Crime Stoppers

A victim invites someone he just met to his house, which results in the victim losing his car, his wallet, and his credit cards to the suspect, making this the Crime Stoppers "Crime of the Week." On Friday, April 2, about 7:45 p.m., the victim left Chiquita's Bar, 310 E. Missouri, with a person known only as "John." At his house, the victim fell asleep and awoke a couple of hours later to find that his houseguest was gone, along with his vehicle and his wallet and the credit cards in it. When the victim reported the loss of his credit cards, he was informed that approximately $700 had already been charged to the cards at Wal-Mart on the eastside. As detectives investigated surveillance video from Wal-Mart, they discovered that the two persons who used the credit cards were not the same as the houseguest that stole them. However, the suspects using the credit cards were also seen to be driving the victim's vehicle. The houseguest named "John" is described as a white male, approximately 6'2" and 190 pounds, with brown hair, brown eyes, no facial hair, and wearing prescription eye glasses. The suspect seen in the surveillance video using the credit cards is described as a black or dark Hispanic male with a shaved head, wearing shorts, a white or blue striped shirt, and black jacket. He was in the company of a female wearing blue jeans, white tennis shoes, and a black jacket. If you have information about the identity of these suspects, call Crime Stoppers immediately at 566-TIPS (566-8477) or on-line at www.crimestoppersofelpaso.org. You will remain anonymous and, if your tip leads to an arrest, you can qualify for a cash reward.

Truck owner fined for illegal dumping

By Elhiu Dominguez
Special to the Courier

CLINT — 63 year-old Enrique Alfredo Trujillo pled guilty this month to violating the Texas Health and Safety Code by illegally dumping demolition waste on private property in Clint, Texas. Trujillo, who is a board member for the Lower Valley Water District, does business as Henry Trujillo Trucking. He pled guilty to two counts of illegal dumping, more than 5 pounds but less than 200 pounds, for a commercial purpose, in violation of the Texas Health and Safety Code § 365.012.

The offense was discovered on March 15, 2007 by TCEQ's [Texas Commission on Environmental Quality] Criminal Investigator Richard Talamantes who was patrolling the U.S. 54 Highway expansion project at Dyer. At the site, the investigator noticed trucks marked with "Henry Trujillo" on them, removing demolition waste.

Talamantes followed one of the dump trucks from the site to 1570 FM 1110 Rd., in Clint, Texas. When he arrived, he observed one dump truck had just finished unloading demolition waste into an arroyo. The truck Talamantes followed then proceeded to dispose of the demolition waste contained inside its trailer. The demolition waste contained litter as well as permissible solid waste for fill. The illegal dump site is only 1.5 miles from the Clint landfill and is across the street from the Lower Valley Water District office.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT — Richard Talamantes, a criminal investigator for the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ), was patrolling the U.S. 54 Highway expansion project at Dyer on March 15, 2007. At the site, the Talamantes noticed trucks marked with "Henry Trujillo" on them, removing demolition waste and followed one to an illegal dumping site across the street from the Lower Valley Water District (LVWD) near Clint. Ironically Enrique "Henry" Trujillo, owner of the truck, is on the board of directors for the LVWD.

On Friday, May 13, 2010, County Criminal Court #1 Judge Alma Trejo ordered Trujillo to pay a $4,000 fine plus court costs, for two counts of illegal dumping.

"Illegal dumping is a serious environmental crime which affects health and quality of life," said El Paso County Attorney Jo Anne Bernal. "The illegal dumping of demolition waste and its illegal use for filling in natural arroyos is a disaster waiting to happen because it blocks the natural flow of water after heavy rains causing flooding in the area. Illegal dumping costs taxpayers thousands of dollars every year in investigation, prosecution, and clean-up costs, moneys that we could be spending on other worthwhile projects."

The penalty for illegal dumping ranges from a fine up to $10,000, or up to 2 years in jail, or both.

To report illegal dumping, the Illegal Dumping Hotline: 1-888-6EL-PASO or call your local law enforcement agency: El Paso Police Dept. at 832-4400, or El Paso Sheriff's Office at 546-2280.

