Pet cities

With National Homeless Animals Day this last Saturday and over 85 million U.S. pet-owning households projected to spend $72 billion this year, the personal finance website WalletHub has released an in-depth report on 2018's Most Pet-Friendly Cities. In order to determine where Americans' animal companions can enjoy the best quality of life without breaking the bank, WalletHub compared the creature-friendliness of the 100 largest cities across 24 key metrics. The data set ranges from minimum pet-care provider rate per visit to pet businesses per capita to walkability. El Paso ranked 84th in this study. Other stats:

- Columbus, OH has the lowest average veterinary care costs (per visit), $37.26, which is 2.1 times lower than in New York, NY, the city with the highest at $79.30.
- Miami, FL has the most veterinarians (per square root of population), 0.3360, which is 88.4 times more than in Newark, NJ, the city with the fewest at 0.0038.
- St. Paul, MN has the lowest monthly dog-insurance premium, $34.84, which is 2.4 times lower than in New York, NY, the city with the highest at $83.50.
- San Francisco, CA has the most pet businesses (per square root of population), 0.8546, which is 23.8 times more than in Newark, NJ, the city with the fewest at 0.0359.

Amish Uber

Uber, the ubiquitous car service has made its presence known throughout the U.S. Its presence is so pervasive that it prompted an Amish man to start a buggy-for-hire service in St. Joseph, MI, which boasts the sixth largest Amish populations in the U.S. Timothy Hochstedler, who started what is believed to be the nation's first on call horse-drawn taxi service, charges a flat rate of $5.00 per ride. As he described his start up to reporters: "Uber is hot right now, so we have the Amish Uber." Problem is that if you want a ride in Hochstedler, you can't use an app on your smart phone to call him. His is Amish, after all, and so he adheres strictly to Amish customs. In other words, you'll have to flag him down if and when you see him.

CORDIAL COLLEAGUES – Allegheny College has awarded the Prize for Civility in Public Life annually since 2011, each year selecting two public figures "who have demonstrated steadfast civility throughout their career or have shown authentic, courageous civility at an important moment in time." Texas' U.S. Representatives Will Hurd (left) and Beto O'Rourke (right) were the 2018 winners for their more-than-24-hour trip to the nation's capital that they took after winter weather canceled their flights in January.

El Paso congressmen honored for civility

EL PASO COUNTY – Allegheny College, established in 1815 in Meadville, Pennsylvania, is one of the nation's oldest liberal-arts colleges with a long tradition of passionate but civil intellectual debate.

Deeply troubled by the rise of incivility in U.S. politics, and its negative impacts on political participation, particularly among young people, the College created the Civility Prize in 2011 to highlight and reinforce the unheralded public figures who advance civility in public life, according to the school's website.

Since its inception, the Allegheny

College Prize for Civility in Public Life has recognized public figures that argue passionately but respectfully for their beliefs. The Prize seeks to honor public figures that have demonstrated steadfast civility throughout their career or have shown authentic, courageous civility at an important moment in time.

Previous winners include political journalists David Brooks and Mark Shields, in recognition of their longstanding record of civil commentary, in 2012.

In 2013, the College awarded the Prize to Senators Dianne Feinstein, a Democrat, and Lindsey Graham, a Republican, for their efforts to exemplify civility while leading debate in some of the most contentious issues of our time.

The "Women of the Senate" were honored in 2014 for banding together to help end a government shutdown and creating a more civil climate in Washington, D.C.

In 2015, in recognition of Allegheny's bicentennial celebration, noted historian Douglas Brinkley helped choose former Montgomery, Alabama Police Chief Kevin Murphy for taking off his badge and giving it to Congressman John Lewis, a Democrat from Georgia, as an act of contrition for the police department's treatment of Lewis in 1961 during the civil rights movement.

In 2016, the Prize went to Vice President Joe Biden and Senator John McCain, in recognition of powerful moments of civility during modern presidential campaigns.

In 2017, the sixth annual Allegheny College Prize for Civility in Public Life was awarded to U.S. Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg and the family of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, honoring "a friendship grounded in mutual respect for the intellectual integrity and love of country that each brought to service on the Court."

And this year, El Paso Congressmen Beto O'Rourke, a Democrat, and Will Hurd, a Republican, were awarded the Prize for Civility in Public Life for a cross country road trip the pair took last year and dubbed it the "bipartisan road trip".

After flights from Texas to Washington, D.C., were canceled because of bad weather, O'Rourke and Hurd decided to rent a car and drive the 1,600 miles from San Antonio to the nation's capitol to cast votes on pending legislation.

