Horizon officially reopens building

By Rick Shrum
Special to the Courier

HORIZON CITY — The Town of Horizon City held a small celebration on June 2 when officials cut the ribbon on the renovated Town Hall. In brief remarks, Mayor Walter Miller thanked the group of thirty or so people for coming to the ceremony. He pointed out that this project was done out of necessity, as anyone who had done business in Town Hall in recent years would know, and invited everyone to tour the facilities and enjoy the refreshments. With that said, he and Councilman Bill Armas cut the red ribbon strung across the entry doors.

Horizon City has occupied the building for over 20 years. It was originally built as a real estate office over 40 years ago for the defunct HCA group — not to be confused with Horizon Communities Improvement Association — that sold property to people in the late 60s and 70s with promise of a lake and golf course anchored retirement community. The median age in Horizon City is now 32.

Planning Director, Dr. Robert Coleman, who specializes in economics and finance to talk about the completed project. Coleman had all the facts and figures for the project, but he is also keenly aware of tangibles surrounding Town Hall and the Town for the present and into the future.

One of the tangibles was curb appeal. "We want the building to be an attractive, inviting place to do business. It wasn't before. What people see as they come into Horizon should be appealing and the Town should lead from the front," he said.

In fact, there were 35 employees working in 4,000 square foot building that was not ADA compliant. Storage rooms and closets were used for office space. The council/court room also served as an eating area. The bathrooms were single use only. "It was a hodgepodge," said Coleman.

The first action to alleviate the overcrowding was to lease and renovate the 4,000 square foot building adjacent to Town Hall that is now the Horizon City Municipal Court and Police Department. Horizon City contributed $34,000 to that project with the building owner footing the rest of the costs.

The Town has relocated 20 employees to the building. There were 17 police officers, a dispatcher and two court clerks that made the move. This building also houses the new council and court chambers with upgraded audio-visual capabilities. The chamber

Worn flags

I think the worst thing I ever saw, flag-wise, was a flag in a puddle at the bottom of a tall pole in front of a youth center. Driving rainstorm or not, I was out of the car in a heartbeat and rescued the soggy cloth. The next day, after I'd dried the flag, I took it back to the center, and it turned out that the teens responsible for raising and lowering the flag were all in the rec room.

Never one to let a teaching moment pass, I ended up giving the kids a few instructions for the proper care and handling of the flag. To their credit, they took it seriously, working out daily assignments for putting the flag up and taking it down. They practiced folding and clipping the flag to the halyard.

One thing led to another, and those kids developed their own project: Over the next year they're going to hold fundraisers to replace the worn flags on the poles outside the stores along the main drag of our town. Next summer they'll take all those worn flags and participate in the flag-retiring ceremony at the local American Legion. Posts of the American Legion hold flag retirements, called The Ceremony for Disposal of Unserviceable Flags, each year on Flag Day, June 14.

You know where I'm going with this, right? I'm calling on you to do the same thing, either with a kids group or a school class, or even by yourself if necessary. If you start now, by next summer the flags in your area should be in great shape and the worn flags can be retired with dignity.

Por la Gente By State Rep. Chente Quintanilla

Texas voter fraud quite small

Hola mi gente. Since 2002, more than 20 million votes have been cast in November general elections. Keep in mind, this does not include the millions of votes that have been registered in primaries, local elections (such as municipal or school district elections) and bond elections that have occurred during the same time.

It might very well be that the total of votes cast since 2002 number is in excess of 30 million.

In a recent hearing by the House Committee on Elections, a representative from the Texas Attorney General's office testified that the office had received a total of 267 referrals of alleged voter fraud between November 2002 and today. Voter fraud includes such things as voting twice, voting in the wrong election or voter impersonation.

According to the testimony, out of the more than 20 million votes cast between 2002 and today, the amount of alleged voter fraud that was referred for investigation amounted to .001335% of the total votes cast.

Of the 267 that were placed into the legal process, according to the testimony only nine were fully resolved; guilty as charged, plea deal or dismissal of the case. Taking these numbers one step further, less than one in every 2.3 million votes cast may have been by voter impersonation.

