Great training

Educators from Northwest Early College High School (NWECHS) in Canutillo ISD are among the best trained in all of the United States thanks to their successful completion of the National Board Certification process. On December 1, Michelle Belli, NWECHS counselor, was notified that she earned her National Board Certification for School Counseling. There are only 11 counselors in the state of Texas to earn the certification; Belli will be the first counselor in the region to earn this certification. In addition, the following teachers earned their National Board Certification: Catherine Tabor (math), Alisia Muir (English) and Berenice Sotelo (math). In all, Canutillo ISD has 10 of the 16 certified educators in Texas. “The National Board Certification will help us further address the needs of students,” said Northwest Principal Tracy Speaker Gerstheimer. “Northwest already offers rigorous and challenging coursework. Now, we will be able to supplement what we already do with research-based instruction that is of the highest caliber.” National Board Certification is a voluntary, advanced credential that goes beyond state licensure. Participants must meet national standards for what accomplished teachers and counselors should know and be able to do. The process is rigorous and takes one to two years to complete. Participation in the process provides experienced educators with an opportunity to hone their practice, showcase their knowledge and demonstrate their dedication to students.

Elder care

With the share of U.S. adults aged 65 and older expected to be 1 in 5 by the year 2030 and more than 95 percent of elder-abuse cases going unreported every year, the personal-finance website WalletHub today released its report on 2018’s States with the Best Elder-Abuse Protections. To determine which states fight the hardest against elder abuse, WalletHub compared the 50 states and the District of Columbia

The word gerrymander (originally written Gerry-mander) was used for the first time in the Boston Gazette on March 26, 1812. The word was created in reaction to a redrawing of Massachusetts state senate election districts under Governor Elbridge Gerry. In 1812, Gerry signed a bill that redistricted Massachusetts to benefit his Democratic-Republican Party. Federalist newspaper editors and others at the time likened the contorted district shape on the map to the shape of a mythological monster, the salamander. The original gerrymander, and original 1812 gerrymander cartoon, above, depict the Essex South state senatorial district for the legislature of The Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Gerrymander is a blend of the governor's last name and the word salamander.

Civic groups working to ensure fair district maps across Texas

TEXAS — The League of Women Voters of El Paso (LWV-EP) and American Civil Liberties Union of Texas (ACLU-TX) held a public forum recently to bring attention to the much-anticipated Texas Legislature’s redistricting efforts that will follow the upcoming U.S. 2020 census taking.

The forum, titled Fair Maps Texas vs. Gerrymandering (which is also the name of a coalition of nonpartisan organizations working to reform the redistricting system in Texas), brought together a variety of concerned citizens to the El Paso Community College (EPCC) Valle Verde Campus in South-Central El Paso to discuss redistricting issues including gerrymandering.

Gerrymandering is a practice intended to establish a political advantage for a particular party or group by manipulating district boundaries. The resulting district is known as a gerrymander. The term gerrymandering has negative connotations.

Three principal tactics are used in gerrymandering: “cracking” – diluting the voting power of the opposing party’s supporters across many districts; “packing” – concentrating the opposing party’s voting power in one district to reduce their voting power in other districts); and the third tactic is homogenization of all districts.

CAFÉ partners with foundation to send more students to college

CANUTILLO — Canutillo alumni have worked together to provide scholarships for graduates since 2004 and now have a new partnership with the Paso del Norte Foundation to further their mission. The Canutillo Independent School District (CISD) and the alumni group established an agency-advised fund to help meet the needs of the Canutillo Alumni Foundation for Education (CAFÉ).

Earlier this year, the CISD Board of Trustees unanimously passed a memorandum of understanding regarding its desire to work together with CAFÉ.

The MOU states that the District will jointly host future alumni fundraising-related events for the mutual benefit of the District’s and CAFÉ’s missions. CISD Superintendent Dr. Pedro Galavis says that it is crucial that the District works together with alumni in the community.

“Our partnership with CAFÉ and Paso del Norte will ensure the success of the foundation in meeting its mission and ultimately benefit kids,” Galavis said. “Next, we will be moving to expand the fund’s presence and encourage alumni, businesses, and community members everywhere to contribute to the success of our students going to college.”

This year, nine graduating seniors from Canutillo and Northwest Early College

High Schools received $500-$1,000 each from CAFÉ, the Classes of 1967, 1994 and the Canutillo Sun-Up Optimist Club. Since 2004, more than $114,000 has been raised by the group and awarded to about 153 students.