On the road, O'Rourke and Hurd discussed everything from music and their families to political issues like foreign policy and whether a wall should be constructed on the border between the United States and Mexico.

Elizabeth Warren's lie

Elizabeth Warren [D-MA] is a condemnation of America as fundamentally racist.

The Massachusetts senator, The U.S. criminal justice who has made a career of unfairly maligning bankers and other system is obviously a legitimate alleged capitalist malefactors, topic of debate. But the contention that U.S. law enforcement is is now smearing the criminal a product of racial hatred is a justice system, too. paranoid lie.

In a speech at a historically black college in New Orleans, she declared that "the hard truth about our criminal justice system: It's racist... I mean front to back."

Her riff is a sign that the Democrats are going to leaven The driver for mass their lurch toward socialism with incarceration, we are always told, is a racist war on drugs. But this is a myth. In his book "Locked In," John Pfaff notes that at its height in 1990, the share of state prisoners serving time for drugs was just 22 percent. The proportion fell to less than 16 percent in 2014. So you could release all drug offenders and still leave mass incarceration intact. And you wouldn't just be releasing black prisoners – 33 percent of white inmates in state prisons are drug offenders,

It is true that the incarceration rates for drug offenses are much higher for blacks. This may be a product of enforcement bias, or other factors such as whites are more prone to use private, as opposed to open-air, drug markets.

The biggest reason for the overall disparity in incarceration is different rates of offending. Blacks account for about 50 percent of homicides. It's not that the police are simply making up these crimes. The numbers for violent crime accord with reports from crime victims of the race of their assailants.

The same applies to police shootings. Joseph Cesario, a professor of psychology at Michigan State University, writes that "the differences in involvement in criminal situations between black and white citizens fully explains the population-level disparity in fatal police shootings."

Now, it's entirely fair to argue that different rates of offending are a function of the vestiges of racism, and that it is urgent to pursue criminal justice reform given how the status quo affects black families and communities. But the idea that we are living in a latter-day apartheid South Africa, with a system designed to jail and immiserate blacks out of sheer maliciousness, is contemptible, poisonous and wrong.

It is telling that Elizabeth Warren is going there. There are two reasons. One is that she has a Bernie Sanders problem: She is a white politician who has overwhelmingly devoted herself to economic issues. She needs to play identity politics catch-up. Two, in reaction to Donald Trump, the left is embracing a sweeping indictment of America as undemocratic and racist at the core.

Warren's performance shows that the party is prepared to consider no critique of America too radical or out of bounds.

School students the opportunity to graduate from high school and at the same time obtain an Associate Degree from WT in the area of Refrigeration, Heating, Ventilation and Air Conditioning. The cost of this program is usually $36,000 but because this is a Dual Credit instructional offering, this cost is being subsidized by local scholarships from WT and a reduced tuition rate that will be paid for by SEISD. This financial support ensures that this opportunity will not impact the students' future federal financial aid and will be offered at zero cost to the families and students participating in the program.

The SEISD and WT AOS Degree Program is a 3-year program for eligible SEISD students beginning their sophomore year in high school.

Students will attend Western Tech the second half of their instructional day for all 3 years and will have the opportunity to earn their AOS degree to include the following:

- EPA 608 Certificate;
- R410 A Safety Certificate;
- HVAC Excellence in Electrical; and
- TDLR R-HVAC Technician License.

The HVAC industry is projected to grow 14% annually for at least the next 6 years and is in need of qualified HVAC technicians. Upon completion of this program, SEISD students will find themselves eligible to take advantage of this growing job market.

OK, maybe there aren't a lot of oiled wrestling events here in America, but in Turkey it's the national sport. Kirkpınar, as it's known there, has been popular since the Ottoman Empire. conversations from the road using Facebook’s live video feature, prompting more than a dozen of their colleagues in Congress to pick up the phone and give them a call, including U.S. Sen. John Cornyn of Texas, House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy and former House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

The congressmen’s road venture also caught the eye of Facebook’s chief executive officer. “This is a great use of Facebook Live for civic engagement,” Mark Zuckerberg wrote in a comment on the video.

The congressmen’s road trip – amplified through Facebook and Periscope – received national attention. The move inspired those following along on social media to share words of encouragement for the congressmen and gave a sense of hope for those navigating through this challenging political climate, with one commenter on Facebook noting, “This gives me faith for our country.”

Allegheny College President James H. Mullen, Jr. presented both lawmakers with the award at the National Press Club in July. “Their spontaneous demonstration of civility restored hope for many who have forgotten that political adversaries can discuss difficult issues with respect and civility, and that partisan jousting does not require demonization- and even can be engaged with joy,” Mullen said in a statement.

