Museum invites public to participate in 'El Dia de Los Muertos' festivities

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – El Paso Museum of History is inviting the public to participate in its upcoming El Dia de Los Muertos (Day of the Dead) festivities by submitting Calaveritas (Halloween poems) or reserving a place for Altars de Muertos (Altars of the Dead).

The museum is now accepting the Calaveritas in English and Spanish and reserving space for the Altars de Muertos that will be on display in one of its galleries. The showing will be free and open to the public.

The poems and altars exhibit is scheduled to begin Saturday, October 25, and continue through Sunday, November 9. The history museum is located in downtown El Paso at 510 N. Santa Fe St.

According to museum officials, the origin of the Day of the Dead tradition is pre-Hispanic. The Mexicas (an ethnic group of central Mexico) recognized it with a party at the end of the harvest and associated it with the cult of the goddess Mictecacihuatl, guardian of the underworld. This aspect, combined with the pre-Hispanic tradition of burying the dead CULTURE – Above is an example of Altars de Muertos (Altars of the Dead). Altars like this one will be on display during El Paso Museum of History's Dia de los Muertos (Day of the Dead) exhibit which will be open for viewing October 25 through November 9. The Dia de los Muertos observance honors those who are no longer with us. It is the combination of two cultures, two religions, and two ways of understanding life and death. Mexico stands out because this way of celebrating and honoring the dead is cheerful, festive, and colorful. It is among the most important celebrations in Mexico. On November 2nd, in addition to visiting their graves and bringing flowers, it is a tradition to create an altar so the loved ones' souls may return for a moment to the earthly life.

with their belongings led to the altars of the dead as we now know it. And with the arrival of the Spaniards, other elements such as crosses and bread were incorporated.

Individuals interested in participating in the museum's Day of the Dead event may submit their poems or reserve a space for an altar by contacting Jaime Knoedler, the history museum's educator, at 915-351-3588 or send email to KnoedlerJM@elpasotexas.gov.

Museum lecture, exhibit focus on evolution of warfare

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – The El Paso Museum of History will present a special lecture on the evolution of military tactics from Ancient Rome to the present, from 2 to 3 p.m., Saturday, October 25. The lecture is in conjunction with the museum's featured exhibit, Julius Caesar: Military Genius & Mighty Machines, which is currently on display at the museum (510 N. Santa Fe Street).

John Hamilton will be guest speaker for the Saturday lecture. According to Hamilton, his talk will be about the development of warfare over the centuries including the evolution of technology as well as the progression to combined arms warfare from the ancient Roman times to present day.

"To be sure, warfare is ugly, but to ensure peace we must study warfare to understand its demands, why wars start, and how they are ended," Hamilton stated. "As the military historian and tactician Sir Basil Liddell-Hart said, 'History is a catalogue of mistakes. It is our duty to profit by them,'" he added.

Hamilton currently serves as the Chief of Inspections for the Fort Bliss Inspector General. He was a US Army Infantry officer from 1971 until his retirement from active duty in 1994 as a lieutenant colonel. His career also includes being a division historian and a professor of Military Science at the University of Arkansas.

Hamilton's credentials include earning a Bachelor of Arts degree in History from Texas A&M University and a Master of Arts degree from the University of Southern California. He has also contributed articles to various historical publications including Commanders' Call, Infantry Magazine, Air Defense Magazine, and Password and is author of the book, Blazing Skies, which documents the history of air defense artillery at Fort Bliss.

For more information about the lecture or the exhibit, contact El Paso Museum of History Educator Jaime Knoedler at (915) 351-3588 or send email to knoedlerjm@elpasotexas.gov.

San Elizario ISD bond meeting

By Cynthia P. Marentes
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO – The San Elizario Independent School District (SEISD) is hosting a series of meetings to inform the community about the district's bond issuance appearing on the ballot for the upcoming November 4 general election. Voters will decide whether to issue up to $28 million in bonds to provide for the construction, renovation, acquisition, and equipment of school buildings within the district. The San Elizario ISD school board voted to approve the order calling for a bond at the regular board meeting held on August 13.