SAN ELI STARS — Receiving district-wide honors for their stellar performances were, from left, Perla Andujo, Secondary Teacher of the Year; Melanie Mendez, Elementary Teacher of the Year; and Jose Maese – Employee of the Year.

SAN ELIZARIO — On May 20 the stars were in alignment for three individuals who received top honors from the San Elizario Independent School District. Close to 100 guests celebrated the accomplishments of the employee, elementary teacher and secondary teacher of the year nominees at the district's annual Star Recognition Banquet. The event was held on a perfect spring evening at the Lancers Club where Board President Irene D. Jaquez announced the names of the three winners. Receiving district-wide honors for their stellar performances were: Jose Maese, Employee of the Year; Melanie Mendez, Elementary Teacher of the Year; and Perla Andujo, Secondary Teacher of the Year.

A total of 13 nominees were recognized for demonstrating dedication and excellence at their campus or department during the 2009-2010 school year. Among this select group of candidates, the three winners chosen excelled in five particular selection criteria which were: reliability, quality of work, initiative,

State budget deficit looms large

Hola mi gente. Last month, I shared with you some information from the upcoming legislative session regarding our budget and some viable options for balancing it. Since then, additional data has come to my attention that is not very positive.

In that article, the general estimate for a budget deficit was in the neighborhood of 10 billion dollars. Just last week, after reviewing a significant amount of data, House Appropriations Chair Jim Pitts revised the project maximum deficit to around 18 billion dollars. Needless to say I was shocked.

This is not the first time that project budget numbers changed by ridiculously high amounts. Back in the fall of 2008, we were told that there would be a budget surplus approaching 10 billion dollars. Then, shortly after the election that number turned to a budget deficit approaching the same figure that we have today. The deficit projection did eventually lower just as we convened for the 81st legislative session in 2009.

We managed to pull through that session with the assistance of federal American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA). Billions of dollars were available that helped the legislature balance the budget without too many cuts to existing programs.

We won't be bailed out by the feds this session.

The increase in the deficit is fueled mainly by two programs. Medicaid, because of a dramatic increase of indigent clients, will need an additional 2.5 billion dollars. Public education will need about 2.8 billion dollars more as well. The education portion is driven upwards because lower property values have reduced the amount of local funding. This creates a mandate for the state to increase funding. In that manner, the basic funding dollars remain level.

One facet of our economy that was positive was the stock market until the problems arose on the European continent. Rising stock prices could have contributed some relief to the Permanent School Fund thus reducing the projected deficit for education. The public employees' retirement plans would have less of a deficit. However, those ups and downs are all part of a global market.

There are still strong signs of an increase in tax revenues from sales taxes. Consumers are just starting to loosen their pocketbooks and to buy more products. This may reduce the deficit somewhat.

The bottom line is that we, the legislators, are going to have to make some tough decisions. There are programs that will need to be reduced in funding. I hope that before we take the scalpel and aim the cuts at social programs, the funding for other basically non-essential or non-health related programs are cut first. I cannot support reducing any programs that help poor communities when programs such as Courthouse Renovations are still in effect. Agencies such as the Historical Commission or the Commission on the Arts are nice but they have little impact on everyday people.

It has been the practice of the legislature to make the biggest cuts to programs that help the most in need. Hopefully, the leadership will have a bigger heart than in past sessions.

I remain your friend and public servant, Chente por la gente.

Veterans Post By Freddy Groves

Veterans' charities split $13 million

Back in May 2006, an analyst who worked for the Department of Veterans Affairs took home a laptop that contained the personal information on 26.5 million veterans. That information included disability ratings, birth dates and Social Security numbers. Of course the laptop was stolen.

Various veterans groups filed a class-action lawsuit and asked for damages, among other things.

It took a couple years, but in 2009 the lawsuit was settled for $20 million. The plan was that veterans who suffered damages would be reimbursed for their expenses, including credit monitoring, with the balance of the money going to charities.

It looks like all the tallying is complete now, and two charities are getting a windfall.

The Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund and the Fisher House Foundation are going to share in the remaining $13 million.

Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund (www.fallenheroesfund.org) was started in 1982 to "provide financial support for the dependents of United States military personnel lost in performance of their duty." The Fund also helped to build the world-class catastrophic injury rehab center at Brooke Army Medical in Texas. Additionally, it is building the National Intrepid Center for Excellence in Bethesda, Maryland, another world-class facility, this one for Traumatic Brain Injury.

The other recipient of the lawsuit money, the Fisher House Foundation (www.fisherhouse.org), runs the 45 houses at VA medical centers that enable the families of wounded veterans to be present and live together as a family while the veteran is getting treatment. The families stay for free. So far more than 130,000 families have been helped.

The original data theft should never have been allowed to happen. But all in all, this donation of the lawsuit proceeds is not a bad outcome.

"TIMES ARE TOUGH.... WE COULDN'T AFFORD SHEEPSKIN."

View from here By Chris Slavens

What if there were no political parties?

"However [political parties] may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things, to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious, and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people and to usurp for themselves the reins of government..."

So said George Washington, the only president in U.S. history to be elected as an Independent. Two others, John Tyler and Andrew Johnson, switched to Independent while in office, but otherwise the presidency and all levels of American government have been controlled by a handful of powerful political parties. Republicans and Democrats have dominated since the Civil War, and even the third-largest party, the Libertarian Party, wins only a small percentage of the vote in most elections.

The two-party system has effectively stifled competition, made it more difficult for the average citizen to become involved in government, and emphasized nonessential valence issues to the point of dividing the country.

We think in terms of left vs. right. Red vs. blue. "Them" vs. "us." The two-party system is needlessly divisive by forcing a wide variety of ideologies to be crammed into one of two camps, when clearly there are more than two sides to any given issue.

While many believe that Republicans will retake the federal government through victories in the 2010 and 2012 elections and immediately transform the U.S. into a limited-government paradise, it is far more likely that another two to four years of partisan bickering will ensue, until Democrats are in power once again. And so the cycle continues.

What would American government and politics be like if political parties did not play a prominent role? What if voters were faced with a ballot that listed the names of candidates, but not their respective parties? What if representatives were seated geographically, or even alphabetically, rather than by party affiliation (which practically begs for partisanship)? What if the President of the United States was not a Democrat, or a Republican, but simply an American?

It might break the cycle.

In such a system, political parties could continue to exist (banning them would violate a number of rights), but candidates would have to sell themselves to voters based on their positions, rather than lean on stereotypes and outdated myths about certain parties. "I'm a Democrat. I fight for the working man," or "I'm a Republican. I stand up for family values," would no longer cut it. Candidates' ideas would stand or fall on their own merit, rather than be tainted by association with a particular party.

What if party-line votes were eliminated? Instead of selecting an entire column of candidates of one party, some of whom they had never heard of before, voters would have to make either informed decisions about which candidates to support, or random selections.

The latter might be preferable to blind allegiance to a particular party.

Whenever the idea is brought up, elected officials invariably chuckle and refuse to address it seriously. After all, they owe a debt, and probably some favors and backroom deals, to one party or the other (or both)—which is yet another strike against the current "good ol' boys" system, in which an endless line of backs are scratched to ensure that the "right" person stays in office.

While it is not to be expected that parties will cease to be a powerful force in American politics anytime soon, it is an idea worth considering, lest we eventually be forced to choose sides in a second civil war, which might be the inevitable result of decades of Democrat-Republican mudslinging.

Hay places fifth in her first UIL state writing competition

Special to the Courier

FABENS — Fabens High School Sophomore, Natalie Hay, placed fifth at the UIL News Writing State Competition in Austin, TX last week. A first year UIL contestant, Hay beat out other 3A contestants from across the state.

“Natalie was surprised at regionals to find out she had advanced to State. She really thought her work had not been her best,” Journalism Coach Edna Pena said. “I knew better though.” Pena says she recognized Hay’s potential as a writer right after she read a personal narrative she had written for her class and encouraged her to join UIL.

“I felt so excited and mostly shocked [when I won] because I didn’t think my article was that good” said Hay. “But I went into the competition positive because I made it this far and I was ready.”

