Presidential planes

The first president to have his own dedicated aircraft was Franklin Roosevelt, says the Association of Mature American Citizens. He used it only twice and it was not called Air Force One way back then. It had the nickname, Sacred Cow. Harry Truman called his plane Independence after his hometown of Independence, MO. President Eisenhower continued using Independence but added a pair of Lockheed Super Constellations to the presidential fleet. He called them Columbine One and Two. It wasn't until 1962 that the official designation, Air Force One, was established for the aircraft whose principal passengers are U.S. presidents. But, the first American president to take to the skies was Theodore Roosevelt on October 11, 1910, reports AMAC. Granted, Teddy was out of office at the time. It happened 18 months after he left office at an airstrip in Kinloch, a small town in Missouri.

A PLACE WITH MEANING – For two centuries, Hispanic and Native American pilgrims have made spiritual journeys to El Santuario de Chimayo and often carry along photos of sick relatives and requests for miracles. A pilgrim from Las Cruces, NM years ago left a note in the shrine advising: “If you are a stranger, If you are weary from the struggles in life, Whether you have a handicap, Whether you have a broken heart, Follow the long mountain road, Find a home in Chimayo...”

Clean desk, finances: Five steps to streamline money management

If your financial life is confined to boxes, file cabinets and various piles of statements and receipts that only you can navigate, it might be time for a little de-cluttering.

Software- and Internet-driven advancements (<http://guides.wsj.com/personal-finance/managing-your-money/how-to-choose-and-use-financial-software/>) in money management not only provide paperless alternatives to planning and tracking savings, spending and investments, they make finances easier to handle in an emergency. If you're thinking about resetting your recordkeeping, here are some steps to get started.

Think about financial goals first. Before tackling the job of reorganizing your financial recordkeeping, think through your current financial objectives and what changes might give you better data and efficiency to achieve them. You might want a system that tracks spending, saving, budgeting and on-time debt payments. If you already have that system in place, you might want more detailed information on retirement or your child's college fund. Consider involving your financial and tax advisors in the discussion and see what suggestions they have.

Create a system that makes it easy for loved ones and financial professionals to help in an emergency. If something were to happen to you, could a loved one easily navigate your finances? When organizing, always keep your spouse, children and/or executor in mind. Consider creating an ICE file, short for "In Case of Emergency," and let your representatives see it in advance. On paper or on a computer document or spreadsheet, your ICE file should be a handy guide or index to find the following quickly:

- Contact information for doctors as well as financial and tax advisors;
- Locations for all essential estate documents including your will, your health and financial powers of attorney and any letters of instruction you have written to accompany these documents;
- All ownership documents for real estate, autos and other major assets;
- Usernames and passwords for Internet-accessible financial accounts as well as personal websites and social media (http://www.practicalmoneyskills.com/personalfinance/experts/practicalmoneymatters/columns_2012/0706_socialMedia.php) if such items need to eventually be updated or removed;
- Contact information and statement access for all savings, investment and debt accounts, particularly joint accounts that will be used to pay bills;
- An up-to-date list of monthly bills that need to be paid on time; and

• All insurance information including health, home, auto, disability and business policies.

Know what paper documents you need to keep or shred. Here are some general rules:

- Keep: All tax-related documents for up to seven years, including annual tax returns; statements that show a gain or a sale of a security or the purchase or sale of a major asset like real estate; mortgage documents, vehicle titles and insurance policies; multiple copies of birth and death certificates; marriage licenses and divorce decrees; deeds and title documents.

- Shred: With identity theft on the rise, it is generally better to shred financial documents before they go in the garbage. After recording all transactions, immediately shred the store and ATM receipts and credit card statements. After a year, shred monthly bank account statements unless you or a family member are close to qualifying for state Medicaid benefits. States generally require applicants to save bank and investment statements for anywhere from three to five years to qualify.

Estate documents and directives generally should be kept in their original paper form in a safe, accessible place with copies as advised. Other documents can be digitally scanned for printout as needed. Many all-in-one printers have a document-scanning feature and today, there are scanning apps available for smartphones as well.

Finally, no matter how you revise your recordkeeping, create a backup system. If you are wedded to paper documents, consider keeping copies at a secure offsite location or with a trusted friend or relative. If you've gone digital, external hard drives or cloud storage are possibilities. Above all, protect all password information and regularly check your credit

Filing despite the obstacles

It used to be that a veteran could literally put a name and phone number on a piece of paper, write a line or two about wanting to file a claim, and the Department of Veterans Affairs would be responsible for getting in touch to help fill out a form. The start date began when that first correspondence was received, and the veteran had a year to finish sending the information.

