Protect your pipes

With the coldest temperatures of the season expected to arrive this week, El Paso Water urges you to “Protect Your Pipes” to avoid costly repairs to your home or business. “The average home loses about 10,000 gallons a year due to leaks,” said Alan Shubert, Vice President of Operations and Technical Services. “Customers should be proactive with protecting their home and pocketbook.” Outdoor plumbing and faucets are vulnerable to severely cold temperatures. EPWater recommends these tips to avoid broken pipes:

- Insulate exposed pipes and faucets outside and around your home, including those in unheated areas like basements, garages, attics or crawl-spaces.
 - In severe cold only, let cold water drip from faucets served by exposed pipes. Running a drip of water through the pipes helps prevent pipes from freezing because the temperature of the water is above freezing.
 - If a pipe does break on your property, know where your water meter is and how to turn water off immediately to avoid further damage and water waste.
 - If you will be away for several days, turn off your water at the meter or ask someone to monitor your home in your absence.
 - EPWater also urges customers to inspect their outdoor plumbing and monitor their water meter to ensure they are not dealing with any unknown leaks, which could increase their bill and make their pipes even more vulnerable to the cold. Remember, property owners are responsible for water pipes that start at the meter and run throughout your property. If customers have abnormally high water usage as a result of a water leak, you may qualify for a leak adjustment and get a partial credit on your bill. Call EPWater Customer Service at 594-5500 to learn more about the program. Customers can visit <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=g25YqGZpvgY&t=2s> to see some of these tips in action here.

Scholarship fund for SEHS graduates

SAN ELIZARIO – The Council on Regional Economic Expansion and Educational Development (CREEED) established a new scholarship known as the Sylvia Hopp San Elizario College Scholarship Fund, that will support a San Elizario High School (SEHS) graduating senior in pursuing a college degree.

The fund will award a total of $25,000 in scholarships over the next eight years to help students cover their college tuition or other costs associated with attending and completing college.

“Sylvia Hopp spent more than 40 years strengthening our education system so more students could graduate with the skills and knowledge necessary to thrive in college and the workforce,” said Richard A. Castro, Chairman of the CREEED Board. “We could not think of a better way to honor her legacy than by establishing this scholarship.”

Lorena Robledo, a senior at SEHS, says that this scholarship is another way to motivate students to continue their education and pursue a college degree.

“For most students like myself, we want to attend college but money can be an issue,” said Robledo. “In some cases, students only receive enough financial aid to cover their college tuition but not for books so this scholarship will definitely help take care of that or other college necessities,” said Robledo.

The first scholarship will be awarded to a graduating senior in spring of 2018.

First Chance could waive pot charges for community service

Program follows similar policies in Dallas and Harris counties

EL PASO COUNTY – El Paso County and city’s new First Chance program will provide first-time offenders, who are found with four ounces or less of marijuana, with a second chance. However, anyone caught with the small amount of marijuana in addition to facing another charge will not be eligible.

El Paso County commissioners approved the new program unanimously in October. El Paso Sheriff Richard Wiles publicly stated that his department is in full support. Wiles noted that the program will give first-time offenders the chance to prevent a future of illegal drug use and added that it will also free up police resources.

The City of El Paso followed suit a couple of weeks later, when the El Paso Police Department and City Manager Tommy Gonzalez signed a

FIRST CHANCE – First time offenders that are caught with four ounces or less of marijuana in El Paso County could face community service hours instead of criminal charges. The First Chance program will only apply to the sole misdemeanor charge of marijuana. People who are caught with marijuana in addition to another charge will not qualify, El Paso County Sheriff Richard Wiles, above left, said. City of El Paso Police Chief Greg Allen is on the right.

memorandum of understanding with the county to participate in the First Chance program.

El Paso Police Chief Greg Allen stated that he is looking at the program from an "efficiency point of view." Allen commented that he is not for any legalization or legitimization of marijuana, but he explained that it was time-consuming and burdensome to have a police officer spend a large portion of his or her shift booking someone into jail on "an arrest that has no end result of a conviction because of jury nullification".

