San Elizario PAC fights annexation

By Robert Grijalva
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO – The San Elizario Incorporation Efforts Group Political Action Committee (PAC) held a community meeting to update the residents in San Elizario about their efforts. The PAC was formed for the purpose of unifying efforts in opposition to attempts by the City of Socorro to annex portions of San Elizario. The primary effort by the PAC is to garner support in San Elizario for incorporating the community into a township with its own city government.

On Saturday, April 20, Maya Sanchez, President of the PAC convened the community meeting at Maya's Gardens Hall. "The purpose of the meeting was to update the residents of San Elizario about the committee's efforts in the recent past and about future efforts," said Sanchez. "The thirty volunteers on the committee were being asked by many residents about the status," she said.

The most important issue was the upcoming court date that would determine the status of certain city council members in Socorro. In 2011, Socorro City Council voted to change the dates for re-electing council members. This action resulted in certain members having their terms extended for one additional year without voters approving a change to the city charter.

A court hearing on April 25 will decide if the action by Socorro was legal. If the judge rules against the City of Socorro, the actions by Socorro that initiated

Walker, Knauerhase are top Canutillo ISD teachers

By Gustavo Reveles Acosta
Special to the Courier

CANUTILLO – A well-respected English teacher with a long track of missionary work in underserved parts of the world, and a German Air Force retiree with a newfound passion for educating children were selected as the 2013 Canutillo Independent School District Teachers of the Year.

Sharon Walker, a sixth-grade English teacher at Alderete Middle School, was selected as the CISD Secondary Teacher of the Year. Torsten Knauerhase, a third-grade teacher at Damian Elementary School, is the CISD Elementary Teacher of the Year. They will represent Canutillo in the Region 19 Teacher of the Year contest later this spring.

"These are two top-notch educators that are part of everything that is right about our school district," said Interim Superintendent Annette Brigham. "Mrs. Walker is the type of teacher that is loved by students and respected by other teachers. Mr. Knauerhase has quickly developed a reputation of being a teacher who pushes students to their full potential." Walker impressed the Teacher of the Year judges with her warmth toward students and her compassion for children in underdeveloped nations, whom she often teaches during church missions to Africa and Asia. She has been a teacher for 10 years and her entire career has been in the Canutillo school district.

Sharon Walker

T. Knauerhase

Knauerhase, or Mr. K as he is known to his students, decided to teach children after spending years teaching airmen in the German Air Force, both in Europe and on post at Fort Bliss. Last year, the Council for Exceptional Children recognized Knauerhase's work with an autistic student who made significant academic gains.

The CISD Board of Trustees will recognize Walker, Knauerhase and the other campus teachers of the year during its monthly meeting on Tuesday.

The campus teachers of the year are: Cynthia Enriquez, Davenport Elementary School; Sandra Garcia, Garcia Elementary School; Elizabeth Moreno, Canutillo Elementary School; Debbie Warhurst, Childress Elementary School; Karen Rissling, Canutillo Middle School; Bruce Hoang, Canutillo High School; and Andrew Waxman, Northwest Early College.

Texas considers career, technology credits for math and science classes

TEXAS – In response to complaints from school officials

QUALIFIED – Martha M. Dominguez, El Paso's SBOE representative, is a veteran educator who has served as an instructional aide, teacher, instructional supervisor, assistant principal, and central office administrator. She was elected to the board in November and took office in January. Dominguez graduated from El Paso High School and earned a bachelor's degree in Business Administration from the University of Texas at El Paso, a master's in Secondary Education from Stephen F. Austin State University, and a doctorate in Educational Administration from New Mexico State University.

who say that the current public school system doesn't suit all students because many students would be better served through technical training classes, the Texas School Board of Education (SBOE) gave preliminary approval recently to a plan that would provide students with career and technology options in place of some mathematics and science courses.

The plan, proponents said, would provide greater flexibility in high school graduation plans. Subsequently, SBOE tentatively agreed to allow seven additional Career and Technical Education (CTE) or Technology Applications courses to count for math or science credit.