Now back-of-the-envelope filing is no more. As of March 2015, claims must follow a set of new requirements and be on specific forms to be considered.

As a result, a second lawsuit has been filed against the VA. Disabled American Veterans and Veterans of Foreign Wars have added their voice to a suit filed earlier by the American Legion, Vietnam Veterans of America, AMVETS and the National Veterans Legal Services Program.

Their objection: Veterans who can't access the online forms or who cannot fill them out not only lose benefits, but lose the start date on the claim.

Best advice: Find someone to help you go online and start a file, either a VSO, your grandchild, the chaplain at your American Legion Post or your attorney's secretary. You'll then have a year to complete the information. Online, look for Form 21-0966, which is your Intent to File. Fill it out and send to your regional benefits office. Then you'll need Form 21-526EZ, the form for officially filing your claim.

If that's impossible right now, call the VA at 1-800-827-1000 and say that you intend to file. They'll have to take your initial info over the phone. You then have a year to follow up.

Clínica Guadalupeana gets funding

- Photo courtesy Project Vida

The U.S. Department of Health & Human Services/Health Resources & Services Administration (HRSA) recently awarded Project Vida over $440,000 to re-furbish and re-open Clínica Guadalupeana in far east El Paso County. The Cincinnati-based Sisters of Charity established Clínica Guadalupeana in 1995 to serve families in the Agua Dulce colonia outside Horizon City. The clinic closed in 2010 due to financial pressures of providing uncompensated care. As a major provider of health care in underserved areas of the City of El Paso, East El Paso County and Hudspeth County, Project Vida applied for HRSA funds to re-open Clínica Guadalupeana to provide access to primary and preventive care in the Agua Dulce neighborhood. The HRSA funds will allow Project Vida to re-furbish and staff the Clínica Guadalupeana facility. A ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held in several months when the clinic is ready to receive patients. Project Vida currently operates clinics in the City of El Paso's Chamizal, northeast and central areas; in the Sparks and Montana Vista colonias of far east El Paso County; and in Fort Hancock, Dell City and Sierra Blanca in Hudspeth County.

SB 149 provides hope to 21 Canutillo High seniors

Law provides graduation alternative to seniors

By Shane Griffith
Special to the Courier

CANUTILLO – In a welcome move for public school districts across Texas, Governor Greg Abbott signed Senate Bill 149 into law last week to provide nearly 28,000 students who passed at least three of the five end-of-course (EOC) assessments with an alternate route to graduation.

“The Class of 2015 is the first graduating class required to pass the State of Texas Assessments of Academic Readiness (STAAR) end-of-course exams in order to graduate,” Abbott said. “While it is critical that the state appropriately holds public schools and districts accountable for delivering the best possible education, we must protect Texas students from being penalized as a result of evolving testing standards. SB 149 protects students from undue penalization, and guarantees that students who meet specified requirements are able to graduate.”

Implemented in 2011-2012 when the former Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills (TEKS) transformed into STAAR, high school seniors initially had to pass 15 EOC exams to graduate, which are now five EOC exams: English I, English II, Algebra I, Biology, and U.S. History.

At Canutillo ISD, 21 seniors currently enrolled at Canutillo High School have passed at least three of their EOC exams. The new law now makes it possible for them to receive their diplomas only after satisfying the following conditions:

- The attendance review committee must determine that the students completed all of their credits, have satisfactory attendance (at least 90%) and successfully completed any applicable principal plans for additional hours of lesson time during after school hours.

- An Individual Graduation Committee (IGC) is created for each student who passed three or four of the EOC exams comprised of the school’s principal or designee, the teacher of the failed EOC course, the teacher’s department head, and the parent/guardian. At CISD, the counselor and the Language Proficiency Assessment Committee (LPAC) representative will also be invited.

- The IGC must unanimously approve the student to receive his/her diploma after considering an extensive list of key data points including the recommendation of the student’s teacher in the course of the failed EOC, the student’s grade for the course of the failed EOC, number of hours of completed remediation, student’s school attendance rate, performance on any dual credit, SAT/ACT/ASVAB exams, AP exams, TELPAS exam, and acquisition of any CTE credentials and certificates, among others.