It is important that El Pasoans understand these numbers. Voter impersonation was the basis of the infamous Voter ID bill: SB 362 by Senator Fraser. According to the most conservative in the Senate and House, our election process was under attack by hordes of people stealing identities of legitimate voters and using that stolen id to vote. Of course the insinuation was that Democrats were benefitting from the voter impersonation.

If you recall, there were constant rebuttals by the House Democratic leadership refuting the need for a Voter ID bill. We maintained all along that there was absolutely no evidence that warranted a law that could have resulted in reducing voter participation. The stand off between the proponents and opponents of the bill resulted in a tense few days where filibustering (chubbing as House members refer to it) killed many good bills.

I had two important bills that addressed constituent needs die in the Senate because of the controversy. Based on the testimony from the Attorney General's office, it didn't have to happen that way.

Why does it matter? The Voter ID bill gave poll workers the authority to question your right to vote. You may have been required to file a provisional vote which may or may not have even been counted. The process by which voters could be disenfranchised would have been codified with this law.

Hispanics who are legal voters but who speak limited English and Hispanic seniors would have been particularly vulnerable to being denied a vote. The heat that Democrats took for the stall tactics was proven unjustified by the Attorney General's office. We were right to fight.

I remain your friend and public servant, Chente por la gente.

America's land grab

Do you remember the folksy song "This Land is Your Land"?

*This land is your land, this land is my land
From California to the New York Island
From the Redwood Forest to the Gulf Stream waters
This land was made for you and me.*

Well, if you head west you will quickly realize that much of the land is not yours — it's theirs — the federal government's.

In fact, the federal government owns almost 650 million acres of land in the U.S. That's about 30 percent of all the land area in the nation and includes national parks, forests and wildlife refuges.

This federal government land grabbing can have negative impacts on job markets, economic development and tax revenues for those states.

"The federal government has more control over the economy of states than elected governors and legislatures do," says Don Todd, senior research director at Americans for Limited Government (ALG). "The feds decide where you can fish and harvest."

A state that knows this all too well is Utah. More than 60 percent of Utah is owned by the federal government and Utah Gov. Gary Herbert and other policy makers say it creates problems for the state, and they want their land back.

In late May 2010, Gov. Herbert authorized the use of eminent domain to take some of their land back from the federal government. He is hoping to spur the rest of the western states to do the same thing.

By the federal government claiming ownership of their land, it restricts economic development for those resource-rich states. Because these states are not allowed to benefit from economic development on these federal-government protected lands, it greatly limits their overall economic growth.

Though the state of Utah might not win its battle against the federal government, lawmakers there believe what they are doing is necessary and that the government should keep its hands off their land.

But that likely won't happen. In a memo leaked to a Utah Congressman from the Department of Interior, the Administration has a wish list of more land it would like to takeover — and yes, on that list is much more land from the western states.