Barbara Cargill, SBOE chairperson, told a Senate committee recently that experts reached a compromise under the existing system by identifying seven career and technology courses that could count toward a fourth year of math or science. She said that would allow students interested in vocational training to graduate while taking relevant courses.

If given final approval at the board's July meeting, students would be able to earn math credit if they take and pass Robotics Programming and Design; Principles of Engineering; Digital Electronics; or Discrete Mathematics, which currently count as a CTE or Technology Applications credit, according to a Texas Education Agency (TEA) report.

Students could earn science credit for Veterinary Medical Applications, Advanced Environmental Technology or Human Body Systems, which are also currently CTE courses, under the plan approved on first reading recently, TEA stated.

This would expand the math and science course offerings available to students as early as the 2013-2014 school year if given final approval at the board's next meeting.

Composed of 15 members elected from roughly equally populous districts, it is SBOE that adopts rules and establishes policies that govern a wide

Should you ‘freeze’ your credit reports?

Although the odds of having your identity stolen remain quite low, anyone who’s ever been had their bank or credit card account compromised knows what a pain it can be to unravel the mess. Sometimes enterprising hackers just need your Social Security number, address and date of birth to start opening new accounts in your name. Many victims don’t realize anything’s wrong until they apply for a new account and find their credit has been trashed; or, they start getting calls from collection agencies regarding unfamiliar accounts. More and more people have begun blocking access to information in their credit reports, even if there hasn’t yet been any fraudulent activity, by instituting a “security freeze.” A credit security freeze is where you instruct the three major credit bureaus to disallow new creditors from viewing your credit report and score. Because most businesses won’t lend without first checking your report, a freeze can deter identity thieves.

Before going to the trouble and expense of doing a credit freeze, however, learn how the process works and be aware of several possible inconveniences:

First, determine if you really need a credit freeze. If your credit or debit card is lost or stolen, you won’t necessarily be a victim of identity theft, which usually requires additional personal information. Similarly, fraudulent billing charges don’t necessarily indicate identity theft. Verify by reviewing your credit reports. You can order one free report annually from the three major bureaus through the AnnualCreditReport.com; otherwise you’ll pay a small fee.

To freeze your credit reports, you must individually contact each credit bureau: Equifax (www.equifax.com), Experian (www.experian.com) and TransUnion (www.transunion.com). You’ll need to supply your name, address, birth date, Social Security number and other personal information.

Filing requirements and fees vary based on your state of residence (commonly $5 to $10). People over age 65 sometimes receive a discount and if you are an identity theft victim, credit freezes are free – although you’ll need to provide supporting paperwork.

Once implemented, you’ll receive a unique personal identification number (PIN) from each credit bureau. Store these PINs securely because you’ll need them to temporarily lift a credit freeze and then reinstate it – usually for a fee.

All these fees can really add up, so if you’re planning any action that requires a credit check, you may want to hold off implementing a freeze. It can take up to five business days to process a request for a security freeze or temporarily lift, so plan major purchases or other credit actions carefully.

A few additional facts about credit freezes:

- Although freezes can help block the creation of new credit accounts, they can’t prevent an identity thief from making charges to existing accounts.
- Your current creditors can still access your credit reports, as can collection agencies acting on their behalf.
- Government agencies have access for collecting child support payments or taxes, to investigate Medicaid fraud, or in response to court or administrative orders, subpoenas or search warrants.
- You can temporarily lift a credit freeze either for a specific period of time, or for a specific party – say, a potential landlord or employer.
- If you lose your PIN, you may request a new one, although there may be a fee.

Bottom line: Always monitor your credit reports to spot errors or fraudulent activity. To take security a step further, consider placing a credit freeze on your reports.

PTSD drug debate

More than 30 percent of veterans with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) are being prescribed a drug called benzodiazepine, which is a sedative, contrary to the Department of Veterans Affairs own PTSD guidelines. Benzodiazepine covers drugs such as Valium and Xanax, often used to help with insomnia and anxiety.