“Our mission is to produce college- and career-ready students, and the future success of our students and community is based on more than just one data point,” said Dr. Pedro Galavíz, CISD Superintendent. “I am grateful to our state legislators and Governor Abbott for supporting this law that will strengthen the quality of a CISD diploma by increasing the level of engagement and participation of our students, teachers and parents through the rigorous individual graduation committee process.”

STRANGE BUT TRUE

- It was the fourth U.S. president, James Madison, who made the following sage observation: “I believe there are more instances of the abridgement of the rights of the people by the gradual and silent encroachments of those in power than by violent and sudden usurpations.”

- Though the reasons are unclear, researchers have found that children of Mexican descent are less likely to have attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) than children of other ethnicities.

- In some cultures, slurping your soup is considered to be a compliment to the chef, while here in the U.S., it’s frowned upon as demonstrating bad manners. In New Jersey, however, it goes a bit further; in that state, public slurping of soup is illegal.

- If you suffer from pupaphobia, you experience an unreasonable fear of puppets and dolls.

- During the 14th century, so many people in the city of Avignon, France, died from the Black Plague that Pope Clement consecrated the Rhone River to allow masses of bodies to be laid to rest in its waters.

- Before the middle of the 18th century, it was not unusual for members of a play’s audience to be seated onstage, just a few feet from the performance. If viewers thought an actor’s performance was particularly bad, they might even try to bump the performer off the stage.

Chimayo, perhaps one of New Mexico's most picturesque and most photographed adobe churches.

Most people, however, don't just visit for the quaint appearance or quiet atmosphere; they go there for the miracles.

The Chimayo chapel is home to individuals in need of healing, be it spiritual, physical, emotional, or mental; for the shrine is known to possess holy sand, which believers say can help cure illness.

Chimayo is a National Historic Landmark and some 300,000 people are estimated to visit each year. The shrine is a time capsule of reverent pilgrims' notes and prayers, homemade crosses, votive candles, and crutches left behind.

For two centuries, Hispanic and Native American pilgrims have made spiritual journeys to El Santuario de Chimayo and often carry along photos of sick relatives and requests for miracles.

Next door to the Chimayo chapel is another shrine called Santo Nino de Atocha, built in 1856. Here parents of sick children, especially infants, leave toys, clothing, photos and notes seeking miracles in curing autism and other rare conditions.

Native Americans came to this place on the Rio Santa Cruz to soak their ailing bodies in the healing mineral waters long before the arrival of the Spaniards. Local legend tells that in 1813, on the evening of Good Friday, Don Bernardo Abeyta had a vision that led him to discover the Crucifix de Nuestro Señor de Esquipulas, the "Black Christ of Guatemala," buried in the bank of the river.

Through a series of mysterious events, villagers believed El Señor de Esquipulas could not be removed from the site and that Don Bernardo Abeyta was spared from death by the deity. By 1816 local families built a wood framed adobe chapel over the sacred site. Faithful pilgrims have come to the chapel ever since seeking remedies and cures from "Our Lord of Esquipulas" and the healing powers of El Posito, the sacred earth from beneath El Santuario, where the Crucifix was discovered.

El Santuario de Chimayo is often referred to as the "Our Lady of America". The crucifix still resides on the chapel altar, but for some reason its curative powers have been overshadowed by El Posito, the "sacred sand pit" from which it sprang, which gapes unevenly behind the main altar.

Also in proximity to the site is a restaurant, a burrito stand (Leona's de Chimayo), and gift shop that sells everything from souvenir T-shirts to refrigerator magnets. No miracle sand-in-a-bag, but the gift store sells empty "Blessed Dirt" petri dishes that you can fill up with sand from the shrine.

A welcome center provides visitors to each important station – the Chapel, the Madonna Gardens, Our Lady of Sorrows Monument, the Prayer Portal, and more. A new sculpture, the Three Cultures Monument, depicts the meeting of a Native American, a white cowboy, and a Hispanic vaquero under a benevolent figure of the Virgin Mary.

Though the back roads to the shrine were not paved until the 1970s, modern pilgrims follow much the same routes that have been traversed over the barren land for nearly 200 years.

On U.S. Highway 84/285, travelers to the chapel now pass by Indian casinos and crosses on the side of the busy six-lane highway. Visitors still come from towns along the historic Camino Real – Santa Fe, Socorro, Las Cruces, El Paso, and from towns farther along the old route reaching deep into Mexico.

