TISD award

The Finance Department at Tornillo ISD has helped the district earn a Transparency Stars Award in the area of Traditional Finances. This award acknowledges government entities that share their financial information in a clear and meaningful manner. After receiving this star, TISD is subject to receive other stars in any order as well as routine audits to maintain the current award. The district's financial information can be viewed on its website www.tisd.us.

TISD honored

The Tornillo ISD Board of Trustees is one of five school boards across Texas to be selected as a 2020 Honor School Board. The five Honor Boards were selected by a committee of Texas schoolsuperintendents. The committee was impressed with the involvement of students during Tornillo ISD board meetings describing the board as "all-around innovative". The 2020 Outstanding School Board winner will be announced at the TASA/TASB Convention on October 2.

For all to see

Self-isolation during the COVID crisis can have the side effect of making you lazy when working from home. For example, you realize you don't have to get dressed to go to work when you are working from home. But, be careful; embarrassing mistakes can happen. Take what happened to ABC-TV news reporter Will Reeve, son of the late film star Christopher Reeve. There was Will, delivering a live report from his home for Good Morning America neatly dressed from the waist up. He was operating the camera, himself, so he didn't realize that viewers were seeing more of him than he thought. He claims that he was wearing work-out shorts, but what the heck. As he put it in a tweet after the show, "Hope everyone got a much needed laugh."

El Paso VA Health Care System's new westside facility increases vets' access

By Alfredo Vasquez
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – El Paso's Veteran Affairs Health Care System's newest facility is now open for local area veterans, as the agency expands its services to support the growing number of veterans in the region.

According to the new facility's clinic manager, Kraig White, local area veterans represent a larger share of the population than on the state and national levels. Veterans account for 8.2 percent of El Paso County's residents over 18, compared to 7.2 percent in Texas as a whole. White said that the new clinic was needed because there was no more room to grow at the 23-year-old Piedras Street main VA center.

The new clinic, which includes two primary care teams, began operating at 50 percent staff capacity recently and will be available for in-person meetings with patients. However, patients will have in-person appointments with medical staff only when it is deemed medically necessary, White stated. The rest of the appointments will be conducted remotely, he said.

The next phase of the plan will be implemented after data shows a seven-day decline in local COVID-19 cases, White noted. Upon reaching the case decline target, the clinic will be able to conduct in-person appointments at 25 percent patient capacity, he explained.

The new 15,000 square-foot facility, located at 1870 Northwestern Drive, is West Texas and Southern New Mexico's first significant expansion of the system's primary care capacity in nearly a decade, according to VA health care officials.

Cost for the new community-based outpatient center was

The new center is expected to create 61 new jobs, with priority given to job applicants who are military veterans. El Paso VA Public Affairs Officer Ginette Bocanegra said that the new center will allow the VA Health Care System to care for more veterans at its own facilities.

EPCC receives ED grant

By Jessie Arellano
Special to the Courier

EL PASO COUNTY – The Department of Education TRIO Programs has awarded a $707,647 federal grant to El Paso Community College (EPCC) for the Student Support Services Program (SSSP). It is the largest award in Texas and the eighth largest in the nation. The objective of the grant is to provide academic and other support services to low-income, first-generation or disabled college students to increase students' retention and graduation rates, facilitate their transfer from two-year to four-year colleges, and foster a supportive institutional climate.

"The EPCC Student Support Services Program team are dedicated to our students' success and strengthening our El Paso community through education," said Lucia Rodriguez, Student Success Director at El Paso Community College.

"The SSSP staff work daily to accomplish great student success results that ensure our students start strong and finish their education."