O’Rourke, grateful to receive the Prize for Civility in Public Life and speaking with the Allegheny College students in attendance for the presentation, stated that it was clear that “we need to come together as Texans, as Americans to get after the big, bold, important work ahead of our country.”

At the same presentation, Hurd stated, “We can disagree without being disagreeable. We must be able to, so that the competition of ideas that has powered this great experiment called America continues to work.”

After the award ceremony, Hurd and O’Rourke both gave brief remarks. Hurd discussed what he learned about O’Rourke during the trip, including his taste in music and his love for donuts.

More importantly, he said he learned that, “way more unites us as a country than divides us.”

“It’s pretty wild that millions of people actually tuned in and watched two guys driving a car,” Hurd said. “But for those 36 hours- 36-hour trip, 31 hours in the car and 29 hours live streamed – we actually weren’t a Republican and a Democrat. We were just two dudes trying to get to work.”

O’Rourke has represented El Paso in Congress since 2012, but he is not seeking re-election. Instead, the Democrat is challenging U.S. Senator Ted Cruz for his seat.

Hurd is in a heated race against Gina Ortiz Jones, the Democratic candidate, for Texas’ 23rd Congressional District, in this November’s election.

for access to digital instruction materials off campus. The devices can be checked out for five days during the school year and as often as needed in the summer. Students will have the laptops in their possession every day, all year long.

"This will be my first laptop ever," said Katia Chaidez, sixth-grade student. "I'm very happy because I will be able to learn new skills, gain knowledge, and get ahead."

Students say the personal learning devices will prepare them for high school, where they also have portable computers for students at all grade levels.

"I feel excited about getting a laptop because I can learn more about technology and it makes learning fun," said Aaron Sanchez, a sixth-grader at Sanchez Middle School. "It will prepare me for high school and college."

The DNA 1:1 program started in 2014 with freshmen at Socorro

High School receiving laptops to use for 24/7 learning. The DNA program and conversion to digital learning has expanded every year since the launch.

This year, all students at Socorro and Pebble Hills high schools received a laptop. Seventh- and eighth-grade students at SPC. Rafael Hernando III Middle School, eighth-grade students at John Drugan School, Socorro Middle, Sun Ridge Middle and Ernesto Serna School also were given laptops for the 2018-2019 school year.

The district will continue to expand the DNA program for all students at every high school and continue growing the middle school program, as well.

"Technology contributes to student success," said Miguel Moreno, instructional technology coordinator. "SISD has always played a role in ensuring students have equitable access and resources to technology to prepare them for college and careers. # Reducing suicides with firearm security

by Freddy Groves

The Department of Veterans Affairs recently held a Gun Safety Matters Challenge to explore new ways of securing firearms and reducing the number of veteran suicides. Of the 20 veterans who die each day by suicide, over 60 percent use a firearm. The goal of securing firearms is to build in a break between the temporary impulse and the access to a gun.

The device, per instructions for the Challenge, should allow firearms storage with voluntary prevention control, either by the veteran or a family member or friend. The device should be inexpensive, suitable for use in a home, and easy to implement. It also couldn't impede access to the weapon should it be needed for emergencies or recreational shooting.

The challenge winner is a device that requires two people present to gain access to the firearm. It's called the DuoBox. It was developed by a team of MIT grad students who'd also been in the Navy. The device physically requires two people to open, but also has a 30-minute delay feature that can be used by one person. It will be field tested late this year after they secure prototype funding. Read about it here: www.jamesdysonaward.org/2018/project/duobox/

Second place went to a holster safe that requires fingerprint authentication. It's called the VARA Firearm Security Response. The VARA corporation is currently seeking funding.

Third place went to a phone app called Sentinel. With the app, veterans can call a friend and use Bluetooth to unlock the firearm. It also has a time-lock feature.

If you're a veteran who's having suicidal thoughts, pick up the phone. Call the Veterans Crisis Line 24/7 at 1-800-273-8255 and press 1. Or you can talk online at VeteransCrisisLine.net/Chat, or send a text to 838255.

There's no doubt that giddy fans all over the country are getting ready for the start of football season.

High schools, colleges and the pros are busy practicing on fields all over the United States, preparing for what they hope will be a season to remember.

This is the time of year when everyone is getting tired of the heat and looking forward to cooler autumn nights, which of course brings with it the sounds of crashing shoulder pads, referee whistles and marching bands.

But let's not forget that Major League Baseball is still going on and while teams are positioning themselves for playoff spots, one team is positioning itself for a little history.

The best regular season in MLB history (in the current 162-game format) was recorded in 2001 when the Seattle Mariners went 116-46. They won 71.6 percent of their games that season.