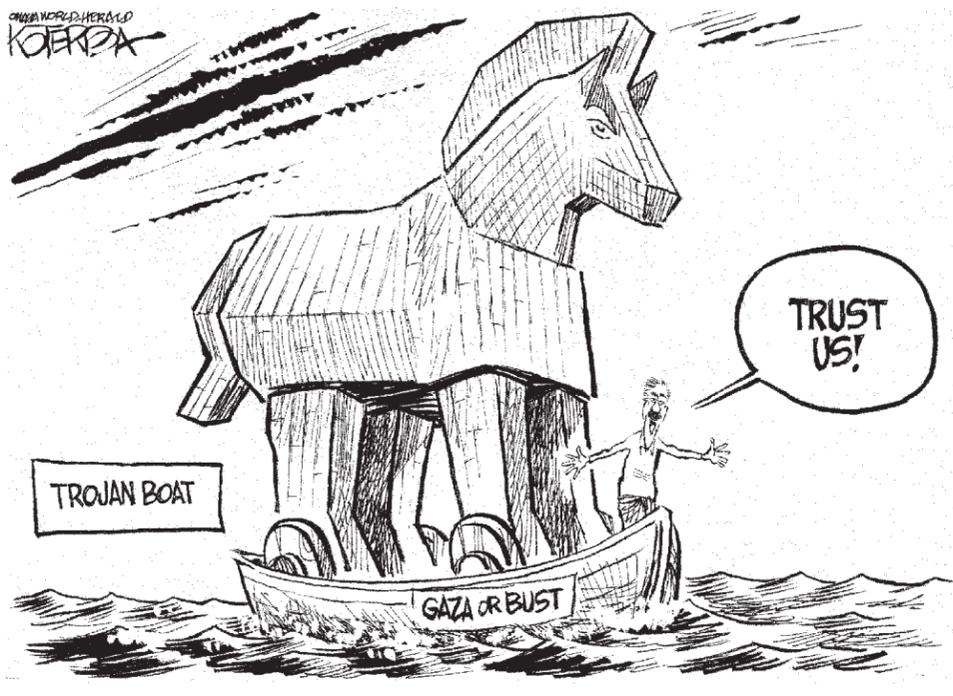

Some of these land grabs, which the Administration hopes to make into monuments — meaning they will have to remain untouched by the state, exceed the size of the states of Rhode Island and Delaware combined. What's worse, the Administration can make this decision on its own, without state or congressional approval. How? The Antiquities Act of 1906. This law gives presidents the right to designate any area of land that presents historic or scientific significance as federally owned land.

Though it is likely the Administration will only choose two to three out of the 14 eligible areas highlighted in the memo to designate as monuments, it will still greatly impact these states giving them less land to develop and grow.

Much of the decision-making comes down to who knows who. In the case of Nevada — where more than 80 percent of the state is owned by the federal government — Sen. Harry Reid gets exactly what he wants out of this Administration, on or off federally owned land.

Despite Nevada residents suffering from a 13.7 percent unemployment rate, Sen. Reid still found it favorable to the state to block a pit mining operation on federally owned land, which was intended for such a project. This mine would have provided millions of tons of sand and rock throughout the next 20 years to be used by companies for cement and other purposes.

In an article in the Las Vegas Review Journal, Sen. Reid is quoted as saying, "The potential negative impacts of the proposed operation far outweigh any benefit the mine may

Father's Day

On Father's Day, dads across Texas will be celebrated from the Panhandle to the Rio Grande Valley. It is on this special day that dads receive the praise and thanks they deserve year round.

A father's job is an important one and it often is not easy. Parenting requires countless sacrifices, unconditional love and lots of patience. The Child Support Division (CSD) thanks you for doing the right thing by taking care of your children and giving them the love and support they deserve. Last year, the CSD collected $2.7 billion in child support — and most of the money came from fathers. You are the unsung heroes in your children's lives.

The CSD demonstrates its commitment to fathers by recognizing the important and irreplaceable role they play in their children's lives. Several notable resources that serve Texas fathers include:

- The Paternity Opportunity Program gives unmarried fathers the opportunity to acknowledge their children's paternity at the time of birth. The Office of the Attorney General (OAG) trains and certifies hospital and birthing center staff to assist parents with the Acknowledgement of Paternity process so that the child will have a legal father right from the start. Last year, POP gave more than 128,000 Texas children a good start in life by helping their fathers establish legal paternity.

- Maps for New Dads: Handbook for Expectant and New Fathers is a publication designed to help expecting dads transition into fatherhood. Maps covers everything from what to expect on a prenatal visit to making homes "baby safe" — all in a manner designed to reinforce the special role fathers play. Additional resources developed by the OAG include posters recognizing the important role fathers play, a Parenting Two-together Handbook for New

Parents and the For Our Children DVD.

- Access and Visitation programs promote noncustodial parents' access to and visitation with their children, when appropriate, through a variety of shared parenting projects. Awarding grant funding to local organizations is one way the Attorney General's Office can help children whose parents are engaged in custody or visitation disputes, since federal funding to run the child support program cannot be used to handle these issues. The services provided under this grant include early intervention, co-parenting education, mediation and enforcement. The OAG also funds a toll-free assistance hotline and provides a Web-based directory of services available in Texas communities.