Hay plans to become a News Writer and credits her UIL success to her Journalism teacher Ms. Dominique Polonco-Rangel and her UIL coach Ms. Edna Pena. “They taught me everything I know about news writing. Ms. Pena pushed me this far and convinced me to join” said Hay. Hay also credits her family for believing in her and supporting her desire to become a journalist.

“This was Natalie’s first time competing in this event, so it’s very impressive to have her ranked fifth at the state level. And since she is only a sophomore, we’re excited to see her progress these next two years” Pena said.

The Journalism events have seen many accomplishments under Pena’s stay. Hay is Pena’s third state qualifier over the past five years. Sarah Sepulveda placed seventh in News Writing in 2007. Crystal Castro took first place and received the “Tops In Texas” Award because she beat out all other divisional first place contestants in News Writing in 2008.

Other noteworthy contestants who did well at the Regional competition in Lubbock, TX, this year were Elijah Bidwell who placed 6th in Poetry, Alejandra Salinas who is the Alternate for Calculator Applications, and Sara Renteria who placed 6th in Ready Writing.

Milton Bradley has a tough time playing a kid's game

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

Through the ages, professional athletes have come in all shapes, sizes and mental states.

Some athletes are just too dumb to know the difference between right and wrong – some just don't care.

Some have spent their lifetime running from the law and now that they have oodles of money, they feel even more empowered.

And still others come into their league as good guys but succumb to the negative influences huge amounts of money can attract.

And then there are those athletes with real mental problems. Athletes who, win or lose, have lost the ability to control their actions.

I'm not talking about guys like Michael Vick and Dave Bliss and Pacman Jones and Pete Rose and Lawrence Taylor and Tiger Woods and Stephen Jackson and O.J. Simson and Randy Moss and Denny McLain and Dwight Gooden and Darryl Strawberry and Mark McGwire and Marion Jones.

These are people who knew exactly what they were doing and did it anyway.

I'm talking about athletes with real emotional problems. Paranoid people who never feel comfortable in their skin no matter how much success they receive or how much money they make.

Some examples of these troubled souls include Ricky Williams, the NFL running back who never seemed to have a grip on reality once he joined the league. Drugs, quitting the league and suicide watches have headlined his career.

Mike Tyson has always had serious anger issues. Drugs, alcohol and his appetite for human ears are now his legacy. Don't think he's got issues – just look at his face.

Tonya Harding and her gang that couldn't think straight, couldn't beat an athlete on the ice – so they tried to beat her on the knee. If any of you have listened to Harding speak at any time since the incident – I needn't say any more.

Dennis Rodman was one of the fiercest rebounders the NBA ever saw – when he wasn't wearing women's clothing. Rodman's wild hair color was kind of funny, until you think about his suicide attempt.

John Daly burst onto the golf scene with his 1991 PGA championship. But he soon fell off it with his bouts with alcoholism, cigarettes, gambling, marriages, assault charges and weight problems. Daly has admitted to losing $50-$60 million on bets the last 15 years.

Now these poor souls have a new member to keep them company. And this guy is still playing professional baseball today.

He may not be a household name – oh wait, yes he is.

The Seattle Mariners' Milton Bradley has made a name for himself as an unreasonable hothead. But he may be slowly learning that despite his name – life is no game.

First of all, Bradley is regarded to be so unstable that he has played for eight different teams in 10 years. In 2004, he fled the police as they were writing up a speeding ticket against him.

He's gotten into some classic arguments with umpires, but once got so upset he threw a bucket of balls onto the field and threw one ball out toward the warning track almost starting a riot with fans at Arizona's Bank One Ballpark.

In San Diego, a fan threw a plastic bottle in Bradley's direction. He went nuts and picked up the bottle and raced from his right field spot and hurled it as hard as he could toward the first row of the stands. That was the last game he played for the Dodgers that year.

In 2005, police were summoned to Bradley's house on several occasions for allegedly slapping around and choking his pregnant wife.