CAFÉ holds an annual golf tournament to raise funds for the scholarship. The next tournament will be Friday, May 3, 2019. Next year, CAFÉ plans to promote a membership drive to encourage annual and monthly giving. Tax-deductible, one-time, annual and monthly gifts can now be made online by visiting <https://pdnfoundation.org/give-to-a-fund/canutillo-alumni-education-foundation>. Supporters will receive a free CAFÉ gift with their annual or monthly contribution.

The children, the caravan, and health

There are three aspects to the caravan: what is shown by the media; what is there to be seen; and what is unseen.

The focus is on the innocent children, as in the widely circulated photograph of an obese woman with two children lacking pants or shoes, purportedly fleeing tear gas sprayed by cruel law enforcement agents. They are far from home, in a very dangerous place, in violation of the laws of Mexico.

Would Child Protective Services accuse an American citizen of child abuse and neglect, and take the children into foster care?

Thousands of migrants are crammed together in Tijuana, many outdoors, and about a third of them are already sick. Without sanitation, outdoors in the rain, many more will become ill. Several cases of tuberculosis, chicken pox, and HIV have already been reported.

The unseen travelers also include measles, Chagas disease, hepatitis, and many other dangerous microbes. You can see the lice that serve as vectors of diseases such as typhus if you look closely. Workers in migrant reception centers have spent hours combing nits out of little girls' hair – but they could be fired for talking about it.

Then there's that mysterious polio-like illness – AFM for acute flaccid myelitis – that has struck hundreds of American children. Some would be in "iron lungs" if we didn't use a different kind of breathing machine today. AFM was first noted in 2014, just coincidentally in time and space with the dispersal of thousands of Central American children into U.S. schools. More prominent at that time was an outbreak of a deadly respiratory illness that sent hundreds of American children to intensive care units. Both types of symptoms can probably be caused by enterovirus D68, which happens to be endemic in Central America. Any connection? The CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) says it doesn't know.

Chagas disease (American trypanosomiasis) afflicts around 8 million people in Central America. An early symptom is to awaken with swelling of the eyelids on one side that persists for weeks. But most don't know they have Chagas until, after many years, it destroys the muscles of their esophagus, colon, or heart. It is carried by the reduviid ("kissing") bug, already present in the U.S. Packrats are hosts to these bugs. A high rate of Chagas is being found in dogs in Texas.

Many migrants have latent tuberculosis, which can become active at any time. What happens if a case of active tuberculosis is diagnosed in the U.S.? All the patient's contacts must be identified, tested, and followed. The persons exposed while the patient was coughing on the bus will be impossible to locate. The patient requires treatment for at least a year, with careful follow-up.

How many patients with contagious diseases and their contacts can be effectively followed by U.S. public health departments? Not very many – these agencies are already underfunded and stretched thin. How many patients with

SISD approves boundary adjustments for 2019-20 school year

By Christy Flores-Jones
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – The Socorro Independent School District Board of Trustees approved boundary adjustments, which will go into effect January 2019 for new students and at the start of the 2019-2020 school year for current students, at the Nov. 13 regular board meeting.

The boundary adjustments are being made in the El Dorado and Pebble Hills feeder patterns to maximize the use of existing facilities in those areas and to adjust for SISD's newest elementary school, Cactus Trails Elementary School, which is set to open in the Pebble Hills area in July 2019.

Team SISD is proactive in monitoring the growth in the district, demographics, and use of facilities in order to be poised to always provide students in all areas of the district safe and supportive learning environments.

In planning for the boundary adjustments, Team SISD's priorities are to be good stewards of all resources and to respect families in the existing school communities, said Marivel Macias, assistant superintendent of administrative services.

"We focused on boundary adjustments that made best use of our existing campuses and adjusted for our new elementary school, while considering the needs of our students and families," Macias said. "Our commitment is to provide all students a high-quality education in a comfortable, safe learning environment."

The boundary changes were carefully crafted taking into consideration many aspects, such as staffing, transition periods, student transportation, and potential facility renovations.

During October and early November, the district met with students, parents and community members at 10 community meetings to explain the proposed boundary adjustments and gain feedback from the stakeholders. SISD also met with teachers, support staff, administrators, and district directors at 27 faculty and staff meetings to discuss the boundary changes.