- The Parenting and Paternity Awareness (p.a.p.a.) program is an innovative educational curriculum designed for secondary school students and young adults. The p.a.p.a. program focuses on the "rights, responsibilities and realities of parenting." Key themes in the curriculum focus on the importance of father involvement, the value of paternity establishment, the legal realities of child support, the financial and emotional challenges of single parenting, the benefits of both parents being involved in a child's life, healthy relationship skills and relationship violence prevention.

- The No Kidding: Straight Talk From Teen Parents project trains and equips young parents to deliver educational curriculum on the realities of being a young parent to students in middle and high school. No Kidding educators use their experiences as teen/young parents to deliver a memorable message about paternity establishment, father involvement, the challenges of parenting and the benefits of postponing parenthood until economically stable and in a marital relationship. The program is implemented through local collaborations of community-based organizations, school districts and the OAG.

UTEP was 18th in the nation in total offense, 20th in passing offense, and 35th in scoring offense." There is a small logo of a miner in the bottom right corner.

Way to hurt the very industry Nevada was founded upon, not to mention possibly putting more residents of the state out of work.

Money was lost and hundreds of jobs that could have boosted Nevada’s economy are now gone. When will Nevadans wake up and realize what is being done to their state — especially by those who are supposed to have the state’s best interests in mind?

death over the timber industry,” Todd says. “They have leases that decide where to sell timber or whether or not a road can be built to get the timber out.”

Federal land grabs, political favors, regulators and laws restricting use are causing a slow death for the very industries that created America and made her what she is today.

The state of Utah is taking action to protect itself from the consequences of being choked by the federal government. Until other states do the same, the federal government will continue to pick away at America’s land and long-established industries.

STRANGE BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It was Swiss journalist and commentator Esther Dyson who made the following sage observation: "The Internet is like alcohol in some sense. It accentuates what you would do anyway. If you want to be a loner, you can be more alone. If you want to connect, it makes it easier to connect."

• The world's largest colony of ants reaches all the way from northern Italy to Spain's Atlantic coast.

• The first U.S. patent was issued in 1790 for a soap-making formula developed by Samuel Hopkins.

• In May of this year, Canadian chef Ted Reader attempted to break the Guinness record for the world's largest hamburger. The patty alone weighed more than 300 pounds, and the bun was 105 pounds. Once the burger was decked out with lettuce, cheese, tomatoes, red onions, pickles and barbecue sauce, the grand total was a whopping 590 pounds. Guinness has not yet certified the giant hamburger, but it seems a shoe-in to beat the current record holder, which is a measly 158.8 pounds.

• Hasbro's Easy-Bake oven was so popular when it was released in 1963 that it sold a half million of the toys within the first year.

• If getting out on the road these days is making you nervous, you have good reason: According to the 2010 GMAC Insurance National Drivers Test survey, approximately 38 million American drivers would fail a written drivers test—that's 20 percent of licensed drivers. The nation's best drivers can be found in Kansas, while the worst drivers — perhaps unsurprisingly — are in New York.

occupancy is limit is 80 — double the old hall. Coleman says it routinely handles 50 or so during court sessions.

Next, a temporary office trailer was brought in to house the other employees while Town Hall underwent renovation.

Another tangible is an extension of the first. The interior is very pleasant both to work in and do business in. There is new tile on the floor and fresh paint on the walls. The 15 employees that work out of the upgraded Town Hall have a well lit, climate controlled environment that includes nine offices, a conference room and break room. The restrooms have been upgraded. There is more storage space. Coleman says the building is more efficient.

"It's important for people to have a good working environment — for social well-being," said Coleman. "This building is ADA compliant now. We have a break room for people to eat in. When somebody comes in to do business they're in a comfortable, attractive situation. We have space for private meetings."