The problem, says Dr. Nancy Bernardy, clinical psychologist with the VA’s National Center for PTSD, is that the drug can be harmful. She writes in the PTSD Research Quarterly that the typical PTSD symptoms are not handled by benzodiazepine and that “mounting evidence suggests that the long-term harms imposed by benzodiazepine use outweigh any short-term symptomatic benefits in patients with PTSD.” Additionally, her report talks of withdrawal symptoms and risk of tolerance after very limited use.

The VA/DoD Clinical Practice Guideline “Management of Post-Traumatic Stress,” dated 2010, “Strongly recommends against the use of benzodiazepines to prevent the development of ASD or PTSD.” On the page of Balance of Benefit and Harm, benzodiazepine is noted with an asterisk that says “Potential harm.” In spite of this, prescription levels are about 30 percent.

Short-term prescriptions (two to four weeks) can be beneficial in terms of improved sleep, but at that point the patient naturally doesn’t want to give up the medication, which actually interferes with PTSD therapies. In one test, researchers compared sleep results between benzodiazepine and a placebo – and found no difference.

There are three groups for which benzodiazepine prescription is very much contraindicated: veterans with PTSD and substance abuse disorder, veterans with mild traumatic brain injury, and veterans who take opiates for chronic pain.

To read the whole manual, Google “va/dod clinical practice guidelines for the management of post-traumatic stress”.

To read Dr. Bernardy’s report, Google “The Role of Benzodiazepines in the Treatment of Posttraumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD)” in the PTSD Research Quarterly.

NEWS FLASH: IRANIAN SCIENTISTS CLAIM THEY'VE INVENTED A TIME MACHINE...

- Photo courtesy of Gertrud Konings

TRAVELERS - The Monarch Butterfly is especially noted for its yearly migration over long distances. In North America it makes massive southward migrations starting in August until the first frost. There is a northward migration in the spring. The monarch is the only butterfly that migrates both north and south as the birds do regularly, but no individual butterfly makes the entire round trip. Female monarchs lay eggs for the next generation during these migrations.

Archeology museum features Monarch Butterfly presentation

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

The Monarch Butterfly will be the topic of discussion at El Paso Museum of Archaeology's next educational presentation, which is scheduled for 2 p.m., Saturday, May 11, at the museum (4301 Transmountain Rd).

The free presentation will feature Dr. Gertrud Konings, assistant professor of Biology at El Paso Community College. She visited the Monarch butterfly reserves in Mexico recently as part of her studies.

In this talk, Konings stated that she will use a variety of colorful photographs taken at the Monarch butterfly reserves in Mexico to explore the Monarchs' behavior and unique multigenerational migration through North America.

Konings, who was born, grew up, and studied in Germany, earned a doctorate degree in Biology from the Free University Berlin. She has lived in the United States for 16 years- all in El Paso.

Konings said that she and her husband (Ad) enjoy exploring the southwestern desert, and that her research focuses mainly on cacti. She and her husband recently published a book filled with photographs and interesting information about the cacti that adorn their native Texas habitat.

For more information on the upcoming presentation, contact Museum Education Curator Marilyn Guida, at 915-755-4332, or send email to guidamr@elpasotexas.gov.

annexation of certain parts in San Elizario will be nullified and end the threat of annexation at this time.

Sanchez is hoping that the community meeting will motivate residents in San Elizario to attend the court hearing.

According to Sanchez, many residents are unclear on the definitions of annexation and incorporation. The committee intended to clarify the difference between annexation and incorporation and why it is critical to exercise incorporation at this time.

“One thing we felt that was very important was to let the people know that incorporation will not necessarily mean changing the way people live in San Elizario. It is our intention to have minimal impact on life by incorporating,” said Sanchez.

She said the goal was to improve living and not take anything away. Although there is the anxiety about taxes, the priority of a city government would be to clean up the city and to inspire residents to take pride in the community. “We want to have little impact on the citizenry by municipal regulations, especially on agriculture,” she said.