The 2019-2020 boundary adjustments include the following changes:

- Hurshel Antwine Elementary School will transition into a middle school for the El Dorado feeder pattern.
- Paso del Norte K-8 School will become an elementary school for the El Dorado feeder pattern.
- Sgt. Roberto Ituarte Elementary School will be the pre-k hub school in the El Dorado feeder pattern.
- The new SISD elementary school, Cactus Trails Elementary School (PK-5), will serve students that currently go to James P. Butler and Chester E. Jordan elementary schools.

To learn more about the approved boundary adjustments, visit the district website at www.sisd.net/boundaryadjustments.

redistricting, the issues of gerrymandering need to be placed front and center in public discourse," stated Judy Ackerman, a LWV board member. "A focus on this issue has not been publicly discussed in El Paso in many years, if at all," she stated.

The board member said that gerrymandering is the biggest threat to democracy. "In 2016, 66 percent of state legislature candidates ran unopposed. Eighty-one state house of representatives seats were uncontested. Ninety-seven percent of incumbents were re-elected. Is it any wonder that citizens ask, 'Why should I vote?'" Ackerman asserted.

Among the EPCC forum participants were: Rebecca Reid Ph.D., a professor with University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP); Sito Negron, representative for Texas State Senator Jose Rodriguez of District 29 El Paso; Texas Representative Joe Moody of District 78 El Paso; Texas Representative Lina Ortega of District 77 El Paso; and Texas Representative Mary Gonzalez of District 75, El Paso.

Facilitators for the event included Perla Galindo, Beatriz Vera, Jeanelle Carden, Jeannette Walker, Don Topp. LWV organizers were Pat White, Judy Ackerman, Crystal Robert, and ACLU partner Adri Perez. Also assisting with the forum were UTEP Professors Irasema Coranado, Francesca Wigle, and Kathy Staudt.

Fair Maps Texas vs. Gerrymandering public forums have been held by Fair Maps Texas in Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio and other Texas locations.

According to LWV officials, their organization has a long history of promoting transparent, fair, and accountable redistricting processes that reflect the fundamental value of representative democracy.

"We are driven by a single goal: to make our election maps fair for everyone. We are concerned when district boundaries slice up our neighborhoods, leaving our communities without a cohesive voice of representation," LWV members acknowledged.

In Texas, partisan gerrymandering has been a problem for decades. The political party that controls the state legislature at the time of the

Sorry, you can't protect Mueller

Mitch McConnell just did our constitutional order an enormous favor by burying the so-called Robert Mueller protection bill, hopefully never to rise again.

There's been much harumphing about how Republicans are in the tank for President Donald Trump by not getting on board the bipartisan bill, but it is a singularly misbegotten piece of legislation.

Plan A, i.e., passing the thing, would have been hard enough. But its supporters apparently didn't think through a need for a Plan B or C. Trump would have vetoed the bill if it passed Congress, and if it somehow passed Congress with a veto-proof majority, the Supreme Court likely would have struck it down.

The push for the bill again shows how, to this point, Trump's main threat to our constitutional system has been catalyzing a hysterical opposition. That opposition is willing to throw overboard legal and constitutional niceties to thwart Trump.

Hence, much of the #resistance judging regarding Trump measures. And hence the astonishing spectacle of U.S. senators, sworn to uphold the Constitution, advancing a blatantly unconstitutional bill.

The president is the chief executive, and like it or not, Trump is president. "I conceive that if any power whatsoever is in its nature executive," James Madison declared, "it is the power of appointing, overseeing and controlling those who execute the laws."

If the president can fire the attorney general (the ill-used Jeff Sessions attests that he can), he certainly can fire Mueller. The attorney general is a much more important position.

In compelling Senate testimony, Yale law professor Akhil Amar explained the constitutional problems with the Mueller protection bill. One is that to be constitutional, the special counsel must be an inferior officer. Otherwise, he has to be confirmed by the Senate, which Mueller wasn't. And if he's an inferior officer, he can be fired.

The problem with the protection bill in terms of constitutional architecture also gets at the problem with the special counsel.

Yes, there's lots of criminal action in the Mueller probe – the Paul Manafort trial, the various plea deals – but current Justice Department guidance says that the president himself can't be indicted. That means that all Mueller can do regarding the president directly is produce a report that may well instigate congressional action, up to and including an impeachment probe. This preliminary investigative work should be the work of Congress alone, without the help of someone nominally working for the president he's targeting.