The memorandum formally establishes the First Chance program procedures between the county and the city. The program means that first time offenders, who are caught with four ounces or less of marijuana by El Paso county sheriffs or city police, could face community service hours instead of criminal charges. The program includes a fee of $100.

District Attorney Jaime Esparza pointed out that there were more than 2,600 cases of possession of small amounts of marijuana in 2016. "Of those 2,600 cases, we have 700 people who we would classify as first offenders," he said. "These are people who are arrested solely on a possession of marijuana charge, nothing more."

The program only applies to the sole misdemeanor charge of marijuana. People who are caught with marijuana in addition to another charge will not qualify, county and city officials emphasized.

The memorandum also mandates that the El Paso District Attorney's office provide the attorneys and clerical staff necessary to operate a 24-hour unit that will be accessible to the police department to support the program.

The Texas Department of Public Safety and other law enforcement agencies are not yet participating in the program, but Esparza expressed that he hopes to expand the program to include them in the future.

Esparza explained that the program will be across the board for both El Paso Police Department and the El Paso Sheriff's Department. He stated that officers will offer the program at the time of the offense to the offender, who will then have the option to accept it or be arrested.

"This program will provide an educational opportunity to first time offenders with the intent to prevent their future use of illegal drugs. It will eliminate minor drug convictions that could have long lasting negative effects on their ability to pursue certain types of employment and higher education opportunities," Esparza asserted.

"Additionally, it will result in a savings to taxpayers by freeing up police officers and deputies to handle more important law enforcement duties, prevent unnecessary bookings into the county jail, and prevent a long and costly court process," Esparza stated.

First time offenders who qualify will have five business days to report to the CJC Department (Department of Criminal Justice and Criminology) in the county, pay the administrative fee of $100 and do eight hours of community service within 60 days," Esparza explained. Those who do not report to the CJC department or do not complete

Veterans Post By Freddy Groves

Vietnam parasite is killing vets

A year ago, bile duct cancer seen in Vietnam veterans was a hot topic in the news, briefly. Now it's fallen out of the headlines – but it hasn't stopped affecting veterans, and a U.S. senator is calling for a federal study.

Bile duct cancer in veterans who served in Vietnam (or Korea, Thailand or Laos) no doubt comes from eating fish contaminated with a water-borne parasitic worm called a fluke, from being in or washing with fresh water, or from drinking river water. Decades later, the presence of the worm in the liver bile ducts causes cancer (cholangiocarcinoma) that has nearly no initial symptoms. It's only when the cancer is very advanced that symptoms appear.

The www.publichealth.va.gov website lists "jaundice (yellowing of the skin and the whites of the eyes), pain in the abdomen, dark urine, light or 'clay' colored stool, fever, itchy skin, nausea and vomiting, and unexplained weight loss" as symptoms of bile duct cancer. Additionally, the disease is rare in the United States. If you have any suspicions at all, tell your doctor, ideally a doctor with the Department of Veterans Affairs.

If you have cancer, file a claim. More claims for bile duct cancer have been approved:

- www.va.gov/vetapp15/Files4/1528691.txt;
- www.va.gov/vetapp13/Files1/1301261.txt;
- www.va.gov/vetapp12/files1/1206119.txt; and
- www.va.gov/vetapp11/files5/1144474.txt

The first veterans (or their spouses, after the veteran died) who applied for benefits were turned down. That is slowly changing. But it's going to be a long haul to have the disease classified as a presumptive – just like Agent Orange.

One step toward getting the cancer listed as a presumptive is to get the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine to look at the correlation between the cancer and the flukes, as Sen. Chuck Schumer has requested. His number is (202) 224-6542.