A district Bond Advisory Committee formed in August 2013, recommended projects to be funded through a bond to the school board after a yearlong needs assessment that included tours of facilities and regular meetings. The ten projects include: replacement of aging roofing systems at seven district campuses and facilities; construction of a new building for Career and Technical Education courses; construction of a new field house; conversion of an existing parking lot into a playground area; expansion of a cafeteria; construction of a transportation and warehouse center; renovation of a classroom wing; installation of artificial turf; replacement of all damaged floor tile at a campus; and the conversion of a classroom/lab into two classrooms.

The SEISD current tax rate for bonds is approximately five cents per $100 of taxable assessed valuation. If all $28 million of bonds are issued, it is expected that the tax rate would increase by approximately seven cents.

Additionally, SEISD currently receives state aid, which is used to pay approximately 87 percent of the district's debt. Meanwhile, property taxes paid by district taxpayers are used to pay the remaining 13 percent of debt. The last of the bonds currently issued by the District will be paid off in February 2016. However, no bonds will be issued unless the District receives state assistance for the payment of the bonds. Based on current law, the District can expect to receive between 85 and 90 percent assistance from the state.

To learn more about the SEISD bond proposition, the community is invited to attend any of the upcoming meetings. The next community meeting will be on Tuesday, October 28 at 5:00 p.m. at the Garcia-Enriquez Middle School cafeteria located at 12280 Socorro Road. Another meeting will be held on Wednesday, October 29 at 5:00 p.m. in the Sambrano Elementary School cafeteria located at 200 Herring Road. More bond election information is also available on the SEISD website at www.seisd.net.

Weigh 2015 Medicare Part D, Advantage Plan choices carefully

If you're currently enrolled in Medicare, what you do or don't do over the next few weeks could determine whether you can secure the best, most affordable coverage next year. Here's why:

Medicare Part D prescription plans frequently change premiums, drug formularies, deductibles and copayment amounts for specific drugs from year to year. Medicare Advantage plans often make similar changes; plus doctors, hospitals and pharmacies may drop out of their preferred provider networks.

Thus, by simply choosing the same options for 2015 without investigating alternatives, you could wind up paying hundreds or thousands of dollars more for similar healthcare services.

Medicare's annual election period (a.k.a. open enrollment) to make coverage changes for 2015 runs from October 15, 2014, to December 7, 2014. For most people, this is the best – and sometimes only – opportunity to make coverage changes. (Exceptions are made for people who qualify for a special enrollment period – see Medicare & You at www.medicare.gov for details.)

If you already have traditional Medicare Parts A and B, you needn't make any changes; however, if you also have Part D, you must either reenroll in your current plan or choose another.

- During open enrollment you can:
- Switch from Medicare Parts A, B and D to Medicare Advantage or vice versa.
 - Switch from one Advantage plan offering drug coverage to one that doesn't or vice versa.
 - Join a Part D plan, switch from one plan to another or drop coverage altogether.

Current Advantage plan enrollees can also use the Medicare Advantage disenrollment period (January 1, 2015, to February 14, 2015) to switch back to Medicare Parts A, B and D. However they cannot:

- Switch from original Medicare to Medicare Advantage.
- Switch from one Advantage plan to another.
- Switch from one Part D plan to another.

When choosing next year's Part D plan:

- Carefully review your plan's "Annual Notice of Change" for substantive changes to premiums, deductibles, copayments, covered drugs, participating pharmacies, etc.
- Notice whether they've changed copayments/coinsurance for your medications or possibly

Veterans Post By Freddy Groves

Telehealth care

For the fiscal year 2014, which ended in September, the Department of Veterans Affairs took care of 690,000 veterans via 2 million Telehealth visits. That equals 12 percent of all veterans enrolled in VA health care.

More than half of veterans with Telehealth care live in rural areas, making it hard to get to clinics and hospitals, and not all physical locations can take care of all medical specialties. Granted, not every medical concern can be addressed via Telehealth, but there are more than 40 health specialties that can. Rehab, mental health, cardiology, neurology, occupational therapy and primary care are but a few. Surgical specialists also can be hooked in for consultations when required, both before and after surgery.

Telehealth works in two ways. With Asynchronous Telehealth, information such as medical images and voice recordings is stored in advance, then sent to the doctor for assessment. For veterans with diabetes, PTSD or heart failure, it's simple enough that vital signs can be sent via a telephone line. There even are digital stethoscopes and scales to help with weight-loss programs. A care coordinator keeps track of the information and works with the doctor to arrange any treatment changes or appointments.