So, this summer consider making your weekend getaways an inspirational one and visit this unique place of solace.

Yepremian made the highlight reel on and off the field

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

All professional sports franchises are littered with phenomenal athletes who do phenomenal things on the court, ice or field.

We all have memories of that incredible catch or that amazing run or that clutch hit or that game-winning basket.

The finesse, power and agility of some of these athletes almost defy belief.

And once in a while you have those moments of unbelievable athletic achievement occurring in the biggest moments of the biggest games.

It's no secret that many of the members of the 1972 Miami Dolphins raise a drink in celebration once the final unbeaten team loses every year.

Why? Because those Dolphins are the only team in NFL Super Bowl history to finish the season undefeated. They went 17-0 and knocked off the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl VII.

Some teams have come pretty close to matching Miami's achievement, but no dice.

Anyway, going back to gifted athletes rising to the occasion in the most important games, Super Bowl VII had none of that.

In fact, it may be the most boring Super Bowl ever played.

Let's put it this way, the most memorable play in that game was made by the most non-athletic person on the field, who committed such a monumental blunder that it has been replayed about 177-bazillion times since.

Garo Yepremian, the kicker for the Dolphins was very good at what he did. He was one of the very best kickers in the league.

But he may have been the most non-traditional player ever to make an NFL roster.

The guy stood 5-foot-8 and he weighed 175 pounds and he was from Cyprus. Not exactly your average first-round draft choice material.

But again, once that football was snapped and placed on the ground, Yepremian was almost automatic.

Unfortunately, his athletic prowess ended there... abruptly.

With the Dolphins already up 14-0 in the fourth quarter, Yepremian attempted a field goal that would basically put the game out of reach.

His kick was blocked and that's when the fireworks started. Yepremian picked up the blocked ball and started to run with it at a speed that turtles and snails would make fun of.

With defenders barreling down on him, Garo did the worst thing he could think of – he tried to throw the ball.

Like a new-born calf after a few drinks, Yepremian rumbled, bumbled and stumbled his way to the right a few steps and tried to throw the ball but it slipped out of his hand. He tried to catch it but all he did was knock it up further into the air.

Washington's Mike Bass caught the ball out of the sky and returned it for the Redskins' only touchdown of the game.

Fortunately for the Dolphins, they were able to hang on for a 14-7 win and the unbeaten season.

And good or bad, Garo Yepremian's name will live on forever for that play that has provided laughs to countless sports fans over the last 40 years.

Yepremian died of cancer last week at the age of 70.

Hearing about his death brought back great memories of that time. I was about 12 years old back then and ate, drank and slept sports. Now I just write about them.

I remember that I was really impressed by the way he handled the whole embarrassing episode. He kind of shrugged his shoulders and admitted he was a kicker and not a football player – if you know what I mean.

Of course that play was a lot easier to swallow because the Dolphins won. If they had lost he would have been in Bill Buckner, Chris Webber, Scott Norwood and Pete Carroll territory.

Yepremian spent his recent years working at his foundation, which raised money to fight brain cancer.

Ironically, it's brain cancer that took Yepremian's life.

He may not have been one of those gifted athletes we all pay too much money to watch, but he made it a lot farther than most athletes ever will.

And even though he lacked the agility and grace we've come to expect from our athletes on the field – it was his grace off the field that made him an all-star.

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

It's never over

If Yogi Berra had a "career year," it was all of them. He loved his childhood, loved his career, loves his retirement. People love him and he loves people. Not bad for a guy from "The Hill" in St. Louis who once signed on to catch a ball and swing a bat for the Yankees for $500.

He's a man so simple, he's complex. His real name is Lawrence, but the players called him "Yogi" because he used to sit with his arms and legs crossed while he waited to bat, like a yogi, they thought, showing pretty remarkable cultural range for ballplayers, actually.

His numbers can't be quantified, they're baffling as they are great, but don't take my word for it. Baseball statistician Bill James has proclaimed him the greatest catcher to ever play the game, and since I can never figure out all of his kooky algorithms, I'll take his word for it. I do know this: In 15 seasons, he was elected to 18 All-Star games. See? Baffling.

One year he didn't make an error behind the plate. Another year he had more home runs than strikeouts. He never struck out more than 35 times in a season, and he never had more strikeouts than RBIs. One day in the minor leagues, he batted in a total of 23 runs in two games (it was a doubleheader). In his first game for the Yankees, he hit a home run. His rookie year he was almost voted the league's MVP. He hit the first pinch-hit home run in World Series history. He is famously seen jumping into the arms of Don Larson after catching his perfect game in the World Series, and famously seen jumping all over an umpire after Jackie Robinson stole home with him behind the plate. He has 13 World Series championship rings.