The project has also been financially sound (see By the numbers). Coleman credits both the cost controls and increased building efficiency to good planning. "We had very thorough front-end meetings with the architects on this project," said Coleman. "We looked for ways to save." Pablo Aguirre of McCormick Architects was the lead man on the project according to Coleman.

PHASE II — Better parking lots, landscaping and storage facilities are the next upgrades on the drawing board for Horizon City Town Hall.

By the numbers

- Length of renovation project was 120 days.
- Horizon has doubled its office space from 4,000 to 8,000 sq. ft.
- Temporary office facilities cost $25,000.
- Renovating Town Hall, to date, cost $304,950. The budget was set at $295,000 plus 20% for change orders. To date, the change orders are at 10%.
- New furniture costs are at $104,000 out of $150,000 budget.
- New technology — phones, servers and audio-visual equipment — $8,000.

Coleman says the job is not done better parking lots, landscaping and yet. Still to come in Phase II are equipment storage facilities.

Strasburg lives up to baseball hype and then some

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

On June 8th I did something I never thought I would do — I actually went out of my way to watch a Washington Nationals baseball game.

Normally, sitting through a Nationals game is a kin to watching an episode of The View, the Big Bang Theory or anything on MSNBC.

But this night was special because a young kid was taking the Major League mound for the first time in his career.

And although he is just 21 years old, everybody knew his name and expected nothing but the best from him.

And boy did they get it.

Stephen Strasburg made his debut against the Pittsburgh Pirates on June 8 and every time he took the mound I stopped what I was doing (making dinner) and watched every pitch.

I honestly can't remember the last time I did that. It must have been during a Nolan Ryan start or back in the days when Detroit had a phenom of its own, Mark "The Bird" Fidrych.

Any way, like everyone else I heard all the talk about Strasburg being a "can't miss" prospect but I've heard that before.

Names like David Clyde and Todd Van Poppel immediately come to mind.

These were a couple of pitchers who were brought up to the majors way too quickly and ended up being known for the failures instead of their successes.

But the Nationals brought Strasburg up slowly, spending two months in the minors. And this is after the kid spent four years in college.

Strasburg's opening night was brilliant. I have to admit that I haven't seen that kind of movement and speed on a baseball since... well, never.

Nolan Ryan and Randy Johnson would just blow guys away but neither one had several exceptional breaking pitches, which Strasburg has.

Strasburg threw many pitches 98-100 mph. That is tough enough, but then he'd pull out an 83 mph breaking pitch and the poor batters had no chance.

In that memorable first outing, Strasburg went seven innings and struck out 14 batters without issuing a single walk.

But that's not the most impressive stat related to the young pitcher.

The Washington Nationals have now become "must-see TV" — at least every time Strasburg pitches.

The overnight ratings for Washington's local broadcast went through the roof. It averages about 14,000 households tuning in per game — during Strasburg's debut it recorded 165,000.

The Nationals average crowd for a Tuesday night is around 16,000 fans. Strasburg drew over 40,000.

Soon after his first game Strasburg appeared on David Letterman and read Dave's Top Ten list — if that is not instant celebrity I don't know what is.

Some restaurants in the Washington area are even beginning to serve Strasburgers.

The world of sports is paved with a mile-long list of guys who were hyped up as being the next true superstar but didn't quite get there. Guys who lost their competitive edge right after signing that huge endorsement deal and that massive contract extension.

Take those millions of dollars, throw in a sleazy sports agent, a greedy "come out of the woodwork" entourage and a bevy of dangerously attractive females and we've got another victim of the darker side of professional sports.

But to his credit, Strasburg appears to be a kid with his head on straight. It appears that he's had the upbringing that will keep his name out of the headlines except for what he accomplishes on the field.

And so far he can do almost anything he wants on the mound.

The movement on his pitches is unlike anything I've ever seen. Batters have to swing quickly because he throws so fast.

By the time they swing at his breaking pitch, the ball is just off the ground. If batters wait on his breaking pitch, the fastball is a blur and they have to take the umpire's word that it was a strike.

Of course, no one really knows whether we'll be talking about Strasburg as a superstar or as a complete bust 10 years from now, but wouldn't it be nice for a good humble kid to rewrite the record books while giving baseball the kick start it needs.