With Synchronous Video Telehealth, both the doctor and the veteran are hooked up with a real-time video communication link for checkups, diagnoses and more. The doctor also can review previously uploaded data and order prescription changes on the spot. Besides the benefit of receiving care while at home, the VA even pays for the equipment.

If you're interested in Telehealth and a possible hookup at your home, call the Office of Telehealth Services at 202-461-6946. Online, go to www.telehealth.va.gov and read more about each type of service. On the left side of the screen, also scroll down to Newsletters.

'Shopping' trip costs Cowboy $29,500 for undies, cologne

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

The National Football League has put out a great product on the field this season but is still enduring a lot of negative press for players' antics off the field.

It's no secret that some of the trouble guys have gotten into is deplorable and inexcusable.

Believe me, just the fact that they are tough enough to play in the NFL proves how macho they are. They don't have to go out and prove it after the games are over.

But as bad as some of the behavior has been, the one act that has me scratching my head occurred just last week.

This act didn't involve any weapons, or any drugs, or any violence against kids or women or pets, it didn't involve illegal gambling or any kind of racial slurs.

In fact, the incident is relatively insignificant when compared to those other infractions – just a class B misdemeanor.

But it may be more mind-boggling than the others.

Dallas Cowboys running back Joseph Randle has played a crucial role for the team this year backing up DeMarco Murray.

Whenever the league's top rusher has needed a break, Randle has filled in admirably by gobbling up yards to help the team.

Unfortunately last week, Randle felt the need to gobble up some stuff to help himself.

Only thing is, he didn't feel the need to pay for it.

Randle, who has signed a four-year $2.3-million contract, walked into a Dallas-area mall and stole a tester bottle of Gucci cologne and a two-pack of Polo underwear valued at $123.

Now I make a fairly comfortable living and there have been many times that I've walked into a store, looked at an item I just had to have, looked at the price tag – and walked away empty handed.

I didn't just take it upon myself to take it out of the store anyway.

The big question is what would compel someone making $587,000 a year to steal $123 worth of merchandise?

Is it the fact that he is 22 but his brain is still functioning at the capacity of a 10-year-old?

Is he just an incurable kleptomaniac? Did he lose a bet with one of his buddies?

Who knows, all Randle said after he was caught is that he did something stupid.

I guess he thought he could save some money by stuffing the items in his bag but in reality, this may end up being the most expensive cologne and underwear he's ever purchased.

The Cowboys organization has said that there will be a substantial fine that Randle will have to take care of.

I hope for Randle's sake it was a super-special-colossal-fantastic-wonderful-once in a lifetime-type of underwear.

I mean this better be the kind of underwear that the Fruit of the Loom guys would be envious of.

The ironic thing is that Randle did his dirty deed a day after the Cowboys knocked off the Seattle Seahawks in one of the most important games of the year.

I don't know if this is the way Randle decided to celebrate or if he thought Cowboys players are now the toast of the town and don't have to pay for anything anymore.

He has to be quick enough to elude NFL defenders, maybe he was just seeing if he was fast enough to elude store security cameras?

Actually, Randle did tell police that he stole the items because he didn't want to take the time to pay for them.

That's honest and original – I wonder how many red lights he's driven through because he didn't want to take the time to stop?

To Randle's credit, he did seem apologetic when he faced his teammates about the incident, admitting to what he did and saying that he would work on being the best person he can be from this day forward.

Of course, those are only words and we've all heard those words before.

We've all dome monumentally stupid things at the age of 22.

The real measure of life is what you do with the penalties you receive due to that stupidity.

Hopefully, Randle will learn a valuable $29,500 lesson – the fine the Dallas Cowboys gave him – and settle for cheaper underwear.

And in one other twist, Randle will endorse – wait for it – underwear company MeUndies. MeUndies will pay a portion of the $29,500 fine and donate $15,000 worth of underwear and basic apparel to children in the Dallas area. Go figure.

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

Recorded for perplexity

Last month saw the end of Saturday-morning cartoons on network television. For the first time in 45 years, this time-trusted trick employed by parents in an attempt to sneak a little extra sleep on the weekend before being bombarded by demands for whatever ridiculous products the toy-making cartels are shilling during those hours of our neglect, that precious tradition is no more.