At the meeting, attendees were also informed about efforts by the committee and others in opposition to the annexation. Committee members traveled to Austin to testify before legislative committees in support of bills allowing San Elizario to incorporate without the permission of the Socorro City Council. Under current law San Elizario must get Socorro’s approval to incorporate. They also heard about the lawsuit filed by the county attorney’s office against further action by Socorro.

Sanchez expressed some concern about the small amount of funding the PAC has generated. Efforts to reach out to the community will be limited to very basic grass roots efforts such as simple flyers printed on personal computers. There are plans to raise funds.

On Saturday and Sunday, April 27 and 28, the PAC will have a booth at the First Thanksgiving Celebration sponsored by the Mission Trail Association. The PAC booth will be offering menudo and soft drinks.

Also, on May 11, there will be a Mother’s Day Dance at Maya’s Gardens Hall from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. The admission fee is $15. For questions regarding the events, call 851-8339.

Although born in El Paso County, Maya Sanchez lived most of her life in California. She attended the University of San Francisco and earned a Bachelor’s degree in communication with an emphasis on media studies. She worked briefly for KTSM as a news producer.

Sanchez returned to San Elizario intending to make this her home. She has plans to establish a business and farm. The threat of annexation prompted her to become active in opposing the effort by Socorro.

Marathon of American unity is still a work in progress

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

Last week must have been one of the most emotionally draining for all Americans since the events of 9-1-1 back in 2001.

Just before the carnage, Americans were getting frustrated at the constant barrage of uncomplimentary comments that Democrats and Republicans were throwing at each other concerning gun control and immigration and the deficit and the other endless reasons to remain enemies.

And while we busy were pointing fingers, we let our guard down. And as much as we appear to hate one another, there are other people out there who hate us more.

The bombings at the Boston Marathon proved once again to all of us that terrorism can strike anywhere at anytime.

And though we'd like to think that we could go about our lives in relative safety, the truth is that this kind of cowardly behavior can never be totally contained.

The bombings by these two misguided brothers brought out the worst of humanity.

But the response from the city of Boston and Americans everywhere reminded us once again that there is good in far more people.

What alarms me is that often it takes a tragedy of this magnitude to remind us that we're all Americans and that we should stick together.

It's funny. It seems that when things are going fine in America, we tend to hate each other more.

A horrible event brings us all together. It's like most families, "yeah, we fight and argue with one another, but nobody else better bother us."

And though it's unfortunate that we take our fellow Americans for granted, when we do come together - it's an awesome thing.

Like watching the Boston Bruins fans take over for National Anthem singer Rene Rancourt about 10 seconds into his performance.

Listening to the fans singing that song before the game sent a shiver up the spines of almost everyone who watched or listened to it.

Then there were the New York Yankees fans, who know a little something about terrorist attacks, that stood in unison and sang the Red Sox' fan favorite song Sweet Caroline at their game.

You have to understand that singing Sweet Caroline at Boston's Fenway Park is like Yankee fans singing New York, New York.

In fact, Neil Diamond himself was on the field to sing his song to the Red Sox fans last Saturday. The response, as you can probably imagine, was extremely emotional.

At gatherings everywhere, Americans responded with moments of silence, chants of USA, USA, and salutes for emergency personnel and the military.

But what now? How long will it take before we become complacent again?

How long before President Obama and John Boehner and Nancy Pelosi and Karl Rove and Harry Reid and Sarah Palin and Al Sharpton and Sean Hannity and Chris Matthews and Rush Limbaugh and Joe Biden remind us that one half of American must hate the other half?

One of the cures that Americans have always taken for tragedies like these has been a sporting event.

Sporting events are where like-minded individuals can converge as one to escape the anxiety of the real world.

People can let out their frustration through cheering and booing and everyone goes home more relaxed.

But of course the April 15 bombing in Boston occurred at a sporting event.

I'm afraid the time is coming when the United States will begin to operate much the way Israel does to thwart this kind of terrorism.

At many marathons around the world, backpacks like the ones used by the Chechnya brothers to carry their bombs, are forbidden.

Look for this kind of legislation to be established here at more and more large gatherings.