Rather quietly, that record is in jeopardy of being broken this season. And I don't mean one of those "there's an outside kinda, sorta, chance." I mean this team looks this could be the one of the best in history.

The Boston Red Sox were expected to be in a tough fight with the New York Yankees in the American League East all season long.

And they are in a tough fight. But instead of it being with the Yankees, the Red Sox are in a fight with history.

Going into last weekend, Boston had compiled a record of 82-35. That's a winning percentage of 70.1.

For the Red Sox to claim the best record ever, they'd have to go 35-10. That means they'd have to win 77 percent of their last 45 games.

Sounds impossible, does it? Well, maybe not, over their previous 45 games, the Red Sox have gone 34-11.

So that tells me that it's definitely possible.

And that could be a very good thing for the Red Sox because going for the record could keep them sharp and focused for the playoffs.

The fact that they are so far ahead of every other team, including the Yankees, could cause them to lose focus while they wait for the playoffs to start.

While the Red Sox will easily be the best team going into the playoffs, the decision on who will be the American League MVP will be is going to be more difficult.

The battle is between two players and you've probably already guessed it – they both play for the Red Sox.

As of last weekend, outfielders Mookie Betts (.352) and J.D. Martinez (.332) were one and two in batting average in all of baseball.

Betts is also second in runs scored, sixth in hits, 10th in stolen bases, second in on-base percentage and first in slugging percentage.

Martinez is third in runs scored, second in hits, first in home runs, first in runs batted in, sixth in on-base percentage and second in slugging percentage.

Like I said, it will be very difficult to choose from this potent one-two punch.

But they aren't the only two players on the team. Boston is also getting great contributions from their other outfielder, Andrew Benintendi, who is batting .303 and ranks fourth in runs scored, 12th in hits and 13th in stolen bases.

Shortstop Xander Bogaerts is also having a great season with 100 hits, 17 homeruns and 72 runs batted in.

To put it mildly, the Red Sox are a run-scoring machine that, unless they suffer any key injuries, doesn't look like they can be stopped by any pitching staff.

Now before you Red Sox fans start celebrating too early, just remember that the 2001 Seattle Mariners didn't win the World Series that season. They didn't even play in the World Series that season.

The Mariners were beaten by the Yankees in the playoffs four games to one.

And there's a very good chance that the Yankees will also make the playoffs this year, which could make things very interesting at the end.

But until then, it will be fun to see whether the Red Sox can set a new record.

And though the odds are statistically not in their favor – I wouldn't bet against them.

Bodybuilder son takes steroids

DEAR DR. ROACH: My 23-year-old son is a bodybuilder, and much to my dismay, he takes steroids. I know he takes testosterone, and I don't know what else. How will this affect him? – Anon.

Testosterone has many bad long-term effects, and he really should stop it. As a resident, I took care of a seemingly very healthy, very muscular 30-year-old man with terrible heart failure due to a heart attack. Many similar reports have led to suspicion that steroids taken for bodybuilding increase risk of heart attack and even sudden death. There appear to be many other long-term effects, including neuropsychiatric effects of anger and aggressive behavior. They also may reduce sperm count and affect fertility.

I don't know what else he may be taking, but I would strongly urge him to evaluate all supplements carefully.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I was a healthy female until I had an injury to my back. I experience pain and tingling in my right side, going down the back of my right leg. Sitting is especially painful, as is standing in one place for too long. Now the pain has started in my left side also. I have tried chiropractors, acupuncture, physical therapy, epidural shots and pain pills. I also had two laminectomies (decompression surgery on the spinal canal) on L4/L5 last year, with no relief from the pain. Upon seeing another neurosurgeon, I have been told that I have some large Tarlov cysts (1 cm). There does not seem to be a great amount of information about these on the internet, plus I am not sure what information out there is accurate. One doctor on the internet is all about having surgery on them. The neurosurgeon I am seeing does not want to do surgery just yet. He says that surgery does not always bring about pain relief. Can you share some information about these Tarlov cysts and what can be done for the continued back and leg pain? Dealing with this for several years has caused much emotional distress and depression. – F.H.

Tarlov cysts, also called perineurial cysts, occur along the lining of the spinal cord and nerve roots. In one study, in 500 people with MRI scans, 23 had Tarlov cysts, but only five had any symptoms from them. In this study, the cysts were drained by a needle, which relieved the pain, although the pain usually came back as the cysts refilled with fluid.

I agree with your neurosurgeon that surgery on these does not guarantee success. Since you have had two surgeries and multiple types of therapies that haven't worked, I can understand your frustration. It might be worth talking to the neurosurgeon about a trial of draining the cysts to see if that helps the symptoms.