Not only do we lose a cultural touchstone, we also lose a lot of great sporting advice. Well, fear not kids, we are here to help. It often has been said that there are two ways to play sports: the right way or the wrong way. Well, cartoons offer another way... the third way. For posterity, some of those tips.

Baseball: When your team is down 40-0 in the fourth inning, it is a good time to re-evaluate your roster and question why the league would allow you to sign a 93-year-old ballplayer in the first place. Release that player, sign up a furry varmint that happens to be living in the outfield and have him play all nine positions simultaneously.

When pitching, be advised that one extra-slow pitched ball can be swung at and missed three times, greatly lowering your pitch count and strikeouts to innings-pitched ratio. When running the bases, always carry a framed picture of Betty Grable in your uniform so as to distract opposing fielders and break up close plays at the plate.

When hitting, feel free to use your choice of American wood ... in fact, you can use the entire trunk of the tree if you're able to swing it. In the field, should an opposing fielder hit one out of the park, you may follow the ball out of the park, hailing a taxi should the need arise, in order to catch the ball before it hits the ground.

Football: The key to winning in football is to somehow get the opposing defense to fall in on itself and form a giant pile that leaves just enough space for your star player – again, typically a rodent, hare or feline – to sneak through and score. Also, when returning kicks, the stiff arm has never been known to fail. Use it liberally and watch as the opposing defenders fall to the wayside with astonishing ease.

Boxing: If possible, wear a T-shirt into the ring and hide an iron plate behind said shirt. Also, the ropes are your friend. Use them to sling yourself across the ring like an arrow, bashing your opponent. This works especially well if you also place an iron inside your glove.

Outdoors: When hunting, should you come across one or two hunters who seem out of place, remain calm. One of them will level the shotgun in your face. His name will either be Elmer or Dick Cheney. Stick your fingers in the shotgun muzzle and render the weapon harmless.

The other, again, named Elmer or George, can be tricked into thinking it's not rabbit season or duck season (depending on what prey species you are trying to protect) if you engage him conversation long enough. This really works.

Basketball: Pick Jordan for your team. That guy can fly.

dropped some altogether. Ask your doctor whether comparable, covered drugs will work; otherwise you could pay much more next year.

- Even if your plan hasn't changed substantially, it's still wise to use the Medicare Plan Finder at www.medicare.gov to compare all available plans. You'll be prompted to enter your medications and dosages. The calculator then ranks plans by "star rating" and overall cost.

- Note: The lowest premium may not be your best bet – sometimes plans with higher monthly premiums have a lower overall cost due to their more favorable deductible, copayment and coinsurance amounts.

Medicare Advantage plans are HMO- or PPO-type alternatives to Medicare Parts A and B. Most cover drugs and some include extra benefits like vision and dental coverage at additional cost. They usually have lower deductibles and copayments but require you to use the plan's provider network. A few tips:

- If your Advantage plan includes drug coverage, you don't need Part D.
- Carefully review the "Annual Notice of Change" from your plan for any substantive changes.
- Even if your plan hasn't changed substantially, you can use the same Medicare Plan Finder as above to review available plans. As with Part D plans, an Advantage plan with a lower premium might have a higher overall cost, due to various restrictions.

Bottom line: Reviewing your Medicare options each year is complicated and time-consuming. But if you don't and your plans change significantly, it could cost you a bundle next year.

Your good health By Keith Roach, M.D.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am an active 63-year-old female of normal weight. I exercise several times a week and am in seemingly good health. About a year ago I noticed that my eyebrows were disappearing, starting on the outer edges. They are now almost completely gone. During my annual physical in November, my general physician found that I have thyroid nodules. Three large ones were biopsied and proved negative. Blood work, including a TSH level, is normal. Both my GP and dermatologist feel certain that the nodules are not causing the eyebrow problem, because I don't have any other symptoms of thyroid disease, but they don't know what is causing the loss. — K.F.

The loss of eyebrows, superciliary madarosis, has many possible causes, but low thyroid is the first one that most doctors think of. A TSH level is a reasonable screening test for thyroid disease, but if the suspicion is high, I check additional thyroid tests, such as thyroxine (T4), free T4 and T3. Occasionally TSH still can be in the very broad "normal" range for most people but be abnormal for that person.