Commuting to work can be a hassle

When temperatures drop below freezing, drivers face the danger of skidding on icy roads. However, on a recent frigid morning in the U.K., commuters discovered there was more to fear than the ice, reports the Association of Mature American Citizens. Police throughout England reported that the country's car thieves were out in droves. In fact, car owners who popped indoors while their motors were running to de-ice their windshields were calling in to report car thefts at an alarming rate of one every five minutes. It is difficult, at best, to "hot wire" new cars; you need a key. As one wag put it: "to car thieves, frosty mornings are a Christmas gift."

San Eli ISD board, superintendent, form 'Team of Eight'

By Hector Gonzalez
Special to the Courier

SAN ELIZARIO – It is rare for a local school district to have its school board members along with their superintendent come together as a full team to participate in the annual team-building session facilitated by ESC Region 19. In the case of the San Elizario Independent School District (SEISD), that rarity has become a reality.

SEISD Board of Trustees, with Superintendent Dr. Jeannie Meza-Chavez, successfully completed the team-building session. The session's purpose is to enhance the effectiveness of the school board-superintendent team and assess the continuing education needs of both parties.

The session lasted about three hours and included a review of the roles, rights, and responsibilities of the Board as well as key topics such as curriculum and instruction, business and finance operations, and district operations.

"These orientations and sessions are important because they are designed to improve the relations between the Superintendent and Board of Trustees to further improve the leadership of the school district," said SEISD Board President Irene D. Jaquez.

"I could not be more elated that we had full participation in this essential activity in my first year leading San Elizario ISD," said Meza-Chavez. "This shows the high level of potential we have to continue to build the best educational opportunities for our students."

Meza-Chavez considered this moment a big deal. "What can I say – times are great when you have the 'Team of Eight.'"

UTEP athletics could really, really, use some good news

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

There's an old saying that I've heard since I was just a little sports fan and it goes like this, "no news is good news."

I was never really sure if that was true or not, but after observing UTEP athletics over the last few months, I believe in those words more than ever.

There has been a ton of news coming out of UTEP sports lately and it seems like none of it has been good.

We've all finally awakened from the nightmare of a football season in which the Miners lost all 12 games they played. They were so bad that all their losses, except one, were by double digits.

The usually reliable basketball team has lost six of its first eight games.

Attendance at both the football and basketball games has been abysmal, and fan interest, except for the few diehards still among us, has been severely lacking.

And all that is just the news coming from the play on the field.

The more upsetting news has come from developments off the field.

First, the athletic director, Bob Stull, announces that he is retiring and leaving the program as soon as the school can find a replacement.

Second, after constantly saying he was going nowhere, football coach Sean Kugler resigned just five games into the season.

Then, on the same day Stull's successor is introduced to the crowd, basketball coach Tim Floyd announced that he has had enough and is retiring immediately just six games into the season.

I wonder what UTEP would give right now for one of those "no news" weeks.

So at the moment, UTEP is without a head football coach or any recruits for next season. Assistant Phil Johnson has taken over the basketball team on an interim basis, and maybe most important of all, Jim Senter has taken over as the new athletic director.

Senter has been saddled with the difficult task of making UTEP sports great again.

Just "competitive" would be nice.

Talk about a tough situation. While

Senter was in El Paso a couple weeks ago he was able to witness a Sun Bowl that was just 20-percent full for UTEP's final home game and he saw about 7,500 empty Don Haskins Center seats in the Miners' loss to Lamar.

Senter accepted the UTEP job knowing his first order of business was to hire a new football coach. He had no idea he would lose his basketball coach too.

Now everyone is wondering whether Senter is up to the task. What he said while he was here was encouraging. Especially about going out into the community and marketing the program.

It's no secret that UTEP has severely lacked in any imaginative marketing strategies or fun gimmicks to get fans to attend. They even struggle to get their own students to show up.

Senter said he wants to hold a series of town hall-like meetings in different parts of El Paso to hear what fans think should be done to improve things.

I think that's a great idea. If nothing else, for the first time in ages, El Pasoans will at least feel like they're being heard and that some of their concerns may actually be considered.

Of course everyone knows that the instant fix for lagging attendance is always winning.