After the past few years, baseball could use an injection of genuine excitement — instead of the kind of illegal injections it's been making news for.

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

Twelve is the loneliest number

I can't say it happened overnight — maybe it took a year — but the guy sitting at the end of my lunch table wasn't exactly the same guy I remembered the year before. He was a skinny kid who was very preppy, very well-dressed, the son of very well-to-do restaurateurs. Anyway, he used to be that guy... this new guy was a behemoth. Suddenly, a kid that didn't look like he could beat you in hopscotch looked like he could beat you into next Tuesday.

His name was Christian Peter.

It took him, oh, about one traipse through the halls of Middletown South before the football coaches took notice and put him on the line for what became a team that took the New Jersey state championship. And Peter delivered: On and off the field, he leveled people.

Anyway, it was a pretty interesting team, those 1990 South Eagles. Other than the fact they won the state championship that year, I remember just a few of their vital statistics. Behind center was Jeff Cuzzo, the son of Gary Cuzzo, the former Colts, Cardinals and Vikings quarterback. The running back was a kid named Steven Michael Pitts, the Atlantic Highlands highlight reel and class guy who rewrote the state's record books during his four-year run. After the season, these players had decisions to make. Cuzzo chose God (he's now a missionary), and Pitts and Peter chose the state schools of New Jersey — Penn State and Nebraska.

I'm reminded of this as I sit on a porch in Missouri, listening to a heated discussion between a bunch of Kansas and Mizzou grads. They know that the Big 10 and Pac 10 are knocking on Missouri's door, and they wonder what it could mean to their respective programs. Missouri seems like a natural fit to join the Big 10, as it has a strong rivalry with Illinois and its endowment matches up well with the other schools in the conference. Kansas has been the wallflower in this courtship dance, embroiled in a ticketing scandal and led by an athletic director, Lew Perkins, who is looking increasingly more inept with every passing press conference.

The situation is a puzzling one for them. They understand why the Big 10 is important. Television revenues that would follow a move, particularly if Notre Dame joins the conference, are incredibly enticing. The question appears to center around Texas and Oklahoma. Why would they move to the Pac 10, as rumored, since both schools can write their own ticket and save the Big 12 on their own? Who knows?

But within a year, like Peter, the BCS picture will be transformed, and decisions will have to be made.

Your good health By Paul G. Donahue, M.D.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please write something about bladder infections. Can you have a bladder infection with no symptoms? — A.

The signs and symptoms of bladder infections are the same for men and women. The irritated, infected bladder demands frequent, urgent trips to the bathroom so it can be emptied. People have a burning sensation when passing urine. Pain is felt in the bladder area. Sometimes blood appears in the urine.

Men have far fewer bladder infections than women. Women have a shorter urethra than men. The urethra is the tube that empties the bladder of urine. Women's urethras open in an area that has a large bacterial population. Bacteria can ascend the female urethra without trouble. It's harder for them to climb the male urethra. And men's prostate glands secrete substances that have antibacterial properties.

The presence of bacteria in the urine without any signs of bladder infection is called asymptomatic bacteriuria. Doctors treat pregnant women with asymptomatic bacteriuria to prevent symptoms from arising, as they often do during pregnancy. Infected urine, even without symptoms, can lower the birth weight of babies who were in the uterus during that period.

Otherwise, asymptomatic bacteriuria in women or men, at any age, usually does not require treatment. In women, bacteria in the bladder are often transiently there. They disappear many times on their own. Treatment can lead to the development of resistant bacteria and can produce side effects. Furthermore, it is costly. The guidance from most experts, therefore, is not to treat asymptomatic bacteriuria.

Exceptions exist. Diabetics might benefit from treatment.

The topic of urinary tract infections and their treatment are covered in the booklet on that topic. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donahue — No. 1204W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I would like to know why you lose flesh with age, but not bone, nor skin, nor fat. One doctor told me that's why people get colder when they get older. I am rapidly losing flesh. — L.J.