Indeed, if you want investigations of the president that the president can't stop or have influence over, you have to run them out of Congress. With the Democratic takeover of the House, such congressional probes are on their way.

Trump has huffed and puffed about Mueller, yet cooperated – in some instances, quite fulsomely – with his investigation. That could change at any time. But firing Mueller would lead to dire political consequences, and now fail to achieve its end of truly shutting him down. If cashiered, census can manipulate the newly-drawn election maps to favor their party's candidates, typically drawing a majority of "safe" or noncompetitive seats. The elected officials in these districts can then no longer be held accountable through the power of our vote," Ackerman stated. "The League therefore supports reform that would place limits on partisanship and increase public participation in the redistricting process," she added.

LWV is a non-partisan organization that includes both men and women supporting issues but not candidates and parties. "We are particularly concerned about government, citizen participation, and areas of concern relating to social and health matters, education, the environment, and international affairs," Ackerman stated.

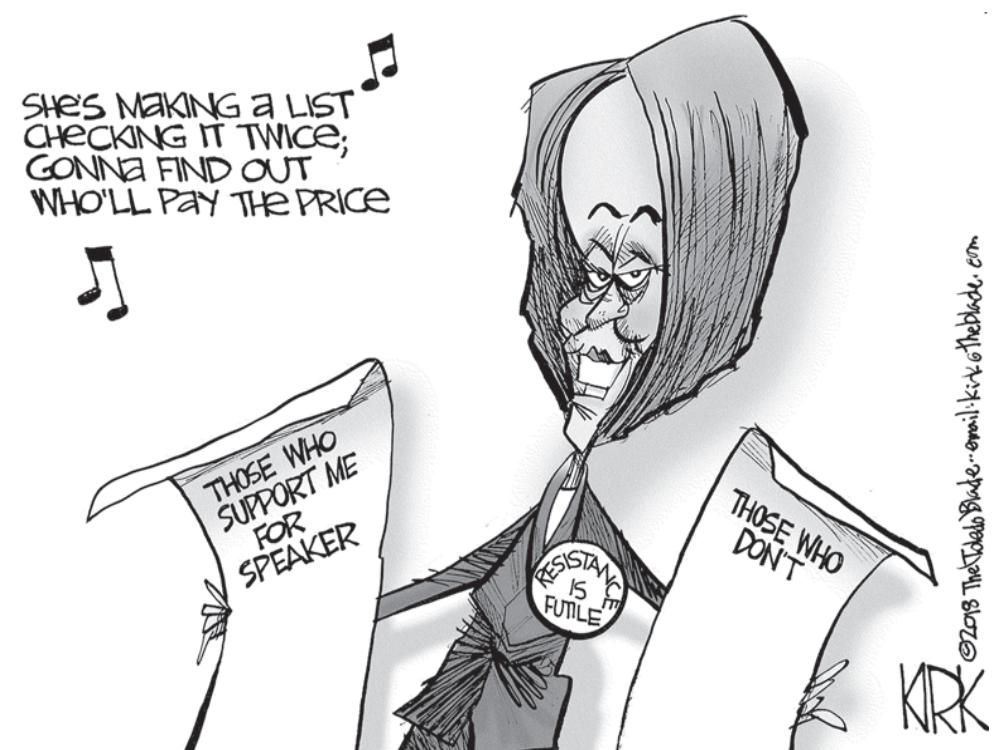

ACLU-TX is the leading civil rights organization in the Lone Star State. "Since our formation in 1938, we have worked in the courts, the legislature, and through public education to protect civil rights and individual liberty," according to officials.

Other organizations supporting the call for fair re-districting action are: Common Cause Texas, Common Ground for Texans, Clean Elections Texas, Texas Civil Rights Project, Texas Progressive Action Network, Texas Progressive Interest Research Group, Texans Against Gerrymandering, and VocesTejas.

Disease

active TB can be safely treated in U.S. hospitals? Last time I checked there were only two or three negative-pressure isolation rooms in my city. And what if the disease is resistant to all antibiotics, as is occurring in many countries? In the old days, patients' lungs were collapsed by injecting air into the chest to cause a pneumothorax. A patient I cared for at Parkland Hospital in Dallas had a caved-in chest from the removal of several ribs (a thoracoplasty) to keep his lung collapsed permanently.