It's been said that a lot of the things Yogi said, he didn't say. One of the famous lines, "It ain't over 'till it's over" was not uttered by Yogi as a Yankee, as many believe. He said that as the manager of the New York Mets, whom he managed during the early 70s, guiding their improbable run to the 1972 World Series.

Yogi started as a manager for the Yankees during the early 1960s, and he was fired when he had an altercation of some sort with a player over a harmonica. In the 80s, he was shafted by George Steinbrenner in the most ugly way imaginable, after only 16 games, after receiving George's "word" that he wouldn't be fired.

But a lot of time has passed, and it only seems like yesterday that Yogi was bouncing around the field, coaching Jorge Posada during spring training in his 70s. He's just turned 90, and most everyone of his era, and his beloved wife, Carmine, have moved on to the big ball orchard in the sky. Still, Yogi can be found on the sideline during special occasions, hat off, as the names of the dearly departed flash on the screen, saying what everyone couldn't say more or less perfectly:

"I hope I never see my name up there."

We three, Yogi.

Your good health By Keith Roach, M.D.

DEAR DR. ROACH: My husband had a severe case of shingles in October 2013. He still has pain. He was given Lyrica. Sometimes it helps, but his memory is affected. I'm leery about giving it to him. I've been giving him ibuprofen, which helps sometimes. Can you give me any advice? – R.C.

Many medicines are used to treat post-herpetic neuralgia, the pain that often follows shingles. This pain can be very severe and tends to be more prolonged the older you are.

Pregabalin (Lyrica) is an effective medication for many people, but changes in memory certainly could be a side effect. I would be leery of giving it, too. There are several other classes of medication he can try. If his doctor is uncomfortable trying something else, a neurologist or pain specialist can help. Sometimes, small doses of several medications work better than higher doses of just one.

Giving the shingles vaccine does not help once you have post-herpetic neuralgia, but it can prevent many cases, and most people who could benefit from the vaccine haven't had it. Shingles questions are among the most frequently asked. The booklet on the shingles virus answers many of them. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 1201W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have been using MSG on my food as a flavor enhancement about all of my life. Some of my health-conscious friends say that using MSG is like putting "rat poison" on your food. I respond by saying putting salt on your food is worse than putting MSG on it. Does MSG deserve its bad reputation? – K.T.

Some people have a sensitivity to monosodium glutamate, an amino acid normally present in food that is used as a flavor enhancer. Symptoms can include headache, muscle aches, nausea and other symptoms. It is particularly well-absorbed in liquid form, such as soups, especially those in Asian restaurants.

If you don't have a sensitivity to MSG, it is a very safe food additive. It does have some sodium, but in the usual amounts used, does not deserve its reputation.

DEAR DR. ROACH: You mentioned a treatment for ureter cancer called BCG. I would appreciate more information on this treatment. – M.T.

The ureters are the tubes that carry urine from the kidney to the bladder. They are lined with the same kinds of cells as the bladder itself. So, ureteral cancer acts in many ways like bladder cancer. Often, multiple cancers are diagnosed at the same time. Surgery is the standard treatment for ureteral cancer, and the only way for a cure. Bacille Calmette-Guerin (BCG) is a weakened tuberculosis bacteria that is used for some cases of bladder and ureteral carcinoma-in-situ, an early, non-invasive form of precancer. It can be very prostate cancer. Doctors treated him for several months in the hospital. But when the Fayetteville, NC veteran, who lived alone, was returned to his home, he found that his cupboard was bare, according to the Association of Mature American Citizens. What happened next was a Frank Capra moment. The director of all those heart-warming 40s flicks would have had a heyday with this plot. Not knowing where to turn, the lonely old man picked up the phone and called 911. "Whatever you can do to help. I can't do anything. I can't go anywhere. I can't get out of my damn chair," he told the operator. "What I need is someone to get me to the grocery store... I need to eat something." It wasn't a typical 911 call for help, but that didn't stop the operator and local police and the 911 operator, herself, from responding to the emergency. They immediately delivered the food Blackmon needed and then proceeded to conduct a personal fundraiser to ensure he would stay well fed. A good cop will do that, you know.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
