying on flatulence-based humor — pretty much any comedy after 1978 — where skillful placement could highlight the need for products such as Beano.

Unfortunately, current technology doesn't allow me to present smell-based advertising.

But maybe I can figure it out myself, right after a brain-stimulating cup of Folger's coffee.

Answer Page 6

Social Security Q&A By Ray Vigil

Q: I am a U.S. citizen, but recently married a woman I met while traveling in Canada. Now we are making plans to live in Canada when I retire. Can I collect Social Security benefits while living there?

A: Yes. If you are a U.S. citizen and eligible for Social Security benefits, you may receive your Social Security payments outside the U.S. However, regardless of your citizenship, there are certain countries where we are not allowed to send payments.

Q: My mother died late last month. I received a letter from Social Security saying I will have to return her benefit payment for the month of June even though she was alive throughout most of the month. Is this true?

A: Yes. To be entitled to a Social Security benefit payment for a given month, the person must be alive the entire month. No benefit is payable for the month of death.

Q: I retired last year and now realize that I could owe federal income taxes on some of my Social Security benefits. How can I arrange to have taxes withheld from my Social Security check?

A: Although you are not required to have federal taxes withheld from your Social Security benefits, many people do find it easier than paying quarterly estimated tax payments. To have federal taxes withheld, or to change your original withholding request, you will need to 1) complete IRS Form W-4V, 2) select the percentage (7, 10, 15, or 25) of your monthly benefit amount you want withheld and 3) sign and return the form to your local Social Security office by mail or in person. You may obtain IRS Form W-4V from Social Security's website or you can call the IRS at 1-800-829-3676.

Q: In a few years I will turn 62 and would like to retire. I know that legislation is gradually raising Social Security's full retirement age from 65 to 67. But does this mean the "early" retirement age will also be going up by two years, from age 62 to 64?

A: While it is true that Social Security is gradually raising the full retirement age from 65 to 67, the "early" retirement will remain at 62. So you can go ahead with your plans to retire early. Keep in mind, however, that by taking early retirement, your benefits will be reduced permanently.