The SSSP has helped first generation students at EPCC for more than 30 years. As a result of this grant, an additional 600 students will be served each year over the five-year grant program. SSSP Manager, Cynthia Velasco, is excited for the opportunity to continue fostering an institutional climate supportive of student success. "In addition to academic tutoring, students receive advice and assistance in postsecondary course selection, information on financial aid programs and benefits, counseling services designed to improve financial and economic literacy and activities to assist students apply and enroll in four-year programs of postsecondary education. We assist students to develop academically and personally on their by himself, or really no class, but also Joe Biden. With Biden’s long career in public life repeatedly saying something really boneheaded, he has no peer in the gaffe category. Actually, he’s a natural; he doesn’t even have to try. The dunderheaded comments just roll from his mouth.

But Trump is the true champion, not only due to his being a pathological liar, but because when he gets revved up he makes the most nasty statements. He does it over Twitter, during speeches or when he encounters reporters... aka “enemies of the people,” which was one of his previous STUPID award winners.

But let’s not waste any more time. Let’s choose this week’s winner. It was really no contest.

Once again the STUPID winner is Donald Trump.

It was in Ohio, when the president targeted Joe Biden, who he claimed would “take away your guns, destroy your second amendment. No religion, no anything, hurt the Bible, hurt God. He’s against God, he’s against guns, he’s against energy, our kind of energy.”

He really said that. The fact that Biden is a man of strong Catholic faith adds to the tarnish of this STUPID award.

The Trumpster’s consistent track record uttering ridiculous stuff day after day is amazing. In just the months of the coronavirus pandemic he has made one STUPID remark after another. Whether it was dismissing COVID early on as a “hoax,” touting useless drugs as magic elixirs, pressuring to reopen the economy prematurely, he has usually overwhelmed anyone else who ventures into dunderhead land.

In the past, he often made his most asinine statements when he held his political rallies. The MAGA crowd really loves it when he goes rabid; the obnoxious remarks just spill out. But for the most part, he hasn’t had the rallies lately to goad him into tastelessness after his maskless fans keep dying on him from catching COVID. But still he’s managed to keep up with the ignorant rubbish and nastiness, and that makes him a consistent winner of the STUPID contests.

In fact, we should consider renaming the award Donald Trump STUPID, although many might object to the redundancy.

He has done so well with his babble, glossing over the fact that there’s no there there, that we should as a country look at how he manages to succeed. Not only has he done so in the past, but there’s a good chance he will pull off another win, bamboozling the voters, or suppressing the turnout, particularly since the Democrats risk their usual bad habit of forfeiting the election.

If that happens and he stays in office for another term, then it will be us who wins the Doing Unbelievably Mindless Blowing it award, DUMB, for being taken in by such STUPIDity, which will certainly destroy the country.

Haven’t we been missing something with our coverage of the political news? Shouldn’t we recognize the tweet or sound bite that is so absurd that it makes the rest of us say, “Did he really say that?” Isn’t it long overdue that we honor the most Senseless Tweet, Utterance, Pronouncement or Idiotic Declaration, and hand out a weekly STUPID award?

Granted, it’s often a difficult choice. The STUPID competitors are tough and have a lot of experience. Not only President Donald Trump, who is in a class

The flu shot helps prevent influenza

It might also reduce your risk of developing Alzheimer’s Disease

The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) says it is particularly important this year that we get our flu shots this year because the coronavirus has put an unprecedented strain on America’s healthcare resources. As CDC epidemiologist Mark Thompson put it in a recent article published by NPR: “No year is a good year to get the flu, but this year – with COVID-19 also raging – it’s especially bad.”

Recalling the deadly outbreak of the Spanish Flu in 1918, the same article described the need to promote the flu vaccine this year as “arguably the most important U.S. effort to prevent influenza’s spread among Americans in a century.”

“Indeed, there is an extensive list of the benefits of flu shots, the newest of which is research that shows the flu vaccine and the pneumonia vaccine are linked to a reduced risk of Alzheimer’s Disease,” reports Rebecca Weber, CEO of the Association of Mature American Citizens (AMAC).

Weber explains that research reports presented at the Alzheimer’s Association International Conference recently show that flu shots may reduce the risk of the disease. She cites an Alzheimer’s Association news release that describes several separate studies.