But look at the Chihuahuas; fans flock to the stadium every night whether the team is winning or losing – because they put out a product that is chocked full of family fun.

The Chihuahuas go out into the community and listen to their customers.

Fans are constantly complaining on local talk shows that there is a disconnect between UTEP athletics and its potential customers.

Let's face it – the news coming out of UTEP sports recently has almost all been bad. But whenever things get this bad they only have one other direction to go.

Whether it's salaries, or marketing, or recruiting, or facilities, or coaching, or geographic location, Jim Senter's job is to survey all of it and then fix it.

If Mr. Senter is the kind of guy that enjoys a challenge he's come to the right place.

A sporting view By Mark Vasto

Out of the Woods and into the fire

We live in a time where we expect our athletes to be exceptional, to become "human cheat-codes" in the video-game parlance, and not simply adequate or even effective. For perhaps no other professional athlete, that sentiment rings far too true for one golfer – Tiger Woods, the King, one might say, of heightened expectations.

As the PGA Tour's so-called 2017 November-December Challenge Season (or as some refer to the official-ish slate of shootout and skins tournaments that don't count toward a player's official earnings, the "Silly Season") begins, Tiger Woods has signaled he is all in. The problem is, he doesn't know what that means quite yet.

The embattled former champion who once seemed destined to break every one of Jack Nicklaus' records, the player who even made Augusta National reconfigure (read "Tiger-proof") its hallowed links, now is looked upon as a larger-than-life curiosity. Never mind wondering if the man can win another major when the question now is: Can he even walk?

Since his late May DUI arrest, where we learned his search for a cure from back pain included taking copious amounts of pills – Ambien, Dilaudid, THC, Vicodin and Xanax were found in his system – Tiger has been in hybrid pain and pill management. After his fourth back surgery in July fused together portions of his spinal cord, Tiger immediately set his sights on the course.

In late November, the legend himself returned to the Hero

World Challenge, where he cautioned anyone looking for heroics.

"I don't know how hard I can hit it, what shots can I play. ... I'm still learning this body," Woods said. "Once I get a better understanding, I can give you a better answer."

The Hero World Challenge was just the third tournament Tiger Woods has played in for the past two years. His exodus has been neatly filled by the arrival of Dustin Johnson, Jordan Spieth, Justin Thomas, Hideki Matsuyama, Justin Rose and Rickie Fowler. Unsurprisingly, the competitor who finished 15th in a field of 17 last year, who hasn't won a tournament since 2014, who hasn't played an official round in 10 months, still shows plenty of spark when their names come up.

"In an ideal world, I would like to have them feel what some of them had to go against all those years," Woods said.

Can Tiger win back his awe-stricken fan base and return to anything remotely like his championship form? All we know is that he's not out of the woods yet, and that's the real challenge.

Your good health By Keith Roach, M.D.

DEAR DR. ROACH: Most health professionals agree that one should follow a "healthy diet," yet no one ever says exactly what that is. I have low thyroid, high cholesterol, high blood pressure and diabetes. Some of my meds cause chronic constipation. I and hundreds of others would be most appreciative if you could print a structured diet to follow for a week or two, and then we could repeat it. – F.G.

NOT mean is taking the joy out of eating. If I have a patient who really, really enjoys a less-than-healthy dish, I recommend that the patient eat it, without guilt, but infrequently, so that it becomes a special indulgence. For most people, it's easy to make some changes in the diet in order to feel better, get healthier and maybe live longer.

DEAR DR. ROACH: My daughter recently was operated on for a large tumor in her head. They called it a paranasal sinus cancer, and said that it is very rare, with only a few other known cases. Can you help me know what caused this? – F.W.

This is a question I get often, but I have been reluctant to answer it. I certainly could print a diet that I think is healthy, but depending on your medical conditions, it might not be precisely right for you. You have diabetes, so avoiding sweets is particularly important, and since you have high blood pressure, it's more important for you than it is for others to keep your sodium intake low.