This won't help disseminated TB, such as meningitis. The public health response to contagious diseases, especially deadly untreatable ones, is to make the diagnosis, isolate the patients, and trace the contacts. This means that for migrants we need a positive identification of the person, his country of origin, and his location. But while American citizens are increasingly under surveillance, illegals often disappear without a trace.

Public health can't deal with a horde violently storming the border. What the mainstream press doesn't show is that 80 percent of the crowd are men, mostly of military age. The threats they pose to the health of our citizens (and that of other migrants) include violence; sexually transmitted diseases from rape (a large percentage of the women have been molested); and illicit drugs that pour through while Border Patrol agents may be changing diapers.

Rep. Ocasio-Cortez's (D-N.Y.) 5,000 case workers won't help, and I doubt that many would volunteer to serve. We need linguists to identify people who are lying on their asylum applications – observers from Judicial Watch identified Cuban accents. We need better laboratory facilities and public health surveillance throughout the country. And we need law enforcement to stop illegal entry. Children who were at least warm and dry in Honduras are being used as political pawns and human shields by those determined to trespass in or harm our homeland.

We need to protect children – especially our own.

We need a wall.

- On Dec. 28, 1975, ice hockey fans watch the Central Red Army team from the Soviet Union defeat the New York Rangers 7-3 at New York's Madison Square Garden. It marked the start of the first midseason exhibition games between Soviet and National Hockey League teams, held from 1975 to 1991.

- On Dec. 29, 1170, Archbishop Thomas Becket is brutally murdered in Canterbury Cathedral by four knights of King Henry II of England, apparently on orders of the king. The Christian world was shocked, and in 1173 Becket was canonized a Catholic saint.

- On Dec. 30, 1853, the U.S. minister to Mexico and the president of Mexico sign the Gadsden Purchase in Mexico City. The treaty established the final boundaries of the southern United States. For $10 million, the U.S. acquired 30,000 square miles of land in what is now New Mexico and Arizona.

2018 Hyundai Sun Bowl lacks firepower of recent games

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

Well we've waited all year for it and talk about stringing it out - it just makes sense that it happens on the final day of 2018.

The biggest show El Paso has to offer, the Hyundai Sun Bowl, will kick off at noon on New Year's Eve.

This year's game will feature Pitt from the Atlantic Coast Conference and Stanford, from the Pac-12.

Let's face it, though Pitt and Stanford enjoy very rich football traditions, this isn't exactly the marquee matchup El Pasoans have enjoyed in recent years.

Though Pitt won their half of the ACC, they still come into the game with a lackluster 7-6 record. Stanford finished 8-4; not a bad record but the Cardinal were ranked 13th in the AP preseason poll, and are always considered a potential top-10 team.

Neither team is ranked in the Top-25 coming into the game.

Pitt had big wins over Georgia Tech and Syracuse, but their best game of the year actually came in defeat. The Panthers were the closest to giving undefeated Notre Dame their only loss of the season.

The Fighting Irish scored a touchdown with just over five minutes left in the game to eke out a 19-14 win.

But Pitt was also smacked by teams like Penn State (51-6), UCF (45-14), Miami (24-3) and Clemson (42-10).

Stanford on the other hand, started the season 4-0 and were ranked #7 in the nation going into their big game at 4-0 Notre Dame.

Stanford was manhandled by the Irish 38-17 and finished their final eight games with a 4-4 record.

Stanford's biggest victory was their 38-31 overtime win at Oregon.

Over the last decade the Hyundai Sun Bowl has hosted loaded teams like Oklahoma, Virginia Tech, UCLA, Washington State, Miami, USC and even Notre Dame.

This year's matchup doesn't exactly bring the same hype as those games did, but that will happen from time to time.

The marquee names aren't here. And even the one preseason Heisman Trophy candidate in this game had a disappointing season.

Remember a couple years ago when Christian McCaffrey decided not to play in the Sun Bowl game for Stanford, his backup got the chance to run the football.

And run he did; Bryce Love landed in the national spotlight by rushing for 119 yards and catching a 49-yard touchdown pass.

Love has battled some injuries this season and missed a couple games. But still struggled to average only 73.9 yards per game.

The one offensive star in the game could be Stanford wide receiver JJ Arcega-Whiteside, who caught 60 passes for 969 yards and 14 touchdowns.

The best thing about the 2018 Hyundai Sun Bowl will be the contrasting styles of the two teams.