Bradley once claimed all-star teammate Jeff Kent wasn't a good leader because he didn't know how to deal with black players.

There was even a time when Bradley's manager tried to physically keep him away from another umpire, Bradley fell and tore up his right knee.

In 2008 with the Texas Rangers, Bradley heard the radio broadcaster talking about his negative behavior. So Bradley left the clubhouse and raced up four flights of stairs to get to the broadcaster during the game. Fortunately his manager and general manager stopped him just in time.

When he returned, Bradley was yelling at his teammates, then he started crying and mumbled something about being misunderstood.

How can I blame Milton Bradley for acting like a spoiled little kid? After all, he gets paid $30 million to play a kid's game.

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

Kansas City making the Yost of it

When the Twin Towers were hit by terrorists, the Johnson County Administration Building in Olathe, Kan., immediately shut down for security reasons. Olathe is a suburb of about 100,000 people – roughly the size of Green Bay – and is, admittedly, a vital part of the Kansas City metropolitan region. Still, it's hard to imagine that it was on the radar of terrorists. (One could imagine the conversation in Torah Borah: "Right after we attack the World Trade Center, White House and Pentagon, we strike the Olathe courthouse.")

It's not that Kansas Citians think they're unduly important or a geographic center essential to the nation's defense like, say, a major port... they just take things a bit literally. When someone says they're "going to strike at the heart of America," due to its central location, they assume that means them. It's a stressful notion for a town that basically is content eating its strip steaks and barbecue. All the populace really wants is a winning season from the Chiefs. The bar for the Royals, once one of baseball's elite teams, has been set considerably lower.

"I'd settle for a .500 season," one fan recently told me at a game that happened to result in the team's seventh straight loss and proved to be the penultimate game for Royals manager Trey Hillman.

I can't say I wasn't advocating Mr. Hillman's departure.

Look, you can't fire the lineup. Someone has to play these games. But under Hillman, the Royals were lackluster, listless and lifeless. There was simply no intensity, and with a team full of young players that the Royals must develop quickly in order to have any chance at being a competitive team in the next few years, it was an intolerable situation.

Hillman was a nice guy, and with apologies to Leo Durocher, he finished last.

In a gambit more than likely orchestrated to show the fans in KC that the ownership would try and at least pretend they cared about winning, Ned Yost was called out of the managerial bullpen. For the Royals, the hire shows a break from their recent tradition of hiring untested, rookie managers, but it does echo the hiring of Buddy Bell, who, like Yost, came to KC with a resume of mostly losing seasons.

Yost is, by all accounts, a "player's manager" who is good with young talent. What the Royals really need is a fan's manager – and that person is someone who can win and has won before. This team needs energy, someone who can shake the barbecue sauce off; otherwise, the recent tradition of losing will remain up to date in Kansas City.

professionalism, and uniqueness of contribution.

Employee of the Year Jose Maese has worked as a custodian for the district for the past four years at Sambrano Elementary School. He was recognized for being an employee whose work performance exceeds the call of duty. Maese is an active participant in many extra-curricular functions at the campus such as parent conferences and also proudly serves as a mentor to some of the 4th and 5th grade boys who lack a positive male role model.

Melanie Mendez named Elementary Teacher of the Year has been a teacher at Sambrano Elementary School for the past three years most recently teaching 4th grade level classes. After completing her bachelor's degree and military service, Mendez applied for a teaching position in her hometown of San Elizario and has been with the district for the last five years. Mendez has also served as a mentor to teaching interns, yearbook sponsor, volleyball, and softball coach and is planning on starting graduate studies in the summer.

Secondary Teacher of the Year Perla Andujo is a composite science teacher at San Elizario High School which means she teaches a variety of courses such as biology, chemistry, and environmental science. With five years of experience as a teacher, Andujo has also participated as new teacher mentor, class co-sponsor, and UIL science coach. She helps students overcome difficulties and understand complex concepts by offering an accommodated tutoring schedule that includes Saturday sessions. Andujo is currently pursuing a master's degree in counseling.

Mendez and Andujo will now move on to represent the San Elizario Independent School District at the Region 19 Teacher of the Year competition to take place this summer.