One of the studies was conducted by a team led by researcher Albert Amran at the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston. They used a nationwide database of 9,000 individuals 60 years of age and older and found that those who had a flu shot had at least a 17% lower risk of Alzheimer’s.

Another study carried out at Duke University in Durham, North Carolina by Dr. Svetlana Ukraintseva found the Alzheimer’s risk for people between the ages of 65 and 75 who had been vaccinated against pneumonia was reduced by as much as 40%. That study was conducted among 5,146 participants.

The Alzheimer’s Association chief science officer, Dr. Maria Carrillo, noted that the research presented at the Association’s conference “calls for further studies in large, diverse clinical trials to inform whether vaccinations as a public health strategy decrease our risk for developing dementia as we age.”

No year is a good year to get the flu, but this year – with COVID-19 also raging – it’s especially bad.

The immortal Indianapolis

This summer marks the 75th anniversary of the worst disaster in the history of the United States Navy – the sinking of the USS Indianapolis.

Three hundred men died in the initial catastrophe on July 30, 1945, then the survivors cast into the sea suffered unimaginable horrors, abandoned for days without food or water in shark-infested waters.

As long as tales of the sea move human hearts, the story of the Indianapolis will shock and inspire.

She was a heavy cruiser, in between a larger battleship and smaller destroyer. Sleek, fast and elegant, she bristled with firepower – her 8-inch guns could fire a 250-pound shell 18 miles. Franklin Roosevelt made her his ship of state, and she became the flagship of the Navy's 5th Fleet.

During World War II, she saw significant action and suffered a debilitating kamikaze strike at Okinawa. Quickly repaired, she embarked on a secret mission to deliver components of the atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima. She then proceeded unaccompanied to Leyte in the Philippines.

A Japanese submarine stumbled upon her on a dark night. It fired six torpedoes, two of which struck the ship in quick succession right after midnight. The ship sank in 12 horrifying minutes.

Nine hundred men made it off, suddenly in the middle of the Philippine Sea at night with their home, their weapon, their mistress gone. Only about half had a life jacket or life vest. They were spread over miles. Many were wounded.

At first, they were hopeful about a rescue that didn't come for four excruciating days. The ship's SOS call was picked up at three places, but the message was ignored. A failure in the Navy's tracking system meant no one noticed when the Indianapolis didn't

NOTICE OF TAXPAYERS' RIGHT TO ELECTION TO REDUCE TAX RATE
If the district adopts a combined debt service, operation and maintenance, and contract tax rate that would result in the taxes on the average residence homestead increasing by more than eight percent, the qualified voters of the district by petition may require that an election be held to determine whether to reduce the operation and maintenance tax rate to the voter-approval tax rate under Section 49.23603, Water Code.

The 86th Texas Legislature modified the manner in which the voter-approval tax rate is calculated to limit the rate of growth of property taxes in the state.

Taxes Due on Average Residence	$ 1,011.72	$ 1,099.97
Increase (Decrease) in Taxes		$ 88.26

Under state law, the dollar amount of school taxes imposed on the residence homestead of a person 65 years of age or older or of the surviving spouse of such a person, if the surviving spouse was 55 years of age or older when the person died, may not be increased above the amount paid in the first year after the person turned 65, regardless of changes in the tax rate or property value.

Notice of Voter-Approval Rate: The highest tax rate the district can adopt before requiring voter approval at an election is $1.417268. This election will be automatically held if the district adopts a rate in excess of the voter-approval rate of $1.417268.

Fund Balances

The following estimated balances will remain at the end of the current fiscal year and are not encumbered with or by a corresponding debt obligation, less estimated funds necessary for operating the district before receipt of the first state aid payment:

Maintenance and Operations Fund Balance(s)	$ 60,076,446
Interest & Sinking Fund Balance(s)	$ 5,188,954

A school district may not increase the district's maintenance and operations tax rate to create a surplus in maintenance and operations tax revenue for the purpose of paying the district's debt service.