Pitt is ranked 18th in the nation in rushing and has two running backs that gained over 1,000 yards.

Senior running backs Qadree Ollison (1,190 yards and 11 touchdowns) and Darrin Hall (1,021 yards and nine touchdowns) lead a Panthers rushing attack that averages nearly 230 yards a game.

Stanford quarterback K.J. Costello threw for 3,435 yards and 29 touchdowns this season.

While the Cardinal are only averaging 108 yards rushing a game, they do throw the ball for 287 yards a game.

What could also make this an interesting game is the fact that neither defense has been exactly what you would call "stubborn" this season.

Pitt has allowed at least 30 points on six occasions this year while Stanford's D has allowed its opponents to top 30 in five games.

So although there aren't any well-known offensive superstars in this game, it could turn out to be an exciting high-scoring affair because of the shaky defenses.

But then again, any well-known offensive superstars would probably take the game off in anticipation of the NFL draft.

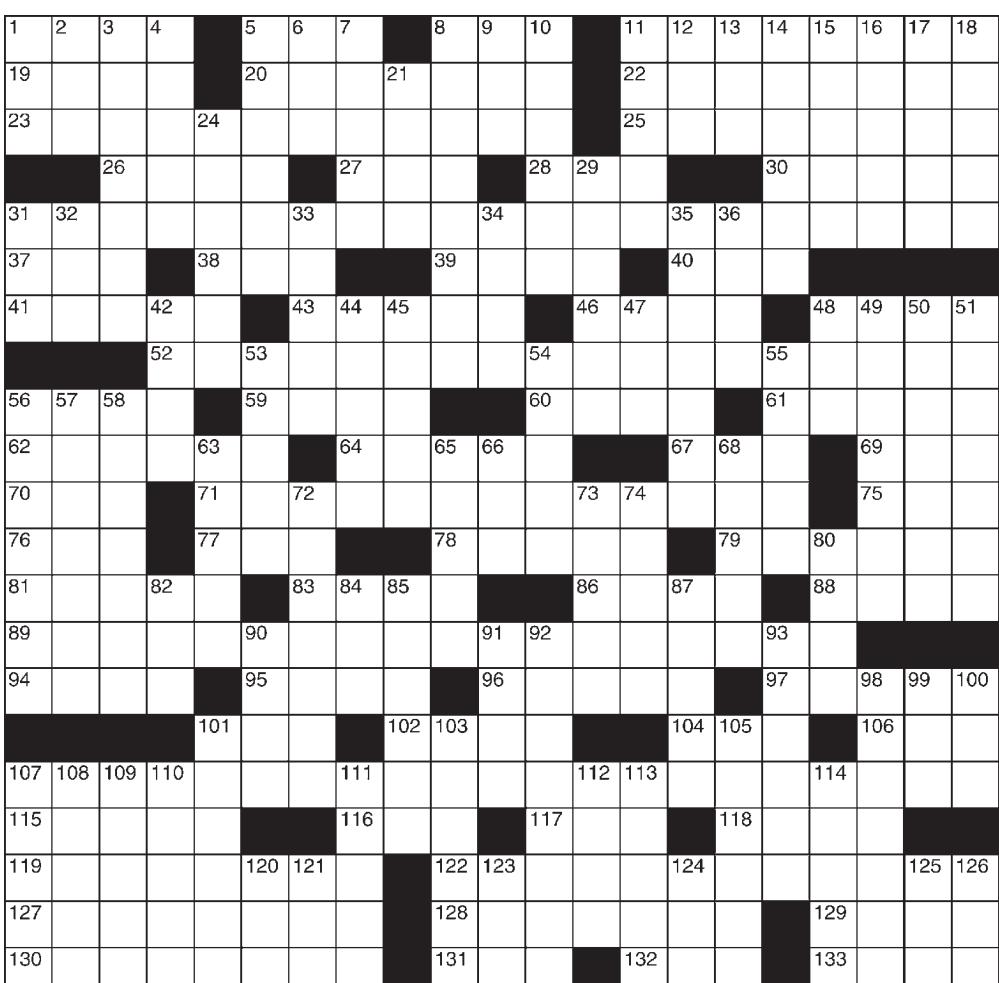

So Pitt and Stanford are getting together on New Year's Eve afternoon in El Paso; and about 40,000 locals will make the annual trek to the Sun Bowl stadium in support of the biggest event the city has to offer.