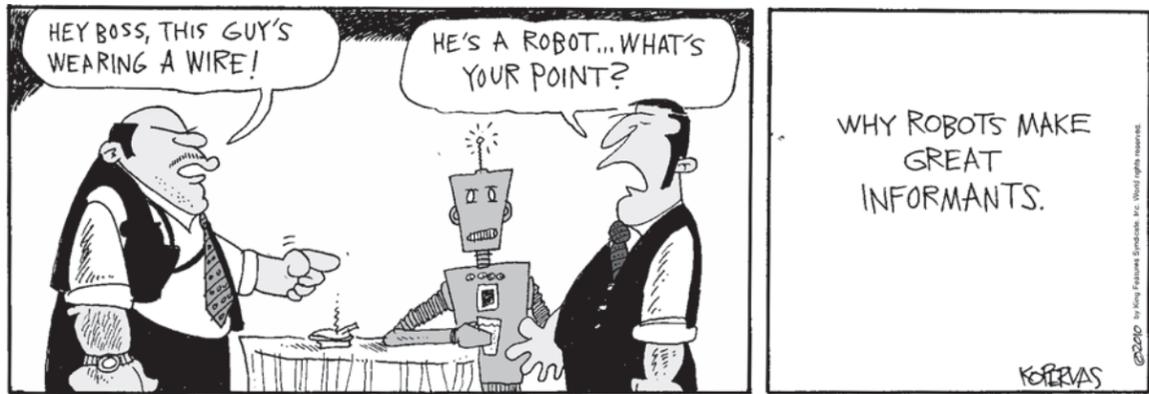

The 10 other individuals who were nominated for the district's highest achievement awards were:

Alicia Canava, Loya Primary School Employee Of the Year; Patricia Soliz, Alarcon Elementary School Employee Of the Year; Rebecca Barrientos, Borrego Elementary School Employee Of the Year; Bernice Barragan, Garcia-Enriquez Middle School Employee Of the Year; Yolanda Urias, San Elizario High School Employee Of the Year; Nancy Swanson, Administration Employee Of the Year; Reina Calderon, Loya Primary School Teacher Of the Year; Cynthia Meza, Alarcon Elementary School Teacher Of the Year; Nancy Torres, Borrego Elementary School Teacher Of the Year; and Cynthia Villarreal, Garcia-Enriquez Middle School Teacher Of the Year.

All the nominees received a special star-themed award, while the three winners were also presented with the district silver star trophy, a bouquet of roses and an award stipend. Joining Board President Jaquez in announcing the names of the winners were Board Vice-President Ramon Holguin, Trustee Jose Rodriguez, Superintendent Dr. Mike Quatrini, and Assistant Superintendent Sylvia Hopp.

Your good health By Paul G. Donahue, M.D.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Recently, my daughter attended a sweet-16 birthday party for one of her best friends. She is a beautiful girl. When my daughter showed me pictures of her friend, I was shocked. Her face and arms were deeply tanned. I have no idea how many hours she must have spent under a tanning machine. I am very concerned about her. Would you write about the dangers of tanning? — Anon.

a threat equal to the sun for promoting future skin cancer. People of all ages should protect their skin from exposure to UV light. Such exposure happens every time a person goes outdoors. Cloud cover is a poor absorber of UV rays and offers little skin protection. Sunscreen application should become a habit.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What's considered ideal pool-water temperature? In our apartment complex, we have a large pool that is so cold I rarely use it. I am getting a thermometer to measure its temperature. I would like to have a reference temperature to present to management if the water is colder than it should be. — N.U.

Ultraviolet light, the kind of light we don't see, has powerful effects on the skin. Ultraviolet A rays constitute 95 percent of the UV light that makes its way to earth. UV A rays do not burn and tan skin as much as UV B rays, but they do damage skin. They cause skin wrinkling; they dry skin; and they produce age spots (liver spots). And they also add to the risk of skin cancer.

Ultraviolet B rays are more destructive. They are the burning rays, and they have a greater effect on skin cancer production. Both A and B reduce the skin's innate immunity.