However, the most important reason I can't publish a healthy diet that would work for everybody is that food choices are intensely personal and relate to your upbringing and locale. With my own patients, I don't try to give them a diet they should change to, but instead get a careful diet history and work with them to try to make their diet healthier.

For most people, that means reducing red meat and choosing other good protein sources, like legumes, fish, nuts or tofu. It usually means increasing vegetables and fruits, reducing sugars and substituting whole grains for processed ones. It often means removing unhealthy snacks and sugary drinks entirely.

Paranasal sinus cancers are very rare. They usually have no symptoms until they get large enough to invade other structures, and so can be very advanced when diagnosed. They often present as pain in the teeth or face, bleeding or persistent nasal obstruction. They also can press up against the eye, causing double or blurry vision.

Treatment depends on the type of tumor cell, but it usually involves surgery and may include both radiation and chemotherapy.

As far as what caused it, there is no way for me to tell for your daughter. However, factors that increase risk for paranasal cancers include air pollution, tobacco smoke and occupational exposures, especially for leather, textile and wood workers. Human papillomavirus may be the cause in some people.

The prognosis also depends on

Social Security Q&A By Ray Vigil

Social Security online offers you in control

Taking control of your future is the first step in planning a long and happy retirement. Social Security is making it faster and easier to do this with my Social Security.

With your own personal my Social Security account, you'll get immediate access to your personal Social Security Statement that has your earnings record and an estimate of your retirement benefits at age 62, at your full retirement age, and at age 70. While you are online, you should verify that your earnings are correct, since we base your future benefits on your earnings record. You can do all of this and more at www.ssa.gov/myaccount.

When you open a my Social Security account, we protect your information by using strict identity verification and security features. The application process has built-in features to detect fraud and confirm your identity. Your personal my Social Security account can help you figure out how much more you might want to save for your future, but it can do a whole lot more. For example, in the District of Columbia and more than 20 states, you can request a replacement Social Security card online – find out if you can at www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber.

Remember, we have many other valuable resources on our website. If you're thinking about retiring at an age not shown on your Statement, take control by using our Retirement Estimator.

The Retirement Estimator allows you to calculate your potential future Social Security benefits by changing variables such as retirement dates and future earnings. You may discover that you'd rather wait another year or two before you retire, to earn a higher benefit. Or, you might see that this is the season for you to kiss that work stress goodbye and retire right now. To get instant, personalized estimates of your future benefits, go to www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

Being in control means steering your future in the direction you want. Social Security's online resources are here to help, day or night. Check out your own personal "control panel" at www.socialsecurity.gov/onlineservices.

Here's a Tip

By JoAnn Derson

- Trying to open a stuck jar? Tap the sides of the lid on the counter or floor on all sides, and the jar will magically open. Don't "tap" too hard or you might break the jar.

- "Every year, we host a Christmas party. To make the house more accessible, and to make guests more comfortable, we put little tags on the door to the bathroom and whichever room we are using to hold coats, etc. I close all the other doors, so when a guest walks down the hall, they can easily figure out what door leads where. No more confused people looking for the restroom."

– Arianna B. in Michigan

- Invest in a meat thermometer this gift-giving season. Food safety is important, but really, why guess when the technology is so easy and accurate?

- "Since we start cooking Christmas dinner almost as soon as we get up on Christmas morning, I noticed that the kids seemed to be breakfasting on cookies exclusively. Last year, while we were waiting for Santa to arrive on Christmas Eve, I put out boxes of cereal, bowls, spoons and a pitcher for milk. I also bought a fruit tray, which I just put out in the morning. The kids ate a proper breakfast, and I still had the kitchen to myself to start preparations. It worked great!"

– Sharon L. in Florida

- To keep beverages ice-cold for your party, just save a 2-liter soda bottle or a rinsed half-gallons milk jug. Fill most of the way with water and freeze. At party time, nestle sodas, beers or water bottles around these mega ice blocks to chill drinks.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