Students participating in SSSP also benefit from online services. Sebastian Arroyos who has been in the program for four semesters said the program has been extremely helpful and he is grateful for the assistance. “The tutors are magnificent; they help us out (the students) with any homework we may need help on. SSSP has been especially helpful now that EPCC transitioned to online courses,” Arroyos said. “The services given to the students are wonderful. Joining the Student Support Services Program is the greatest decision I have made while being in college.”

“I don’t know where I would be without all the wonderful help from SSSP,” said Cody Brady, a Team Academic Award is an expectation I have for my team. I have always understood that we work with student-athletes. Most of our girls will not play sports at the next level but most will study at the next level. Our job is to prepare them to have a chance to do both. While I do not talk directly with the girls about the recognition we do talk almost daily about getting it done in the classroom,” said Desrosiers.

The San Elizario ISD Board of Trustees honored the team at its recent regular meeting that was held online on Monday, August 10, 2020.

“Good students make good athletes. Time and time again I have seen the top ten graduates and the top ten percent consist of San Elizario student-athletes. Get your players to class and stay on top of their grades,” said Desrosiers.

show up at Leyte. Day by day, hundreds more men died.

During the day, the sun tortured them. The salt water weakened them. Thirst agonized them. Their life jackets began to give out.

They died of exposure and exhaustion. They died from the nightmarish attacks of circling sharks. They died from the terrible temptation of drinking salt water. They died from madness. They died from sheer despair, giving up and sinking beneath the waves.

Still, somehow, at the extreme edge of human endurance, 317 men survived when a plane on a surveillance mission finally came across them.

For Capt. Charles McVay, a new agony began. As the Indianapolis sank, he had considered going down with the ship before getting swept away by a wave. At first separated from his men, he had the horrifying thought that he alone might have survived.

The Navy court-martialed him for not having zigzagged to evade attack, even though his orders only made it mandatory during the day, even though the maneuver was of dubious effectiveness, even though the captain of the Japanese sub said he assuredly would have sunk the Indianapolis anyway.

There was a much stronger case that McVay had been let down by the Navy, since he wasn't apprised of reports of Japanese subs operating in his vicinity and the Navy, shockingly, lost track of his ship. Yet McVay was found guilty. A broken man, he took his own life in 1968, and the Navy didn't expunge his record of wrongdoing until 2001.

It's another tragedy associated with a ship whose drama, heartbreaking and astonishing, will never leave us.

McCarthy, Cowboys should enjoy a special season

By Steve Escajeda
Special to the Courier

After months of speculation and uneasiness, the National Football League opened its training camps last week.

Because of the pandemic, it was unclear whether the league would get off the ground this season.

Professional baseball, basketball and hockey have proved that sports could be played during these difficult times, though it hasn't always been easy.

But let's face it, while having those sports again has been nice, nothing compares to the popularity of the NFL.

No other sport in America even comes close.

And speaking of America, it wouldn't be professional football if we didn't take a close look at America's team, the Dallas Cowboys.

So if there really is going to be an NFL season, we might as well talk a little football.

Last season the Cowboys underachieved with a mediocre 8-8 record.

The Cowboys blew out every team they were supposed to, and lost almost every close game they played in almost every way imaginable.

So in my humble opinion, and I'm not alone on this, it mostly came down to coaching.

Don't get me wrong, in the "nice guy" department, I think Jason Garrett is a class act. But it takes more than a bunch of butt slaps to get players motivated and in the right position to win.

Enter new head coach Mike McCarthy, a no-nonsense take-charge leader who coached the Green Bay Packers to a Super Bowl victory.

And he's brought with him with a bunch of veteran assistants who know what the heck they are doing.

This all means that Dallas Cowboys fans aren't just happy we're having football this season, they just might have a legitimate Super Bowl contender to cheer for.

And maybe except for the defensive secondary, which isn't horrible, the Cowboys appear loaded at every position.