Let's just hope these two teams can pay back the local and national fans, by putting on a great show.

Strange 'pimples' are rare disease

DEAR DR. ROACH: After having several strange-looking "pimples" on my thighs and one on my face, I was told it is lymphomatoid papulosis. One or two people in a million are diagnosed with this. I know that it is not contagious, but what is it? What causes it, how is it treated, and what can I do to avoid these? They take weeks to heal. – R.R.

Lymphomatoid papulosis is a rare disease. It is in the category of cutaneous lymphoproliferative disorders. It is a chronic disease, and lasts years or even decades. The underlying cause is not known exactly, but it is related in many ways to other lymphoproliferative diseases, such as mycosis fungoides and Hodgkin's lymphoma. The cells of the skin lesions you notice have similar genetic rearrangements as lymphoma cells. Fortunately, LyP has an excellent prognosis, although people with LyP are at increased risk for developing one of these serious conditions.

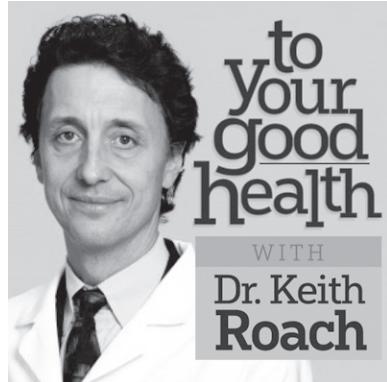

The papules of LyP can appear on the extremities or the hands and face, and less commonly on other places on the body. They may start off as small red papules, get larger and then crust over. Often, several exist at different stages.

Diagnosis may not be easy, as it takes an experienced dermatopathologist (pathologist with special training in skin diseases) and enough tissue to look at the genetics of the cells. Treatment is not necessary for every person with LyP. But for those who do require it, one might be ultraviolet-light treatment. More severe cases may require methotrexate, but this needs to be managed by an expert.

Experts have recommended six-month visits to evaluate for early signs of enlarging lymph nodes, which might indicate the development of a lymphoproliferative disorder.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I would like your opinion, as a noninterested party, on laser therapy. I see many ads touting its advantages and success in treating bone-on-bone knee osteoarthritis. My orthopedic doctor recommended knee replacements on both my knees. I had arthroscopic surgery on the left knee four years ago and was recommended total knee replacement on the right knee about three years ago. How long can I put off surgery, and what is the outlook if I don't have it done? I am an 80-year-old female in good health, except for the osteoarthritis. I use naproxen when needed. If it works, I think laser therapy would be less pain and downtime. – Anonymous

Low-level laser therapy has been studied in people with osteoarthritis, and some of the studies have shown reductions in pain and stiffness. The laser is thought to have an effect on circulation.

However, the laser generally has been effective in people with mild to moderate disease, and bone-on-bone is severe. I think laser may help some people, but some of the benefit probably is due to placebo effect.

By the way, I am interested in helping people, but have no conflicts of interest.

File your disability claims before leaving the service

VETERANS POST

by Freddy Groves

If you're scheduled to leave active duty soon and know your separation date, start keeping a calendar of important dates, especially if you're going to have a disability claim. Veterans who have between 90 and 180 days left in active-duty service can file for the Benefits Delivery at Discharge program. The Department of Veterans Affairs has made big improvements to the system, and many who make disability claims in the BDD program can receive a decision within 30 days of getting out.

In the first year, 53 percent of veterans had a claims decision within 30 days. As they've smoothed out the details, that percentage has gone up. Claims can now be reviewed at any regional office, and they've improved the software for records transfers and added claims training for those who will do the work.

Still, it's important to get any claims filed in the 90-180 day window before you leave. That will ensure your disability medical exams go into your service treatment record, and if the condition worsens later, you'll have a starting date right there in your medical file.

There are limits, however, to using the BDD program. You can't use it if you're terminally ill, are in a VA medical facility, will need case management or if you can't get to a VA exam within the 45 days after you file. For the whole list of restrictions, go to www.va.gov/disability and put BDD in the search box. You'll also find details about the pre-discharge claim.

If you have fewer than the 90 days until separation, you can still put in a disability claim through the Decision Ready Claim or a fully developed claim. If you're injured, sick or wounded and can't do your job, they will refer you to the Integrated Disability Evaluation System.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥ R ATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