Americans are a resilient people who respond to these attacks with courage and will look you in the eye and dare you to do it again.

Unfortunately, terrorist organizations (though they don't have the courage to look you in the eye) are more than happy to take up the challenge.

America is no doubt going to have to get tougher with these terrorists because I think by now we've learned that they don't cherish life as others do.

I just hope we can stick together long enough as a nation. We haven't even brought up North Korea and Iran yet.

Testimony From Augusta

Legend has the Garden of Eden located somewhere around Mesopotamia (unless you're a Mormon, who believe Adam and Eve's stomping grounds were in Missouri). That may be so, but I am confident when I say that the closest thing to what I imagine the Garden of Eden to be, sans the naked woman feeding me apples, is in Augusta, Ga., where my wife (attractively attired in a sky-blue Masters windbreaker) feeds me pimento and cheese sandwiches at The Masters tournament. Witnessing The Masters is a transcendent experience. The beauty of the manicured grounds, the excellence of the golf tournament, the attention to even the most minute detail is jarring. If you're a sports fan or if you're feeling down about human society in general, the first time you hit the grounds at Augusta is almost on par with the rush you felt when it was love at first wife, and only a few strokes behind witnessing the birth of your child.

If you believe in karma, that what goes around comes around, consider the case of Billy Payne, member and club chairman. An investment banker, Payne is responsible for bringing the Olympic Games to Atlanta using mostly private funding and, in so doing, improving and creating much of that city's present-day infrastructure. The Atlanta Olympics also were mercilessly derided for its over-the-top commercialization and a bombing that took place in the Centennial Olympic Park, killing two and reinforcing the perception that America was little more than a place of sugar-water-sponsored violence.

Let those people come to Augusta, where the only advertisement you will see is the "Courtesy of AT&T" in small type on each of the plain black phones provided on the grounds for its patrons. The phones are provided free of charge as a way to keep cellphones prohibited from the club at all times. Otherwise cutoff from the world, the only news one receives comes courtesy of the manually operated scoreboards or through word of mouth.

When people from all over the world - Melbourne, Glasgow, London and Berlin - come to Augusta, the only brand they will find on the premises is that of the Masters logo, a flagstick on a silhouette of the United States. Even the cola and beers are labeled simply "cola" and "beer." I defy anyone to find a weed, piece of litter, or stepped over gum anywhere on the grounds. Credit Billy Payne and the Augusta National for this attention to austerity, this display of integrity.

Contrary to what a few placard-waving evangelists outside the gates would have you believe, the Tournament is not a place of idol worship. Rather, it is a place where people come to revel and respect God-given ability. Paradise or not, the patrons who make the pilgrimage and congregate yearly at Augusta are there merely to testify.

Your good health By Paul G. Donahue, M.D.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: You have no idea how painful spinal stenosis is. Only oxycodone works. My doctor is afraid that I will become addicted. I am 75. I would rather die an addict than a person in constant pain. A surgeon told me it was too dangerous to operate unless I am in constant pain. Can you help? – B.A.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read your article on spinal stenosis. I am 82, in good health, but plagued with back pain. My daughter, a nurse at a university hospital, had me see a neurosurgeon there. He suggested a microsurgical procedure that took about three hours. I was discharged with a small bandage. I am now more than two months post-op, and my back feels better than it has in years. People with spinal stenosis should consider this operation. – M.R.

where a half-inch incision allows the surgeon to spread back muscles and other tissues so the surgeon can home in on the area of involved stenosis. A hollow cylinder is inserted through the spread back tissues, and special instruments allow visualization of the area with the ability to remove the compression. It's something that B.A. ought to consider with the constant pain she endures.

The booklet on back problems deals with some of the more-common back conditions and their treatment. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donahue – No. 303W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My wife has taken blood pressure medicine for many years. She's now 66. Her doctor put her on a new medicine that has her pressure at 125/65. It's never been that low before. Is that too low for someone her age? – L.W.