People lose muscle with age. The process is called sarcopenia (SAHR-coe-PEA-knee-uh). I never thought of it until you brought it up, but it could be a reason why older people chill quickly. Muscles generate heat, and they serve as insulation. Shivering is a response to a cold environment. Shivering muscles give off heat.

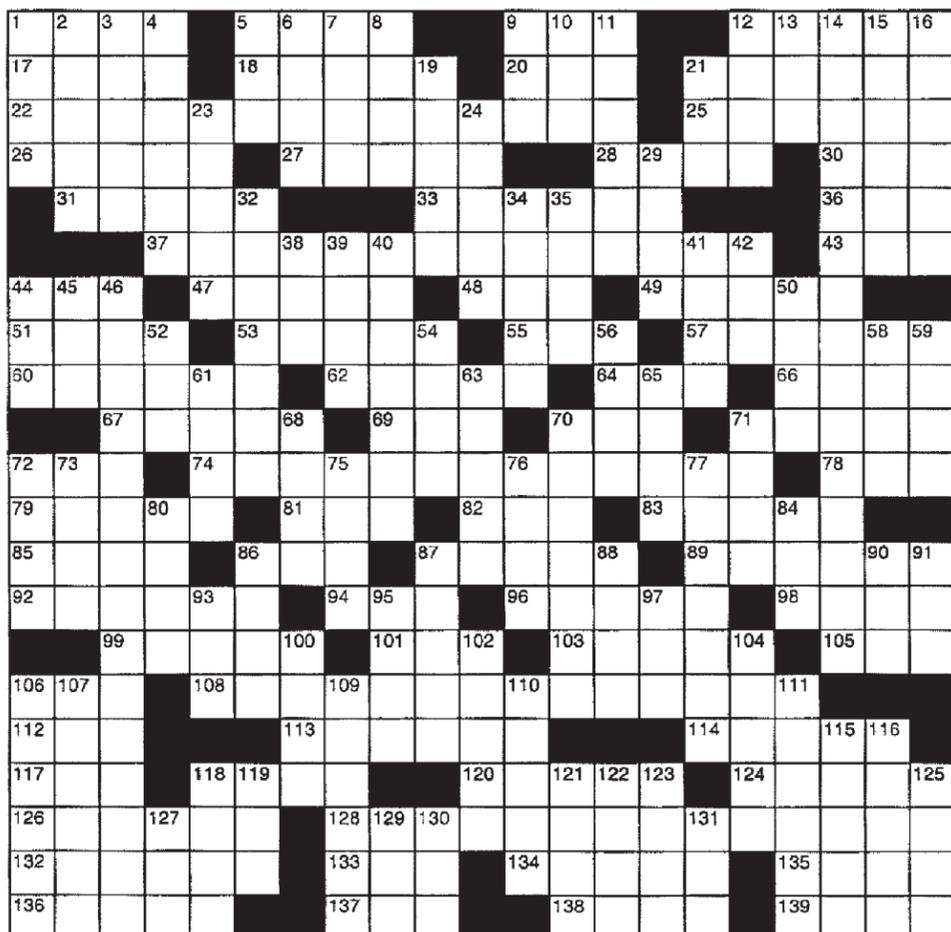

Lots of unpleasant things happen with aging. Metabolism slows, and that's another reason why older people complain of the cold. Our bodies don't repair themselves as well as they did when we were young. Bones do lose strength and size with age. Growing old is not for the faint of heart.

Sarcopenia and bone loss can be kept to a minimum and possibly reversed if people exercise. The kind of exercise they must do is "resistance" exercise — lifting weights. It sounds nutty, but it's for real. Weights don't have to be of the same magnitude that people use to prepare for a bodybuilding contest. You can start with one-pound weights and gradually increase the poundage when you become comfortable with that amount of weight.

CANUTILLO — The Canutillo Independent School District (CISD) has unveiled its district Parent Portal. The Parent Portal is a unique web-based tool that allows parents to securely view their child's grades and attendance online. It will be online for the 2010-11 school year.