Let's start with quarterback. Though Dak Prescott spent the summer wondering whether his agent and the Cowboys could get together on a long-term deal, he'll be at the helm at least for this season and that's good news for the team.

A year ago, Prescott was second in the league in passing yards, fourth in touchdown passes and fourth in quarterback rating.

What Dallas has this season that they haven't had in several years is a talented backup in former Bengals starter Andy Dalton.

At running back, the Cowboys have one of the best in the league in Ezekiel Elliott. They also have a backup who could start for many other teams in Tony Pollard.

What Dak will especially enjoy this year is the number of quality receivers he can throw to.

Returning are 1,000-yard receivers Amari Cooper and Michael Gallup. The Cowboys also drafted the very talented CeeDee Lamb out of Oklahoma. And don't forget tight end Blake Jarwin, who is expected to have a breakout season.

And of course the Cowboys still have one of the best offensive lines in the league. They lost center Travis Frederick to retirement, but Zach Martin, Tyron Smith, La'el Collins and Joe Looney are there to cover the loss.

On defense, Dallas improved its line by adding run-stoppers Gerald McCoy and Dontari Poe, along with pass-rusher Everson Griffin, to join defensive end DeMarcus Lawrence.

At linebacker, the Cowboys are set with three of the best in the league, Sean Lee, Leighton Vander Esch and Jaylon Smith.

The only question here is that all three have a history of injuries. If they can all stay healthy, any of them could make the Pro Bowl.

As far as the secondary, Dallas did add veteran Ha Ha Clinton-Dix, along with drafting Trevon Diggs. But the Cowboys have a bunch of unproven young guys who are going to have to step up quickly. The best of the returners are probably Jourdan Lewis and Xavier Woods.

Dallas will have a solid veteran kicker in former Ram Greg Zuerlein, but return one of the worst punters in the league in Chris Jones.

Even with all this talent, the Cowboys' most important addition won't play a single down. McCarthy's experience, especially his decision-making late in games will prove to be the biggest adifference. And for the first time in a decade, the players won't have a "buddy" to lead them, they'll have a proven head coach.

providers, because our goal is to have them not wait beyond 30 days from the day, they request an appointment," she said. "So, with this center, we get to welcome veterans back into our own VA clinics."

Michael Amaral, director of the El Paso VA Healthcare System stated that the northwest facility is VA's first opportunity to expand the primary care capability in the El Paso market. He said that the new clinic is going to add three new primary care teams, when it becomes fully operational, which should give El Paso's VA healthcare system about 4,000 new patient capabilities.

According to officials, the new clinic will be able to offer area veterans a variety of services including physical therapy, prosthetics, audiology, mental health care, social work, women's health, lab, and telehealth.

The VA currently operates a 10,000-square-foot primary-care clinic inside the Hospitals of Providence East Campus' medical office building, at 2400 Trawood Drive in East El Paso.

It also operates a 12,500-square-foot primary-care clinic in Las Cruces, which is also part of the El Paso VA system. The Las Cruces clinic is located at 1635

A healthy diet includes omega-3 and omega-6

DEAR DR. ROACH: It seems that eating a healthy diet with an emphasis on nuts and seeds, fruits, vegetables and grains is the best choice for anyone.

It's been well-documented that omega-6 is inflammatory, whereas foods containing omega-3 are not. It seems to me that we should be consuming foods that have more omega-3 in them. The only problem is that, from my research, all nuts and seeds with the exception of chia and flaxseeds have a much higher ratio of the omega-6 to the omega-3. This appears to be the case with most foods, no matter which food group they are in. How can any of the healthy foods be beneficial when so much more of the "bad fats" are being ingested? – Anon.

Dietary fats are categorized into four groups: monounsaturated, polyunsaturated, saturated and trans-saturated. It is accepted that monounsaturated fats have a healthy effect, reducing heart disease risk, while trans-saturated fats are clearly harmful.