Spinal stenosis is one of the most frequent causes of back pain. The spinal cord is an extension of the brain. It runs from the neck to the lower back. It's only as thick as your little finger. An eraser dropped from 12 inches onto it would smash it beyond repair. It, therefore, needs protection. Nature has encased it in the backbones (vertebrae) through a tunnel that runs the length of the spinal column. Narrowing of the tunnel is called spinal stenosis.

The narrowed part compresses the spinal cord and is quite painful. The narrowing comes from bone spurs, arthritis changes or thickening of back ligaments. Physical therapy, through strengthening back muscles and stretching thickened back ligaments, often lessens pain. Pain medicines can be used liberally. Injection of cortisone into the spinal canal (epidurals) is another way to ease pain and compression.

Does your wife complain of dizziness, especially upon standing up? If she doesn't, then her pressure isn't too low. Ideal blood pressure is lower than 120/80.

It's true older people don't always tolerate a sudden drop in their pressure, even though the pressure might be in the normal range. I don't consider your wife to be "older." You'd better not either.

M.R.'s suggestion of surgery bears consideration, especially his comments on microsurgery,

Dr. Donahue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. (c) 2013 North America Synd., Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Social Security Q&A By Ray Vigil

Q: Is it illegal to laminate your Social Security card?

A: No it is not illegal, but it's best not to laminate your card. Laminated cards make it difficult, if not impossible, to detect important security features. Also, your employer may refuse to accept it. The Social Security Act requires Social Security to issue cards that cannot be counterfeited. We incorporate many features to protect the card's integrity. That includes highly specialized paper and printing techniques – some visible to the naked eye and some not. Further, we continue to explore and adopt new technologies that hamper duplication. Keep your Social Security card in a safe place with your other important papers. Do not carry it with you. Learn more at www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber.

Q: What is the difference between the disability application and the disability report? Do I have to complete both?

A: The Disability Application is an application for Social Security disability benefits. To receive Social Security disability or Supplemental Security Income disability benefits, you must file an application. The Disability Report, meanwhile, is a form that provides Social Security with information about your current medical condition. We need this information to process your disability application. To start a claim for disability benefits, you need to complete a disability application, a disability report, and an authorization release form that allows us to obtain your medical records. You can get the disability application process started at www.socialsecurity.gov/applyfordisability.

Q: I applied for a replacement Social Security card last week but have not received it. When should I expect to receive my new card?

A: It takes approximately 10 to 14 days to receive your replacement Social Security card. We're working harder than ever to protect you, prevent identity theft, and ensure the integrity of your Social Security number. To do that, we have to verify documents you present as proof of identity. In some cases, we must verify the documents before we can issue the card. For more information about your Social Security card and number, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber.

For more information on any of the questions listed above, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov or call us at 1-800-772-1213. ## STRANGE BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

- It was nationally syndicated newspaper columnist L.M. Boyd who made the following sage observation: "Anyone who eats three meals a day should understand why cookbooks outsell sex books three to one."

- The game of Chinese checkers did not come from China; it was invented in Great Britain in the 19th century. The game's original name was Halma.

- We usually think of Spain as a warm country, so it might surprise you to learn that the nation has 13 glaciers.

- Doubtless you've heard of India's Taj Mahal, but did you know that there is a tourist attraction in America that is so grand, it is popularly known as the Taj Mahal of the West? In 1968, a group of Hare Krishnas founded the New Vrindaban Community near Wheeling, W.Va. Though they began on 100 acres with no electricity or running water, the community now covers more than 1,200 acres and features Prabhupada's Palace of Gold, an ornate edifice of gold, marble and hand-carved teakwood. The award-winning rose garden alone is said to be worth a trip.

- If you're a dog lover, you might have used your beloved pet as a foot warmer from time to time. This is by no means a modern practice; the Aztecs were fond of a certain breed of small, hairless dogs to accomplish the task.

- Despite popular opinion, the dictator Napoleon was not particularly short. He measured 5 feet, 6 inches tall, which was the average height for a Frenchman at that time.

- Those who study such things say that if you're like the average person, you can go 11 days without water – provided the temperature never gets above 60 degrees F.