"It is critical that CISD provide resources for parents, and our new Parent Portal certainly adds an important resource to our community," said Dr. Damon Murphy, Superintendent of Schools.

Through a secure connection, parents can register on the district's website to review when their child is absent or when his or her grades drop below a certain point. Additionally, parents can communicate directly with their child's teachers and review daily assignments, demographics, class schedules, progress reports and report card grades. Parents can also sign-up to receive notifications.

"This is a great tool because in this just-in-time information age that we are living in, parents can now check in and feel they are a part of their child's academic success," said Annette Brigham, Director of School Resources.

One of the primary goals of the Parent Portal is to pave a tech-friendly avenue for parents to stay informed and involved with their child's education.

The CISD Parent Portal is available at all CISD campuses; parents can find additional information at our website: www.canutillo-isd.org. Parents can register at this site, but will need to verify their identification at their child's school for access.

Social Security Q&A By Ray Vigil

Q: My mother receives supplemental security income (SSI) benefits. She may have to enter a nursing home to get the proper care she needs. Will this affect her SSI benefits?

A: Moving to a nursing home can affect your mother's SSI benefits, but it depends on the type of facility it is. In many cases, the SSI payment will be reduced or stopped. Be sure to notify Social Security when your mother enters or leaves a nursing home, assisted living facility, hospital, skilled nursing facility, or any other kind of institution. Call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778).

Q: How many parts to Medicare are there?

A: There are four parts to Medicare:

- Part A (hospital insurance) helps pay for inpatient hospital care, skilled nursing care, hospice care and other services;
- Part B (doctor insurance) helps pay for doctors' fees, outpatient hospital visits, and other medical services and supplies that are not covered by Part A;
- Part C (Medicare Advantage) plans, available in some areas, allow you to choose to receive all of your health care services through a provider organization. These plans may help lower your costs of receiving medical services, or you may get extra benefits for an additional monthly fee. You must have both Parts A and B to enroll in Part C; and
- Part D (prescription drug coverage) is voluntary and the costs are paid for by the monthly premiums of enrollees and Medicare. Unlike Part B in which you are automatically enrolled and must opt out if you do not want it, with Part D you have to opt in by filling out a form and enrolling in an approved plan. More information may be found in our publication Medicare at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10043.html or by visiting www.medicare.gov.

entitled to our own Social Security benefits. Will our combined benefits be reduced because we are married?

A: No. When each member of a married couple works in employment covered under Social Security and both meet all other eligibility requirements to receive retirement benefits, their lifetime earnings are calculated independently to determine their benefit amounts. Therefore, each spouse receives a monthly benefit amount based on his or her own earnings. If one member of the couple earned low wages or failed to earn enough Social Security credits (40) to be insured for retirement benefits, he or she may be eligible to receive benefits as a spouse. To learn more about retirement, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/retirement.

For more information on any of the questions listed above, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov or call us at 1-800-772-1213. If you have any questions that you would like to have answered, please mail them to the Social Security Office, 1111 Gateway West, Attn: Ray Vigil, El Paso, Texas 79935.

June 9. Araujo returns to the office of board president after he was unopposed for re-election for the position of Trustee Place 5 during the district's recent board elections held on May 8.

Araujo takes the place of Jaquez who had served as board president since May 2008. This is the third time that he is chosen to lead the San Elizario ISD school board since becoming a trustee back in 1994. Araujo is currently the Executive Director of Organización Progresiva de San Elizario, a non-profit organization that provides a range of housing services and assistance for local residents.

Other members re-elected to the San Elizario ISD school board are Vicente Delgadillo as Trustee Place 4, Irene D. Jaquez as Trustee Place 6, and Armando Martinez as Trustee Place 7. Judge Ruben Lujan administered the oath of office for the new and re-elected board members.

Martinez returns to take a seat at the board after a brief hiatus replacing Priscilla Ortega. He is one of the longest serving trustees with over 20 years of service. Trustee Ramon Holguin remains in the office of vice president while the newest member of the board, Jose Rodriguez, takes over the position of secretary.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