The effect of saturated fats on health is mixed, but those that come from processed meat increase heart disease and diabetes risk. Saturated fat overall has little effect on heart disease risk, but swapping saturated fat with unsaturated fats (both polyunsaturated and monounsaturated) appears to reduce heart disease risk.

Polyunsaturated fats are categorized into the omega-3 family and the omega-6 family. I also have read in many places that omega-6 fats are "bad fats," causing inflammation. The best evidence, a 2014 review of all controlled trials published, showed that omega-6 fats are NOT inflammatory and that they DECREASE risk of heart disease compared with meat-based saturated fats.

We should be consuming both omega-3 and omega-6 polyunsaturated fats, mostly from plant sources. The data support that nuts and seeds are foods we should be eating more of, but we also should be eating good sources of omega-3, including fatty fish, the chia and flaxseeds you mentioned, as well as walnuts and canola oil. Most people have to work harder to get omega-3 oils but get plenty of omega-6.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have recently started transitioning to a plant-based diet for preventative health reasons. While discussing the benefits of nuts and seeds with a dietitian, they had a disclaimer that flax seed can interfere with medications and to eat them two hours before or one hour after taking medications. I would not sit down and eat a handful of flax seeds, but now I am afraid to use them in the meals I prepare at all. Can you help me make a good decision in using them? – J.E.

For people eating reasonable amounts (like a handful or two) of flax seeds as part of a meal, it is unlikely that they would interfere with medications enough to cause any significant problem, for most medications.

There are two situations that might merit concern: In powerful anti-clotting agents, such as clopidogrel, flax seeds might prompt increased activity. Secondly, flax seeds may lower blood sugar a small amount. In combination with insulin or oral diabetes drugs, the blood sugar could possibly dip lower than expected. I doubt either of these interactions is likely to cause harm, but it is reasonable to discuss with your doctor if you are on one of the classes of medications mentioned.

S. Don Roser Drive.

The VA also moved last year most of its mental health services from its main medical center, located next to William Beaumont Army Medical Center, to the new Medical Center of the Americas (MCA) wellness center in south-central El Paso.

Additionally, plans are in the works for the VA to renovate two historic buildings inside Fort Bliss to provide nearly 13,000 square feet of administrative offices, Amaral stated. The VA will have a 50-year, no-cost lease on the buildings, he added.

Scam pharmacist sentenced

by Freddy Groves

Most of us are locked down due to the coronavirus, but apparently the wheels of justice keep on turning.

A few months ago I wrote about a Houston pharmacist, his wife and their pal who scammed the government out of $21 million in fake pharmacy orders. The guy and his wife have now been sentenced.

Their scam was to whip up medicinal creams and gels that they would mail to injured state and federal employees, then send the bill to the government after their pal created fake prescriptions. The Feds got them for a laundry list of charges, including conspiracy to commit health care fraud, conspiracy to pay and receive kickbacks, 11 counts of health care fraud and three counts of wire fraud dating back to 2009. Many government departments were involved, including the Department of Veterans Affairs.

The pharmacist, age 75, won't see daylight again for 10 years, and he has to pay back $12 million in cash and forfeiture. The wife, however, is somehow getting off light. She's 68 and has to pay back pay $950,000 in restitution and forfeiture, but will serve a mere 30 days in home confinement.

How does that work, one wonders. Due to the pandemic, nobody is going out. Thirty days at home doesn't seem like much punishment since we're all doing it anyway. She pleaded guilty to one charge. Does that play into it, that she admitted her role? And did he get 10 years because he argued against the charges and tried to pass off the medications he was sending out as marketing materials. Then again, maybe her portion of the "forfeiture" had to do with giving up that (very) upscale house in Houston.

Their accomplice is still on the lam. Anoop Kumar Chaturvedi, age 48, is a legal permanent resident from India. The government wants to find him. If you know where he is, call the Office of Inspector General of the U.S. Post Office at 1-888-877-7644.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.