Other causes of eyebrow loss include autoimmune disease, inflammatory skin conditions and infection. Repeated plucking of the eyebrows can lead to permanent loss of the follicles. Allergies to cosmetics also can cause eyebrow and eyelash loss. Have you changed your makeup recently?

DEAR DR. ROACH: My wife continually tells me that I should not drink reheated coffee because it concentrates the acid in coffee and is bad for me. I never drink more than one cup per day, and I always use a non-dairy creamer and Splenda. I have researched this question online and several responses say it is not harmful. In the meantime, she drinks orange juice every day, which has a lower pH than coffee. She sometimes complains about acid indigestion. Your comments? — A.

Acid is measured by the pH scale — with the lower the number, the more acid in the liquid. Coffee has a pH of about 5, slightly acidic, whereas orange juice has a pH of 3, which means it is a hundred times more acidic. Reheating coffee should not change the acid concentration.

Your stomach has a pH of about 1.5 — much more acid than either juice or coffee. The caffeine in coffee can stimulate your stomach to make more acid, and can weaken the sphincter muscle that keeps the stomach acid from going up into the esophagus. However, if it isn't bothering you, there is no reason to stop drinking coffee.

One cup of juice usually doesn't cause acid indigestion either.

DEAR DR. ROACH: What is a hammer toe? Is surgery always necessary? — R.H.

A hammer toe is a deformity of the second, third or fourth toe, where it stays permanently bent. It may be caused by wearing shoes with too little toe room. Roomy shoes are always a good idea, and taping may be tried if the toe is still bendable.

Surgery is used in cases of pain that doesn't respond to conservative treatments. Surgery should not be done just for cosmetic reasons.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu. SISD breakfast

On October 13, the Socorro Independent School District began providing free breakfast to all high school students as part of the Universal Free Breakfast Program. SISD is the only district in Region 19 to offer free breakfast to all high school students regardless of income status. The breakfasts are available at various serving sites such as portable stations and snack bars to offer grab and go meals before school starts. In addition, second-chance breakfasts are offered at a later time in order to allow students involved in early morning activities to have the opportunity to eat breakfast. "By providing free breakfasts for our high school students, SISD is leading the way to give students what they need to stay healthy and be successful in the classroom," said Child Nutrition Services director Shelley Chenausky. "Implementing the program also allows Team SISD to prepare students to be college and career ready and to strengthen home, school and community partnerships. Free, nutritious breakfasts get students ready for the day and helps out families, too." The meals will follow USDA dietary guidelines to offer nutritious meals. The free breakfasts will benefit students academically and physically. When students eat a healthy breakfast it can improve their test scores, their behavior in the classroom and their daily attendance. Research also shows that children who eat breakfast also tend to have more adequate nutrient intake and it helps them maintain a healthy body weight.

STRANGE BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

- It was beloved American author Kurt Vonnegut who made the following sage observation: "Laughing or crying is what a human being does when there's nothing else he can do."

- If you removed all the phosphorus from your body, you'd have enough to make about 250 matchheads.

- Those who study such things say that boys who have first names that are considered to be strange or peculiar have a higher incidence of mental problems as adults than boys with more traditional names. The correlation was not found to hold true for girls.

- The next time you're at a holiday gathering and someone has had a bit too much to drink, you can say that person is cherubimical; it's much nicer than calling a family member a drunk.

- You may have learned that the distress signal SOS stands for "Save Our Ship," but that's a myth. That signal was chosen because in Morse Code, it's easy to remember and transmit the three dots, three dashes and three dots that represent those letters.

- There was a time when it was illegal in Hawaii for a woman to eat a coconut.

- According to the Guinness Book of World Records, the oldest documented living parrot is more than 80 years old. Cookie, a Major Mitchell's cockatoo, has lived at the Brookfield Zoo in Illinois since May 1934.

- The New Orleans Saints were admitted to the National Football League on Nov. 1, 1966 – All Saints' Day. The team, however, was named for the iconic New Orleans jazz song "When the Saints Go Marching In."

- If you're an American who has a garden, you're more likely to be growing tomatoes than any other vegetable or fruit.

Thought for the Day: "You can pretend to be serious; you can't pretend to be witty."

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