Pool water is comfortable for most when its temperature is between 82 and 86 degrees F (28-30 C). The water is cool enough to keep strong swimmers from overheating, but warm enough to keep floaters from freezing.

Exposure to both UVA and UV B injures the skin cells' DNA, and that's what sets the scene for future skin cancer. Humans have learned to cope with UV light by tanning. A tan offers some protection against further damage. UV light activates melanocytes, and they pass their melanin — a dark pigment — to other skin cells. That has the effect of providing an umbrella for the skin. However beneficial that might be, the fact remains that in obtaining a modicum of protection with a tan, skin-cell DNA has been dealt a major blow.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What's the purpose of ear wax? I seem to produce tons of it. I can't find an answer to this question, so I thought I would write to you. — C.N.

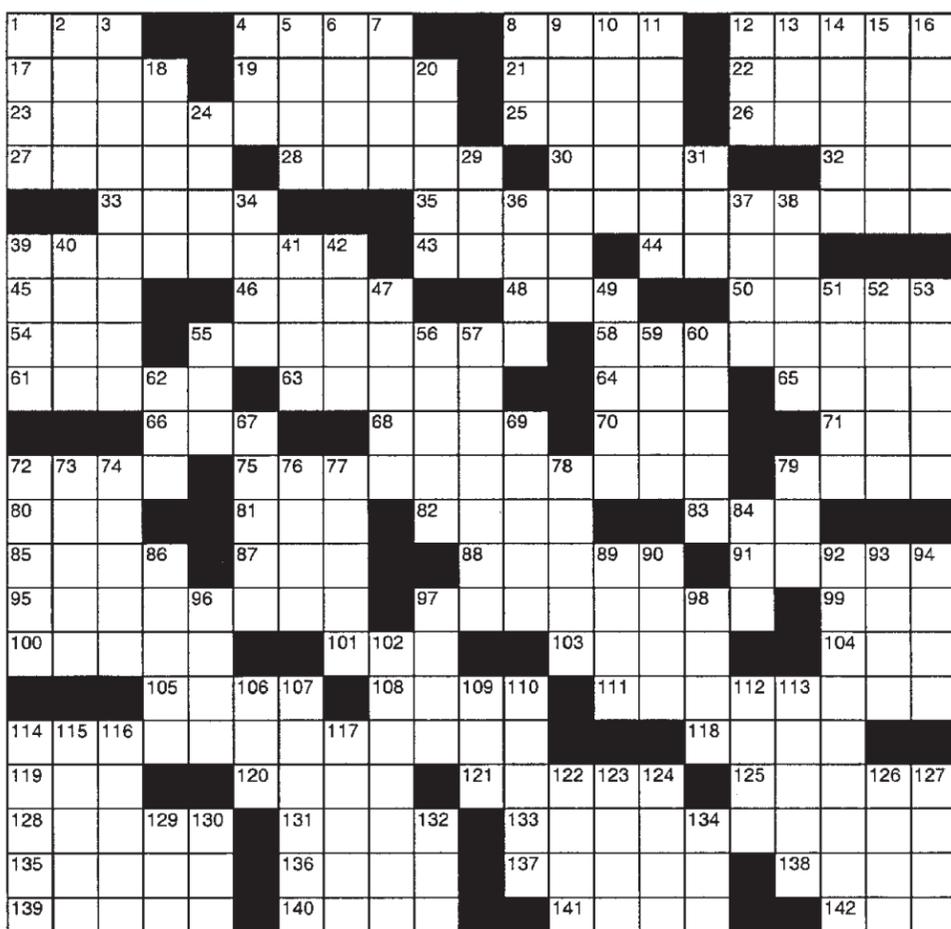

No tan can be considered healthy. Sun exposure in adolescence might be the most dangerous time for ultraviolet damage. Tanning booths and tanning beds are considered

Ear wax keeps the ear canal moist. Without it, the canal's lining dries up and itches. It also traps foreign debris, including bacteria, viruses and fungi that find their way into the ear canal.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. (c) 2010 North America Synd., Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Soto advances to national HOSA meet

By Kim Guzman
Special to the Courier

CANUTILLO — Canutillo High School student Clarissa Soto, junior, advanced to national competition after recently placing among the top three finishers at the state Health Occupations Students of America (HOSA) Leadership Conference. She will compete for a national title in Orlando, Florida at the HOSA National Conference, June 24-26.

Soto earned a second place finish in Interviewing Skills during the Texas competition held in Houston last month. Soto will serve as one of the Texas National Voting Delegates at the National convention. She also served as the Canutillo HOSA Voting Delegate for both Area IV and the State conferences.

Soto has been a member of the CHS Health Occupations Students of America for the past three years, and is currently enrolled in the Health Science Technology program at CHS. She plans to take the Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA) state exam next year. Soto would like to work with children in the pediatric field.

According to Robyn Weiss, CHS Health Occupations teacher and HOSA advisor, Canutillo HOSA students numbered well over 60 for medical competitions this year. CHS advanced 40 to Area IV competition in Amarillo in February, and 24 went on to the state competition in April.

“Clarissa is an outstanding HOSA member who has earned her place going to the National competition. It takes quite an effort to top students from larger metropolitan areas of Texas. Clarissa was up against competitors from Austin, Houston, and Dallas, so I really expect her to do well at Nationals,” said Weiss. “This has been an exceptional year, and I am very proud of all our HOSA students,” she added.

“This is such a great opportunity; to have a chance to do something with my life and get an award for it. Going to Nationals is an amazing honor, and I will never forget this time in my life and how much it prepared me for my future,” said Soto.

Social Security Q&A By Ray Vigil

Q: I applied for a replacement Social Security card last week but have not received it. When should I expect to receive my new card?

A: It takes approximately 10 to 14 days to receive your replacement Social Security card. We’re working harder than ever to protect you, prevent identity theft, and ensure the integrity of your Social Security number. To do that, we have to verify documents you present as proof of identity. In such cases, we must verify the documents before we can issue the card. For more information about your Social Security card and number, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber.

Q: What can I do if I think someone has stolen my identity?

A: You should do several things, including:
• File a report with the local police or the police department where the identity theft took place, and keep a copy of the police report as proof of the crime;

• Notify the Federal Trade Commission (1-877-ID-THEFT or 1-877-438-4338); and

• File a complaint with the Internet Crime Complaint Center at www.ic3.gov; and contact the fraud units of the three major credit reporting bureaus: Equifax (800-525-6285); Trans Union: (800-680-7289); and Experian: (888-397-3742).

If your Social Security card has been stolen, you can apply for a replacement card. But you usually don’t need a new card as long as you know your number. To protect yourself in the future, treat your Social Security number as confidential and avoid giving it out. Keep your Social Security card in a safe place with your other important papers. Do not carry it with you. Learn more by reading our publication, Identity Theft And Your Social Security Number, at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10064.html.

Q: How should I decide when to start receiving my Social Security retirement benefits?

A: The decision regarding when to start receiving retirement benefits is highly personal and depends on a number of factors, such as your current cash needs, your health and family longevity, whether you plan to work in retirement, and the amount of your future Social Security benefit. You may start receiving benefits as early as age 62. However, if you start benefits early — before your “full retirement age” — your benefits are reduced for each month before your full retirement age. For help in making your decision, as well as all the factors to consider, read our publication When To Start Receiving Retirement Benefits at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10147.html.

For more information on any of the questions listed above, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov or call us at 1-800-772-1213. If you have any questions that you would like to have answered, please mail them to the Social Security Office, 1111 Gateway West, Attn: Ray Vigil, El Paso, Texas 79935.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string’s word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.

Wednesday, June 9, and run through Tuesday, August 10, 2010. CISD employees will work four, ten-hour days from Monday through Thursday, with the entire district being closed on Fridays. All Canutillo ISD facilities and schools, including the Administration offices will be officially closed for business from Friday through Sunday. Business hours for the public at the administration facility will be from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Throughout the summer months, campuses and facilities will be closed during specific time periods, but staff from each closed campus will be available to conduct business at a sister campus.
